

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE.

JOHN DE GRANDISSON was the Seventeenth Bishop of Exeter.

He was born at Ashperton,¹ in Herefordshire, in the year 1292, and was the second son of William de Grandisson, who was, afterwards, summoned to Parliament, as a Baron of the Realm, from the 6th of February, 1299, to the 10th of October, 1325. His mother was Sibilla, second daughter and coheirress of John de Tregoz, Lord of Ewyas in the same County (who was, also, a Baron by Writ), and grand-daughter of Juliana de Cantilupe, sister of St. Thomas of Hereford and wife of Robert de Tregoz, who was slain in the battle of Evesham in 1265.

At an early age John was sent to the University of Paris, where he had the great advantage, as we learn from himself,² of studying Theology under the direction of a most eminent teacher, James Fournier, who, on the 20th of December, 1334, succeeded John XXII in the Papal Chair. And he must have begun his career as an Ecclesiastick at a very early age; for in the year 1309, when he was only seventeen years old, he was collated to the Prebend of Masham, in the Cathedral Church of York. He appears to have held this Benefice till the year 1315, when it was conferred on William de Ayremynne, afterwards Bishop of Norwich. On the 12th of October, 1310, he was collated by Archbishop William de Grenefelde to the Archdeaconry of Nottingham, and he held this Office till his Provision to the Bishoprick of Exeter. His brother Thomas, William de Grandisson's third son, was Prebendary of Heydore, in the Cathedral Church of Lincoln, and on his death, which occurred on the 14th of July, 1317, John succeeded him by Papal Provision. The Pope, also, provided him, in 1322, to the Prebend of Stoke in the same Church, in succession to Roger de Northburghe (who had been provided to the See of Coventry and Lichfield); but he retained this preferment only for a year.

As Chaplain to Pope John XXII, he resided, for some time, with his Patron at Avignon; to whom, as numerous references in his Register shews, he was greatly attached. The attachment, indeed, was mutual; and, although I have not been able to discover any distinct record to that effect, I think it can scarcely be doubted that when, on the death of Bishop Stapeldon, the Pope claimed the right of Provision to the vacant See, it was his intention to promote his friend. He yielded the point, reluctantly, when he heard of the Capitular Election of James de Berkeley; after whose brief

Episcopate, of only a few months, he provided Grandisson, without hesitation or delay. He, evidently, regarded him as a rising man, and was determined that he should rise; and, in the event, his high estimate of the young Clerick's powers and attainments was, certainly, fully justified. We know, too, that he had, already, shewn his entire confidence in Grandisson's zeal and prudence by associating him with the Archbishop of Vienne and the Bishop of Orange in an important Embassy for negotiating the Peace of Gascony; a full account of which will be found at the beginning of the Register.¹

Bishop Berkeley died on the 24th of June, 1327; and, although the Dean and Chapter of Exeter immediately obtained the Royal Licence, and elected John de Godeleghe, one of their number and Dean of Wells, as his successor, the Pope was not to be frustrated a second time. He wrote to Grandisson on the 10th of August, in cordial terms, providing him to the See, commanding him to accept the onerous Charge, and expressing a confident belief that his government of the Diocese would be abundantly fruitful, and that he would merit not only the approval and favour of the Apostolick See but the blessing of an eternal reward. He wrote, also, to the Ambassadors on the 28th, expressing his sorrow at hearing that the negotiations were not proceeding as prosperously as he desired, and exhorting them not to lose heart, but, trusting in the succour of the Prince of Peace, to persevere in their good work to the end. They were at St. Macaire when these letters reached them.

Grandisson was in his thirty-sixth year when he was consecrated,² in the Church of the Friars-Preachers at Avignon, on the 18th of October, 1327, by Peter, Cardinal Bishop of Palestrina (Præneste), in the presence of many Cardinals and other Prelates and Nobles.

He was immediately confronted with a grave difficulty, the circumstances of which and his method of dealing therewith he relates in full.³ It appears that, when he was preparing, with characteristick alacrity, to start for his distant Diocese, he was informed that it would be necessary for him to meet, forthwith, a heavy pecuniary Obligation, which he then heard of for the first time, in which, it was alleged, the See of Exeter had been involved in the year 1297 by the action of Bishop Thomas de Byttone, and subsequently by the action of Grandisson's immediate Predecessor, Bishop James de Berkeley, who was said to have renewed the Obligation in his own person. The amount was very large,—ten thousand florins for services rendered in the Papal Camera, and one thousand eight hundred florins on account of certain other like services; and the Bishop was informed that he must make himself personally responsible for the payment of the money! He was not, at that time, a rich man by any means; and he knew that he would have to meet, and at once, the unavoidable expenses connected with taking possession of his See. He was aware, too, that the Episcopal Manors were dilapidated¹ and unproductive, having fallen a prey to grasping and dishonest men, who had availed themselves of the confusions caused by the murder of Bishop Stapeldon and the very brief Episcopate of Bishop Berkeley, to enrich themselves at the expense of the Church. It was impossible for him to comply with the demand made upon him, and he resolved to resist it to the uttermost. He went at once to the Pope, his Friend and Patron, and begged him to intervene on his behalf. But he had to deal with others, who were not likely to be lenient. The College of Cardinals had to be consulted; and he was summoned by Cardinal Peter, the Treasurer of the College, to appear before him immediately, and make provision for the payment of the debt. He appeared accordingly, and said, at once, that he had not got the money, and could not pay; but he offered to pledge the third part of the taxed value of his See, for the gradual extinction of the debt; alleging that, by antient custom, such an arrangement was permitted in the case of those who were promoted to Bishopricks by the Apostolick See. But the Cardinal, Grandisson says plainly, denied him justice herein, and required him to submit absolutely; and some of the other Cardinals, astounded at his resistance and despairing of his success, advised him to give way. Nothing daunted, however, the Bishop sought, and obtained, a second and private interview with the Pope, to whom he related all the details of his hard case; submitting to him, also, a written statement of the more important points. He boldly accused the Cardinal of dealing with him harshly and in violation of his own conscience, and declared that he could prove that the demand rested on no solid foundation, as his Predecessors had not been promoted by the Apostolick See, but had been elected by the Dean and Chapter, and confirmed and consecrated by the Primate. The Pope took his part, commanding Cardinal Peter and the Archbishop of Arles to inspect the Registers of the "Camera," and to settle the matter amicably and in accordance with justice. Armed with this Mandate, Grandisson again appeared before the Cardinals, bringing with him ten trustworthy witnesses to prove the truth of his allegations; but he failed to secure an impartial hearing. The Cardinals quietly ignored the important point as to his Predecessors having been saddled with these charges unlawfully, seeing that they had been elected by the Dean and Chapter, and not promoted by Papal Provision; they were afraid, the Bishop says plainly, that the result of an honest examination of the records would be to convict them of falsehood ; so they examined the witnesses only as to the value of the revenues of the See, and subsequently Cardinal Peter, in the absence of his colleague, stated, in the Consistory, "with but little regard to truth," that they were found to be worth three thousand marks. Whereupon the Pope and the Cardinals, agreeing to adopt the unjust¹ proposals of Cardinal Peter, taxed the Bishop and the See of Exeter in the sum of five thousand florins, computed at the rate of five florins per mark ; and on the same day, the 9th of December, they required him to bind himself, on oath,² to pay the money (being the third part of the alleged Taxation-value) in moieties, the first on the 27th of March next following, and the second on that day year ; failing which he was to return, within four months, to the Curia, and remain there till the money should be paid in full. To this settlement he reluctantly bound himself and his Successors, on the security of the whole of the revenues of his See, under pain of Excommunication, Suspension, and Interdict, and Suspension from his Pontifical Office, if he should fail therein. He had done his best for his Diocese, and not without a large measure of success ; for the unjustifiable demand on account of the alleged liabilities of his Predecessors had been quietly dropped. The figures of the Taxation had been manipulated, and an unjustly heavy burden had, by that means, been laid upon himself personally ; but he had delivered his Church from a fictitious accumulated debt, and this, he tells us, was his chief care. His personal inconvenience was, in comparison, a trifling matter ; and he was content to suffer. But, as we shall see later on, the cruel exaction to which he was forced to submit was the cause of much trouble and anxiety, and must have hampered him seriously in his work. For the moment, however, he dismissed the whole painful subject from his mind ; and, having obtained divers Privileges and Indults from the Pope, copies of which he caused to be entered in his Register,³ he set out for England on the 23rd of December.⁴

The weather was most unpropitious, the roads being blocked with snow ; and it was not until the 3rd of February, 1327-8, that he was able to reach the sea-shore and cross to Dover. On the 5th he entered Canterbury,⁵ where he was received with the customary solemnities by the Prior and Chapter ; to whom he took the Oath of Canonical Obedience, the See being void by the death of Archbishop Reynolds on the 16th of November, 1327. On the following day he appointed Adam Murymouthe his Vicar-General ; and on the 10th, on learning that the King was holding his Parliament at York, he set out for the North. We find him at Bermondsey on the 17th, and at East Stoke, near Newark, on the 2nd of March, granting letters Dimissory at both places ; and on Sunday the 6th he reached his destination.¹ On the 7th he presented himself to the King, in the Chapel of St. Sepulchre adjacent to the Cathedral Church, and was graciously received immediately after the King had heard Mass. An appointment having been made for the 9th, he appeared on that day before the King and his Council, and presented his Letters of Provision to the See of Exeter. Having done this, he retired for a short time, while the King and the Council were considering their purport. When he was recalled, the Archbishop of York explained to him, on the King's behalf, the custom of the Realm in all such cases ; telling him that he was bound to renounce all words that might be prejudicial to the rights of the King and of the Realm, submitting himself to the King's grace therein. The Bishop replied that, saving his Profession made in the Roman Court, the rights of the Apostolick See, his own Episcopal Order, and the rights and dignity of his Church of Exeter, he was prepared to renounce all such words, in such manner as all Prelates promoted by the Pope had been accustomed to do, submitting himself absolutely to the King's grace as to the Temporalities of his See. Whereupon, the Temporalities having been, by word of mouth, restored, he did fealty² to the King, according to the custom of the Realm ;

² fecit Fidelitatem (fealty), not homagium. In Bishop Stapeldon's "Itinerary" (p. 547, note 4), I inadvertently wrote "He does Homage to the King," but the words used in the Register are "recepta Fidelitate ab eodem Electo" (p. 19). "Homage" was first demanded by Henry VIII, after he had assumed the Supreme Headship of the Church of England. It is true that Bishops sometimes did homage to the King before Henry's time, but not for the Temporalities of their Sees ; only when they held lands of the King in capite, in their own right, as if they were laymen.

It may be well, also, to explain the Act of Renunciation mentioned in the Text, which presents an obvious difficulty. It arose in this manner. When Pope Clement V appointed Walter de Jorze to the Archbishoprick of Armagh, it was stated, in the Letters directed to the King, that he had committed to him the Cure and Administration in Spirituals and Temporalis. The King's advisers, who were all Ecclesiasticks, took exception to the Pope's including the Temporalities, as the Publick Document drawn up on the occasion sets forth,—"Perpendit Dominus Rex memoratus ipsas Literas Apostolicas sibi et juri suo regio fore prejudiciales, eo maxime quod Dominus Papa committit per eandem eidem Fratri Waltero curam et administracionem Temporalium, que in manu Domini Regis tunc fuerunt, et de quibus ad ipsum Dominum Papam nichil omnino pertinuit." A form of words was, thereupon, drawn up to meet the case, which the Archbishop had no difficulty in accepting ; and on the 29th of September, 1307, he made the following declaration, in the King's Chamber within the Priory of Lenton, in the presence of the King, and of a Notary.

declaring, at the same time, that, in so doing, he did not intend to derogate, in any respect, his aforesaid Profession, or any of the aforesaid rights. The necessary formalities having been completed, the Bishop granted an annual pension of five marks to Hugh Bouzi, the King's Clerk, pending his promotion to an Ecclesiastical Benefice; and on the 10th of March he left York,¹ with his brother Peter, for his father's House at Oxenhall, near Gloucester, which he reached on the 24th, pausing on his way to reconcile the Church of St. Laurence in Walmegate, beyond the walls of the City. He remained with his parents till the 22nd of April, 1328, when he started for Northampton to attend the Parliament which was being held there. We find him at Banbury on the 27th,² and on the 28th at Hayford (near Northampton), which he made his head-quarters during the whole of his stay. He had been forced to attend this Parliament much against his will; his own entreaties to be spared, and those of his friends, availing nothing. Writing, from Hayford, to the Pope, he complained bitterly of the inconvenience to which he was put: his presence was useless; he took little or no part in the proceedings, and the expense was exces-

Publick and other witnesses,—“Ego, Frater Walterus, per Sanctissimum Patrem, Dominum Clementem, Divina clemencia Papam Quintum, in Archiepiscopum Ardmachanum prefectus, illi particule Literarum Apostolicarum de mea Promocione vobis, illustri Principi, Domino Edwardo, Dei gracia Regi Anglie et Domino Hibernie, directarum, in quibus michi ipse Pater prefatus Temporalium meum Archiepiscopatum spectancium curam et administracionem committit, et omnibus aliis ipsarum Literarum ac tenori, quatenus prejudicant, vel prejudicare poterunt, regio juri vestro, Corone, vel regie dignitati vestre, palam renuncio et expresse; ipsaque Temporalia predicta non virtute Literarum Apostolicarum, set ex vestra regia gracia, cui me submitto totaliter in hac parte, me fateor recepturum.” The next Prelate to make this Renunciation was John de Leeke, whom the Pope had provided to the Archbishoprick of Dublin in 1311. In the same year Walter Jorze resigned, and the Pope appointed Roland Jorze to succeed him: he was consecrated by the Bishop of Tusculum, and the Bull addressed to Edward II contains the words—“Curam et administracionem ipsius Ecclesie sibi in Spiritualibus et Temporalibus plenarie committendo.” See, also (p. 89), the Bull confirming the Election of Bishop Berkeley, in 1327,—“tibi concedentes ut administracionem ejusdem Ecclesie in Spiritualibus et Temporalibus, tam quo ad ea que sunt ordinis, quam quo ad illa que jurisdictionis existunt, libere exercere valeas.” It seems that there was no such clause in the earlier Bulls of Provision; but, when once adopted, the Roman Curia did not alter it; and, consequently, the above Declaration was put before every English and Irish Bishop who presented a Bull of Provision. The Crown was quite within its right in exacting it, and no Bishop refused to make it. All that was, really, meant by the clause in the Apostolick Letters was that the bestowal of a Bishoprick carried with it both the Spiritualities and the Temporalities, which, of course, was the case. And it will be seen how the difficulty was met by the King's advisers who drew up the Declaration, which was entirely confined to temporal matters. Every Bishop was sworn to maintain the Temporalities intact, in his oath of obedience to the Roman Pontiff, and every Bishop renounced every word which could be held to prejudice the civil rights of the Crown.

sive.¹ "When it is all over," he says, "I shall hasten to my Flock and Diocese; though the King, having caused my land to be sown during the vacancy, will be entitled to all the fruits thereof, and nothing will remain to me, after Michaelmas, except the Spiritualities and a few rents. Well, I shall have to live as if I were a spirit, and poorly enough, on that pittance. I do not doubt; nay, I am nearly sure, that, if I were to press the King, he would not refuse to help me; but my friends do not advise me to take such a course, because the King is, himself, in want of money, having quite recently succeeded to the Throne, and all men, whatever their rank may be, find themselves in difficulty at such a time; and, moreover, he is about to assert his hereditary right to the Kingdom of France, which will be a costly enterprise, and already subsidies have been demanded from the Clergy and People. I scarcely know, therefore, how I could ask him to surrender to me what is his due, seeing that he is, himself, compelled to seek aid from others."

On the 16th of May, having obtained permission from the King,² he left Northampton, reaching Oxford on the 17th and his Manor of Faringdon, Hants, on the 21st. There he held an Ordination, on the 28th, by Commission from the Bishop of the Diocese; and on the 30th he started for Exeter, resting at Winchester on his way. We find him at Salisbury on the 2nd of June and at Shaftesbury on the 4th; and on the 9th he entered his Diocese, putting up for the night at Honiton Rectory.³ Proceeding to his Manor of Clyst, near Exeter, on the following day, he was met on the road by the Dean, the Treasurer, the Subdean, and many of the Canons, who conducted him, with all due honour, to his House, where all partook of his hospitality. He remained at Clyst till the end of September, engaged chiefly in the inspection of his Manors in that neighbourhood,—Chudleigh, Paignton, and Crediton, and spending many days in his Palace at Exeter. On the 22nd of August (the Octave of the Assumption) he was enthroned⁴ in the Cathedral Church, according to the English Rite, without pomp or display; making his entry unattended, for he had not invited even his near relatives. Proceeding to visit the Church and the Chapter, he was peaceably and graciously received by all, though he had been led to expect opposition, especially on the part of the Dean, to whom he had written from Oxenhall,⁵ deprecating the hostile attitude which he had assumed, and warning him against the folly of being wise in his own eyes. There was only one opponent, an outsider in the Bishop's eyes, the Proctor of Hugh de Engolisma, Archdeacon of Canterbury, who stood at the door of the Cathedral and forbade the Bishop to enter unless he were willing to be enthroned by himself. But Grandisson had evidently come to rule, and he refused to submit to a claim which he denounced as "pestiferous." As to the fees and perquisites which the Archdeacon demanded as customary, the Bishop describes them, and certainly not without reason,¹ as "many in number, miscellaneous, and burdensome"; he absolutely refused to pay them, and the Proctor was fain to depart, threatening to appeal to the Pope. The Bishop held that, whatever might be customary in ordinary cases, the Archdeacon had no Canonical authority to intervene in the case of a Prelate who had been promoted by the Apostolick See, and consecrated, as he had been, by Papal Mandate at Avignon.²

When the Bishop entertained the Dean and Canons at Clyst, on his arrival in the Diocese, he availed himself of the opportunity to lay before them the serious difficulty in which he was involved by reason of the demands of the Court of Rome, and he consulted them as to the best way of raising the money. He told them that, although he had been able materially to reduce the amount of the claim, the sum for which he had been compelled to make himself responsible was very large; he felt bound, as it were, with bands of iron, and he did not see his way to raising the money unless he could obtain a generous measure of help from the Diocese at large. And, now, he entered on the arduous and distasteful task with characteristick energy. On the 1st of July he had written to the Archdeacon of Barnstaple, stating the case, and asking him to convene the Clergy within his jurisdiction, to consider the question of ways and means.³ On the 15th he issued a Mandate on the same subject, directed to the Heads of Religious Houses and to all Incumbents within the said Archdeaconry.⁴ This was followed, on the 24th of July, by similar letters addressed to the Dean and the Treasurer of the Cathedral, and the Archdeacons of Exeter, Totnes, and Cornwall⁵; and he wrote, separately, to the Dean and Chapter on the 25th, reminding them of what he had told them at Clyst on his first meeting with them, and entreating them to use their utmost exertions on his behalf, and all the more readily because they were well aware of the impoverished condition of the estates and revenues of the See, and of his utter inability to meet such a heavy claim within the narrow limits of the time appointed.¹ He wrote, also, on the 18th of August to the Abbat of Forde, asking him for a loan of £100 for one year, on good security ; and to Dean Godeleghe of Wells, and Robert de Haselshaue, both Canons of Exeter, asking for a contribution to his fund. He pleaded for his Church, which was suffering from his want of means, and begged them to behave as his good sons in a time of anxiety which was pressing on him sorely, and through no fault of his own, as God knew.² The Dean replied on the following day³ : he had assembled the Chapter, and they had carefully considered the matter. They saw clearly that the Bishop had incurred great losses by his self-sacrificing labours on behalf of his Church, and the consequent delay in leaving Avignon which had proved so costly to him, and they were well disposed to help him ; but they wished him to meet them in Chapter and hear what each of them had to say : this would involve a little loss of time ; but they hoped, as there could be no great danger in delay, that he would not take offence. The Religious Houses had, as yet, taken no notice of the Mandate of the 15th of July ; and on the 4th of August the Bishop wrote to them, in terms of reproach, complaining that, whereas the Dean and Chapter and the Incumbents of the Diocese, had promptly promised assistance, they had failed to justify his confident belief that they, of all others, would be the most anxious to come to his rescue.⁴ This Letter was sent round to all the Houses, in charge of John de Nassington, the Chancellor of the Diocese, and other clericks, who were instructed to explain the case fully and to press the Bishop's claim. The first answer was very discouraging.⁵ The Abbat of Forde wrote to say that his will was good but that it was out of his power to contribute ; the revenues of his House, he said, were not sufficient to cover even necessary expenses ; and they had costly works in hand, including the rebuilding of the Conventual Church, which was in a ruinous condition. Few, if any, of the promised contributions had been paid, and the Bishop was sorely pressed for money. On the 14th of August he wrote a pathetick Letter to the Vicar of Ottery-St. Mary,⁶ entreating him to lend him forty pounds for a year, and asking for an immediate answer : he was so poor that he could not meet his expenses, and his Church still lay prostrate in "the slime pit of perpetual servitude into which she had been cast down by the demands of the Court of Rome." It appears that the Chancellor had brought back favourable news from the Abbats and Priors whom he had visited¹; but both they and the Incumbents of the Diocese had been more ready to make promises than to fulfil them. The money was not coming in; and the date assigned for the final payment was drawing near. The Bishop was almost in despair: he had discovered, also, that many of the Clergy had kept out of the way when the Archdeacons cited them in their several Deaneries, and had avoided even the promise of help; so he issued a Mandate to the four Archdeacons, on the 25th of August, requiring them to cite all who were holding back to appear before his Commissaries, in Exeter, on the 15th of September, to hear a full statement of the Bishop's case, and to say, each of them separately, what they were willing to contribute. On the 27th he directed a special Mandate to the Archdeacon of Barnstaple, requiring him to attend to the business promptly, reminding him that he had a share in the Bishop's charge, and, as an Archdeacon, was called "the Bishop's eye."² Meanwhile he had been forced to borrow money, for his immediate wants, from John de Brutone³ and Roger de Charletone, Archdeacon of Totnes.⁴ On the 28th of September, Richard de Tuverton, Rector of Yarnscombe, was commissioned to admonish the Religious and the Beneficed Clergy within the Archdeaconry of Exeter, to pay their contributions before All Saints' Day⁵; and like Commissions were directed to William de Wolleghe, Vicar of Suttone, on the 5th of October, for the Archdeaconry of Totnes,⁶ and to the Prior of Launceston, on the 6th of December, for part of the Archdeaconry of Cornwall.⁷

² See his Letter to Engolisma, dated on the 16th of Aug. (p. 374).—Lord Courtenay, also, he mentions incidentally, had demanded, as of right, his palfrey, as well as all the silver vessels he might use at the Enthronization Feast, and any wine that might be left over, besides other intolerable exactions. But these demands, also, he was determined to resist to the uttermost, and he said that he would rather walk to the Cathedral and use vessels of wood or of glass than submit to such an imposition. See, too, the Archdeacon's letter of the 4th of September, in which he complains that never before had he, or his predecessors, been so treated by any Suffragan of the Province, as the Bishops of Worcester and Hereford were willing to testify on his behalf (p. 392); also, Grandisson's answer on the 12th (p. 396).

At last, the money began to flow into the impoverished exchequer, and the grateful Bishop acknowledges the receipt of each contribution as "liberal." On the 7th of January, 1328-9, Archdeacon Wydeslade sent him £43 from Barnstaple⁸; the Prior of Bodmin £54 3s. 4d. from certain Deaneries in Cornwall (in addition to 60s. already remitted through John de Nassington), on the 9th⁹; the Rector of Yarnscombe £53 15s. 3d. from the Archdeaconry of Exeter, on the 13th¹⁰; the Vicar of Suttone £46 4s. 8d. from the Archdeaconry of Totnes, on the 11th of February,¹¹ and a further sum of £40, paid through Sir John de Carminou, on the 14th.¹² On the 5th of May, 1329, Richard de Tuverton remitted an additional sum of 100s.,¹³ and on the 19th of June he paid in 8s. 8d. more.¹⁴ The Bishop must have been helped, also, by his relatives and friends, for he was ready with most of the money by the appointed time, and the details of the final payments and copies of the acquittances are duly recorded in his Register.¹ From one of his relatives, his cousin, Lord Courtenay, of Okehampton, he received, instead of the help and sympathy which he expected, an almost savage rebuff. He wrote to his cousin on the 24th of January, 1328-9, telling him of the debt to the Court of Rome, the time for the full payment of which was close at hand, and begging him to lend him £200 for a year, on any security he might be pleased to name.² The bearer was to wait for an answer, and a very unsatisfactory answer it proved to be.³ The writer informed the Bishop that, having been put to great expense lately on the marriage of his daughter Elizabeth, and in connection with the settlement of the affairs of his mother, recently deceased, he had no money to spare; and as to lending money to Bishops of Exeter, he had assisted the late Bishop, James de Berkeley, and saw very little prospect of the repayment of the loan. It would have been well if he had laid aside his pen at this point; but he was angry with Grandisson, and apparently jealous of him as a formidable rival amongst the magnates of the County. Your Clergy, he wrote, are complaining of you, all through your Diocese, on account of the heavy demand which you have made on their purses, the like of which no Bishop has ever attempted before. With a callous indifference to the hardness of the Bishop's position, he advised him to live within his means, and to render to all, both rich and poor, their due; taking care not to make himself too conspicuous, but devoting himself, as a Bishop ought, to comforting the souls of his people, ready to listen to all and not ready to give credence to every idle tale, but like a just judge, slow to pronounce judgement without taking counsel with others. It was not likely that a man of Grandisson's temperament, whose whole soul was devoted to the fulfilment of his duty, with a fervent desire to magnify not himself but his Office, would submit quietly to such a gratuitous onslaught as this; and he answered Courtenay's letter on the 27th, telling him his mind without restraint.⁴ As to the marriage of his daughter, and the business connected with his mother's Will, he sympathized with him entirely, and was ready to accept his excuses for his inability to help his Spiritual Father. But the charges brought against him so recklessly compelled him to speak plainly in self-defence. It was true that he had appealed to the whole Diocese for money, and that the response had been most generous. And it was possible that he was the first Bishop to do such a thing. But his cousin ought to be aware, for the facts were well known to all men, that never before had a Bishop, on entering his Diocese, found it so utterly wrecked and so heavily burdened with debt as he had found the

Diocese of Exeter, and that without any fault of his, as God knew. After all his hard work, for he had not spared himself in the matter, he had, so far, only succeeded in partially reducing the debt; and he felt strongly that all good sons of the Church were bound to help their Spiritual Father and Mother to the utmost of their power, as God commanded and reason dictated. As to the loan to Bishop James de Berkeley it might never be repaid in this world; but his cousin might hope to find treasure in Heaven, as the reward of his charity. As for himself, he had been called to his Charge as was Aaron; he was no mere intruder like the sons of Korah. As to the advice that he should endeavour to live within his means and economically, he had done nothing worthy of reproach, and he was persuaded that God, who giveth fodder unto the cattle and feedeth the young ravens that cry unto Him, would never fail his servant, but would give him food and raiment, than which he desired nothing more in this world. As to the suggestion that he should do justly and show favour to rich and poor alike, he thanked his cousin from his heart for such good advice, and he hoped that, in this matter also, God's grace would be sufficient for him. The latter part of Courtenay's Letter the Bishop evidently regarded as especially impertinent, and he told his cousin plainly that the children of God and Holy Church had neither the right nor the power to judge their Spiritual Fathers and Masters. It might be that he made himself "singular," but he thought that, after all, it might be pleasing to God and the Virgin, who was herself "singulere," that he should be this, rather than "double"—a double-minded man, like the children of this world. He had not forgotten the advice which Jethro gave to Moses, and he would deal accordingly with the people committed to his charge. He was yet young, no doubt; but, nevertheless, he felt sure that he would be at no loss to render a reason for all his actions on all proper occasions. He had been brought up in the School of Clerks and Prelates, and he did not see his way to go to school again elsewhere: how could a Prelate be expected to go to school to a Knight, when St. Paul had said that "he that is Spiritual judgeth all things, and he himself is judged of no man!"

A day or two later, he wrote, also, to the Lady Agnes, Lord Courtenay's wife,¹ informing her that he wished her to hear, from himself, that he had asked her husband for a loan, though she probably knew all about it already. Courtenay had refused his help, and had given sufficient reasons for his refusal. He had not, however, confined himself to making excuses, but had indulged in remarks which it was painful to read, for they shewed that the writer was wise in his own conceits, and justified the French proverb—that there is never a fool who does not think himself a wise man! The Bishop could not reproach himself; he would prove that in life and in death he is her husband's Bishop and Father in God; and all would be well if Courtenay would follow his own advice, and indulge no more in harsh judgements and evil speaking.

While all this troublesome and disturbing business was in hand, the Bishop was diligently engaged in the general work of his Diocese. We must retrace our steps, that we may follow him.

Remaining, as we have seen, at Clyst, and in the immediate neighbourhood, till the 30th of September, 1328, he proceeded, on the 2nd of October, to visit several of the Religious Houses in Devonshire. He reached Buckfast Abbey¹ on that day, and on the 3rd we find him at Modbury Priory,² on the 4th at Plympton,² on the 6th at Buckland Abbey,³ and on the 7th at Tavistock,³ where he spent three days; crossing the Tamar to Stoke-Climsland in Cornwall on the 10th.⁴ From thence he went, on the same day, to Lawhitton, his Manor near Launceston, where he remained for a few hours only⁵; for on the 11th we find him at St. Ive, where he had to deal with a case of divorce, and with the recalcitrant parishioners of Liskeard who had refused to pay the procurations due on the Reconciliation of their Churchyard early in August.⁶ On the 13th he commenced, in earnest, his first Visitation of Cornwall, mainly with a view to inspecting the Episcopal estates and property, beginning at Launceston (see p. 95)⁷; from whence he passed, by way of Southill,⁸ to his Manor of Cotynbeke, close to St. German's Priory. He spent about a week there, engaged, of course, in dealing with the dilapidations and making arrangements for the future well-being of the estate. Peculation had been going on there on a large scale; and Stephen and Baldwin Crabbe, John de Dessere, and John le Hyne, of Devyoke, who refused to make restitution, were excommunicated. Stephen Crabbe was absolved, on his submission, on the 26th.⁹ On the 22nd we find him at Menhenyot, and on the same day at Trenuth,¹⁰ a seat of the antient Family of Bray, a name which occurs frequently in the Registers. He appears to have spent the night there, arriving at Bodmin on the 23rd.¹¹ On the 24th he visited the Priory, "not by way of a formal Visitation, though he had issued his Mandate to that effect, but desiring, with the help of God, to deal with everything needing correction, quietly and peaceably." He evidently found the state of things worse than he had expected ; for the administration had broken down altogether, and the goods of the House had been grievously wasted by the carelessness and negligence of the bailiffs and other officials. And a few days later, at Tywardreath, on the 11th of November, he commissioned Ralph de Lampil, Rector of Withiel, and William Bagge, one of the Canons, to assist the Prior in the management ; they were required to deal with all debts and credits, and to clear out all useless servants and officers, substituting competent and honest men in their room ; doing their best to recover the revenues which had been dispersed and squandered.¹ The Bishop, now, turned his attention to his other Manors in Cornwall, reaching Poutone, in St. Breoke,² on the 25th, Lanner, in St. Allen,³ on the 30th, and Penryn⁴ on November the first, where he visited the College of Glasney, on the outskirts of the town. On the 4th we find him at the Priory of St. Michael's Mount, where he took in hand the case of the Collegiate Church of St. Buryan, which had given so much trouble to his predecessor, Bishop Stapeldon, and, even already, to himself also.⁵ Claiming to be exempt on the ground that their Church was a Royal Peculiar, and ignoring the concessions which Stapeldon had obtained from the Crown, the Dean and Prebendaries had defied Bishop Grandisson, declining to receive him, and even laying violent hands on Richard de Belloprato,⁶ who appears to have been sent forward to announce the Bishop's approach ; polluting their churchyard with his blood. It was necessary, of course, to deal severely with the perpetrators of such outrages, and, accordingly, the Bishop solemnly excommunicated the offenders, the chief of whom he denounced by name. This measure had the desired effect, at any rate as far as the more influential parishioners were concerned ; and on the following day eighteen of them (whose names are duly recorded) presented themselves before the Bishop and acknowledged his jurisdiction, confessing that they had sinned in siding with the rebels, and, on taking an oath never again to rebel against the Bishop's authority, they were absolved. On the same day the Bishop proceeded to St. Gwennap⁷ and reconciled the churchyard there, and on the 6th to Truro, where he dedicated the High Altar in St. Mary's Church.⁷ After resting for a day or two at his Manor of Lanner (which was within an easy distance of Truro), he visited the Priory of Tywardreath⁸ on the 11th, crossing the County on the 12th to Lanteglos-by-Camelford, from whence he journeyed, by way of Morton, near Stratton, to Hartland Abbey,⁹ having abandoned the Visitation of the Collegiate Church of St. Crantock, which he had fixed for the 14th. He was at Bideford⁹ on the 16th, at Bishop's Tawton¹ on the 18th, at Bishop's Nympton on the 22nd, at Morchard-Bishop² on the 24th. There were many things to set in order at each of the three Manors; at Nympton especially where he received the submission of Thomas Flemyng, Rector of Southmolton, who had been excommunicated for trespassing on the park, as soon as he heard of Bishop Stapeldon's death and thought he could do so with impunity, taking his hounds with him and slaughtering and carrying off two hundred head of deer, etc.; and, not content with that, entering on the premises of the Manor-House and taking possession of a large amount of the property of the deceased Bishop, including cattle, vessels of lead and of wood, carts and benches, and many other like things. We are told that the Bishop charged him with these offences viva voce, and then handed him a written list of them. Fleming did not deny that he had committed the outrages, and, on promising to make restitution by payment of a hundred marks, he was absolved.³

⁵ While he was there he wrote in more conciliatory terms than he had used previously to the Archdeacon of Canterbury, informing him that William de Nassington, his proctor in the Parliament at Salisbury, would seek an interview with him, to talk matters over and report (p. 409).

The Bishop remained at Exeter, and in the neighbourhood, till the beginning of March, 1329-30, engaged chiefly, no doubt, in the great work of rebuilding the Nave of the Cathedral, which now demanded his earnest attention and care. The entries in his Register during this period are concerned with the ordinary routine of Diocesan work, with a few noteworthy exceptions.

On the 18th of December, 1328, being the Sunday next after the Feast of St. Lucy the Virgin, he dedicated the High Altar in the Choir of the Cathedral Church—Stapeldon's magnificent "Silver Altar"—in honour of the most Blessed and ever Virgin Mother of God, and of the Blessed Apostles Peter and Paul, commending it to their guardianship, and granting an Indulgence of forty days to all who, being in a state of grace, assisted at the ceremony.⁴

To this period must be attributed the very interesting undated Letter to the Pope, his patron,⁵ which I have already quoted for the account of his Enthronization, and the dispute with the Archdeacon of Canterbury, proceedings which, he says, interfered with the scheme of work which he had laid down, and compelled him to postpone for a time his General Visitation of the Diocese. He found it necessary, he wrote, to go into Cornwall as soon as possible, in order to visit and inspect his Manors in that County, a journey the details of which I have set forth above. And he gives the Pope a curious account of his first impressions of the County and its inhabitants. He describes it as a foreign land, adjoining England only along its Eastern boundary, being surrounded on every other side by the sea, which divides it from Wales and Ireland on the North. On the South, he adds, it looks towards Gascony and Brittany; and the Cornish speak the language of those Lands. In the far West, beyond St. Michael's Mount, it overlooks the boundless expanse of the Ocean. His Diocese, he found, included a group of islands—the Scilly Isles—on which his Predecessors had never set foot, contenting themselves with sending certain Brothers thither, to look after the islanders,¹ but he had not himself, as yet, done even so much as that. As for his Manors² he had found them ruined and stripped bare; the land was sterile and uncultivated; the very cattle had been taken away, and nothing remained to sow the fields withal. A few paltry rents had come in; but he was obliged to buy the very necessaries of life, and there was an enormous expense before him for repairs. It grieved him exceedingly to be compelled to write in such a strain as this, and as if he had no gratitude, to one who had treated him generously, far beyond his deserts.

He wrote, at the same time, to certain Cardinals,³ his friends, telling them that, on account of his isolated position, they would probably hear little of him, or he of them, for a long time to come. I am not only set down, he tells them, in the ends of the earth, but in the very end of the ends thereof. My Diocese, which embraces Devon and Cornwall, is separated from all the rest of England, and, except on one side only, surrounded by seas so tempestuous that they can scarcely be called navigable. The people of Cornwall speak in a tongue which is unknown to the English, and only known to Bretons. The wines of Gascony, indeed, find their way thither, and flesh-meat is fairly abundant; but there is scarcely any corn in the County, or anything else for the use of mortals. To his friend, Cardinal Orsini,⁴ who had written to ask how he fared, he writes in a more hopeful strain. He was grateful to find that, although he was removed so far out of sight, he had not been altogether forgotten. He was well and happy; for there was at least this comfort in his isolation, that he was far removed from the pressure of the populace; and, if he was unable to take his place among the Nobles of the Land, he was, at any rate, free from their incursions, and could not be shaken by the storms of life; he was spending his days, as it were, in the bosom of Abraham.

His position, however, was one of great and increasing difficulty; and we find him writing to the Pope⁵ on the 22nd of February, 1328-9, to tell him that, if he could have foreseen what he had to endure daily at the hands of the wonderful people who inhabited this remote corner of the world, he would have entreated that someone more fitted for such work than he could ever be might have been sent to them,—words which must have been written in a moment of despair; but he was a man of dauntless spirit, as, indeed, his next words shew,—“nevertheless, I am striving, God approving and you commanding, to do my duty, according to my poor powers and slender attainments, relying on your prayers and timely succour.” And, in the end, he was not without his reward.

He refers, also, in these Letters, to other matters of great importance, which demanded his immediate attention. In the first of them¹ he tells the Pope that his Cathedral Church was in course of rebuilding, and had been about half finished by his Predecessors. He had recently dedicated the High Altar, and he longed to provide for the resumption of the work; for it was an exceedingly beautiful Church, and destined to exceed in glory all other Churches of its class in England or in France, if only it could be completed and brought to perfection. Alas, a rich Bishop had been succeeded by one who was poverty-stricken; and he did not see how anything could be done for a long time to come, unless the Pope could help him. He wrote to the same effect to the Cardinals.² Nevertheless, with his usual energy, he set to work almost immediately; and, following loyally and wisely the lines which had been laid down by Bishops Byttone and Quivil, on which Bishop Stapeldon, also, had been prepared to work (thus securing a marvellous unity of design throughout the Church, scarcely affected at all by the changes of style which had taken place everywhere in the interval), he was able to complete the magnificent Nave, as we see it to-day, more than ten years before his death. Unfortunately, we know very little as to the details of the progress of the work; for the records are all but silent, and even the famous Fabrick-Rolls fail us: they are nearly continuous, indeed, throughout the period; but the details, which we have found so valuable hitherto, are no longer given, and we find little more than a record of the weekly payments made to the workmen. The lack of funds did not turn out to be so serious a matter as Grandisson had anticipated; money soon came in from several quarters, and especially from the Executors of Bishop Stapeldon. He saw his way to begin; but he was disturbed by the fear that he might not be able, miserably poor as he then was, to finish so vast a work. There still remained in hand the greater part of Stapeldon's final gift of a thousand marks, and a large quantity of marble and other stone, as well as timber in abundance, which that Bishop was engaged in accumulating when he was so cruelly murdered. Much of it had not been paid for, but remained as a charge on the available funds; and there were other arrears, for £92 3s. had to be paid, in 1328, to William Canon, of Corfe, for marble. Grandisson, himself, gave, or collected from his friends, £60 (more than £1200 of our money), and by 1330 there was a good working balance in hand, and the great undertaking had been fairly started.

It must be remembered that the Norman Nave, begun by Bishop William de Warelwast and completed by Bishop Henry Marshall before 1206, was still standing, with the exception of the eastern bay, which had been rebuilt by Bishop Quivil. It was at this point that Grandisson took up the work ; and it made such rapid progress that by the end of 1334 the great piers of the Nave arcades were in their places. We learn this fact from an important memorandum attached to the Fabrick-Roll of 1331-2, the date (21 Jan.) of the first reckoning for the work in question with William Canon, but dated 9 September, 1334, on the completion of the transaction. The contract was for eleven and a half great columns, to wit, the ten columns west of Quivil's work, and the two responds—equal to one column—at the West End ; the half-column being, as Archdeacon Freeman has shown, divisible in like manner for two quarter-columns required for the aisles, where we see them to-day, at the north-east and south-east angles. The cost of the whole was £124 4s. There were, also, included sixty groups of small columns for the triforia, and twenty-nine columns for the cloister, bringing the total cost of this work up to £140 5s. 9d., or nearly £3,000 of our money. Canon was bound to repair all damaged stones and make good all defects, and he had done so. The arches, of course, had not then been built. It has been supposed by some antiquaries, and notably by Archdeacon Freeman, that Grandisson reconstructed the Norman Nave, without taking it down ; but I am bold to say that I cannot accept this theory. The Norman work at Winchester, and elsewhere, lent itself easily to reconstruction in the "Perpendicular" style ; but it is impossible to believe that Grandisson's "Decorated" work is the result of a similar transformation. He retained as much as he could of the external walls, the walls, I mean, of the aisles¹ and the west wall ; but by the time he had substituted for the narrow Norman windows the large windows which we see to-day, there would not have been very much of those walls left. Of course, the arches of the Nave arcades cannot be regarded as reconstructions of the old arches, which must have been on entirely different lines, being semi-circular and narrower, and springing of necessity from a higher level than the present arches. The Norman roof may have been of wood; but if it was vaulted in stone, it must have been taken down; for the present magnificent vaulting, obviously a new and complete work from end to end, cannot be the result of a transformation of a roof built by Marshall. Nothing would remain after the rebuilding of the arcades and the removal of the Norman vaulting except such fragments of the clerestory walls as might have been spared when the present great windows were inserted, and there could have been no such "fragments" even; for there is no triforium in the ordinary sense of the word. There is a quasi-triforium, indeed, but there is no passage behind it. The passage is above it, carried through the said "fragments," and protected by a beautiful pierced parapet where it crosses the clerestory windows. This fact alone suffices to demolish the reconstruction theory. I may mention here that the great architect sloped the roofs of his aisles inwards, instead of outwards as was usual, in order that his clerestory windows might fall in with this necessary arrangement. From every point of view, therefore, I cannot but regard the reconstruction theory as absolutely incredible. Grandisson would not have wasted money and risked the lives of the workmen on a scheme which would not have been worth the cost and trouble even if it had been practicable. That he never even made the attempt is proved by the fact that his bays do not correspond with the bays of the structure which he superseded.

It was supposed, for a long time, that Grandisson lengthened the Church considerably at the west end, a theory which may, probably, be traced to a statement by Leland, who wrote,¹ about two centuries after these great works were carried out, to the effect that the Bishop "enlargid the west part of the Chirche, making vij archis, wher afore the plot was made out of v." Evidently, as Archdeacon Freeman points out, the historian had seen the contract with William Canon, and had misunderstood it: he did not know that Quivil rebuilt the eastern bay, which included four piers. Dr. Oliver, in his History of the Cathedral,² falls into the same error. But the Fabrick-Roll of 1329-30 shews that one of the first things that Grandisson did was to rebuild the Chapel of St. Radegunde "juxta fontem," which he designed for his own last resting-place; and it is actually in part contained within the west wall. This was evidence enough for Archdeacon Freeman; and that he was fully justified in his contention has, quite recently, been abundantly proved in the course of a careful investigation of the structure. I am indebted to Canon Edmonds, who took the greatest interest in this investigation, watching its progress from day to day, for the following interesting account of the work and its results:—"The great west window is an insertion into an older wall: a large square of masonry [indicating exactly what was taken away to make room for the new window] is composed entirely of Beer stone, the rest of the wall being almost wholly constructed of Salcombe stone. Salcombe stone is, in our Cathedral, the note of the Twelfth Century; Beer stone of the Fourteenth. No one doubts that the window [a magnificent specimen of the style known as "Decorated"], is Grandisson's work; but above it, and below it, and on both sides of it, the substance of the wall is of Salcombe stone. The Bishop's work below the west window has been partly hidden and partly cut back to make room for the great Screen, with its sculptured figures of Kings and Bishops, erected, apparently, in Bishop Brantingham's time; and the Chapel of St. Radegunde, the eastern portion of which is embedded in the west wall, was cut back for the same purpose; it once projected into the Cathedral-Yard. On the left hand of the north-west door four ashlar stones were removed, revealing the fact that there, also, some projecting Chapel, or other building, had been cut back; and enough of the masonry was removed to expose to view the Fourteenth Century mouldings as Grandisson must have left them. Models of these mouldings were taken, and also of the part of the sill and splay of the window which were cut through at the same time; and they may be seen in the adjacent Chapel of St. Edmund—the Consistory Court. It may be regarded as certain that neither decay nor discontent with the beauty of Grandisson's work could have led to these changes so soon after his time; but, probably, at Exeter, as at Peterborough, it was found necessary to strengthen the west wall; and against it a mass of masonry was built by way of an effectual buttress, to secure the safety of the building. The Screen was designed to veil this; and it will be allowed that, for beauty and dignity, it is worthy of the building which it supports and adorns."

From the Roll of 1352-3, the last remaining of Grandisson's time,¹ we learn that "the new work, opposite the great Cross" was then commenced. It cost a little over £46; and Archdeacon Freeman has shewn conclusively that the entry must refer to "the far-famed and unrivalled Minstrel's Gallery," which was "evidently an after-thought," as it is clearly an addition to the previously completed work. We may, therefore, conclude safely, in the absence of all actual record of the fact, that the rebuilding of the Nave was finished before 1353, and "probably," as the Archdeacon says, "some little time before." In 1338 oak was required for, we cannot doubt, the construction of the roof above the vaulting; and on the 5th of July in that year the Bishop ordered the Bailiff and Provost of Chudleigh to send to Exeter, for the purpose, twelve oak trees from his Park.¹ The Rolls shew that the heavy annual expenditure which had gone on uninterruptedly from 1325, in Stapeldon's time, till 1342, fell suddenly to a comparatively trifling outlay after the latter year, nothing being then in hand but minor works and finishing touches,—the extension of the cloister, the completion of the western entrances, and the like. Money was wanted for these purposes in 1349-50, and the Roll of that year records that a writer was employed to make eight hundred copies of an Indulgence, "for the fabrick of the Church." Soon afterwards we find that preparations were obviously in progress for what we should, now-a-days, call the reopening of the Nave. One John Bellringer was employed "to cleanse all the images over the High Altar;" new mats were provided for the Chapter-House; the bells, including the bell called "Grandisson" and the "Peter-Bell" were put in order; the windows of St. Radegunde's Chapel were glazed and fitted with iron bars; three stone steps were laid at the great doorway, and the pavement at the entrance to the Choir was repaired; the herb-garden within the Cloister was weeded; the chamber (over the north porch) called "le Holdechaker" was cleansed,—a process which might have been repeated with advantage in more recent years; and the windows, which had been glazed with plain glass were painted with a preparation of clay and chalk, to subdue the glare, no less than three hundred barrow-loads of chalky earth (argillum) being used in the process; new forms were also provided in the Choir, fitted with lockers for the service-books. And then, as I have said, the Rolls cease entirely for the rest of Grandisson's Episcopate, from 1353 to 1371, when they were re-commenced under Bishop Brantingham. We cannot be doubtful for a moment as to the significance of all this; the Nave was completed and ready to be restored to its sacred use.

Was it re-consecrated? Freeman takes it for granted that it was; and he seems to have satisfied himself that the ceremony took place in 1351, on one of the Feasts of St. Peter, viz., on the 18th of January, or the 29th of June, or the 1st of August. And the writer of the brief sketch of the Bishop's Life in the Dictionary of National Biography tells us² that the Bishop "lived to complete the Nave of the Church, and probably consecrated it on 21 Nov.,³ 1367"! Not a particle of evidence exists for either of these statements. The former rests, mainly, on the preparations for resumed use of the fabrick detailed above, and the latter on the absurd misunderstanding of the Roll of 1353, which betrayed even Oliver into supposing that the rebuilding, which was commenced immediately after Grandisson's accession, and continued year by year till all the work was done, had actually been suspended altogether for some five and twenty years after the death of Bishop Stapeldon. The Nave was not enlarged in any direction and its outer walls, including the whole of the west wall, were retained. It did not need Re-consecration: and as it had not been "polluted," neither did it need Reconciliation.¹ There is no record in the Register, or elsewhere, that Grandisson performed either of these Ceremonies: on the other hand, as we have seen, he dedicated the High Altar, because it was an entirely new structure; and this is duly recorded.

After this digression I return to the Letter which the Bishop addressed to Pope John at the beginning of his Episcopate. He had encountered many difficulties as to which he desired the advice and assistance of the Pope.² The familiar relations, he says, which had existed so long between Bishop Stapeldon and the late King had resulted in a legacy of heavy trials for his successor in the See; suspicion and hatred were rife on every side, and amongst other results of the late Bishop's cruel murder must be included the loss of the bulk of the Privileges, Charters, and other muniments of the Church. He was doing all he could to meet the mischief, and did not despair of success if the Pope would help him. He was anxious, also, about his rights in connection with the Collegiate Church of Bosham—one of the King's Free Chapels,—of which the Bishops of Exeter were Ordinaries ex officio. There had been much trouble, in times past, between his Predecessors and the Bishops of Chichester, who were unwilling to recognize this imperium in imperio; and, as the controversy remained unsettled, he earnestly intreated the Pope to intervene.¹ Again, while he was “labouring, with all zeal, in the Vineyard of the Lord of Hosts, in his remote corner of England,” the Court of Canterbury was still pursuing him with its Inhibitions, Citations, and Complaints, based on certain “musty, uncertain, and doubtful customs,” contrary to all law, so that it was out of his power to devote himself as he desired to the care of the churches and the salvation of souls; and he begged the Pope to protect him. And there was another matter² as to which he hesitated to trouble the Pope, though he felt strongly that he was bound to reveal the diseases which affected his flock to their chief Pastor and Physician. “I speak the truth in God, I lie not,” he wrote, referring to Robert Bonus, Abbat of Tavistock; “but this man, a native of Aquitaine, promoted by your Holiness³ through the deceit of others, has shewn himself to be utterly irreligious and a despiser of the worship of God from the first day of his arrival amongst us; worrying his Monks with base charges and insults, and provoking the Nobles and all others in his neighbourhood, so that he is hated of all men, and will bring destruction to his House, and to himself also, through his furious madness, if he cannot be effectually checked.” The Bishop, out of consideration for the Pope (as Patron of Bonus), and “de Peragrna, de Garvo, and de Mota,” who had recommended him,⁴ had dealt very gently with the offender, resorting at first even to blandishments, and then visiting him in an informal way, and trying to mediate between him and his Convent; finally threatening him with the vengeance of God and of the Pope; but all, so far, without any result. “Nevertheless,” the Bishop adds, “I will do what in me lies to bring him to a better mind, as long as it may be found possible to tolerate such a man.” He refers also in the same letter to the heavy burden of debt which had been laid upon him by the Curia,⁴ expressing a hope that, with the help of his Flock, he might be able to pay it off by the appointed time. And he wrote to William de Laudun, now Archbishop of Toulouse, asking him to bear with him if he postponed, till the Feast of the Assumption, repayment of the 500 florins kindly lent to him, in his distress, at Avignon.⁵

As I have said, the Bishop remained in the neighbourhood of Exeter, and chiefly at Chudleigh (his favourite residence, and destined to be his head-quarters throughout his Episcopate), from November, 1328, till the beginning of March, 1329-30. He visited the Cathedral, as we have seen, after his Enthronization; and that it was far from being a merely formal Visitation is shewn by the "Decrees" which he sent to the Dean and Chapter on the 19th of December. He had discovered that the confusion consequent on the death of Bishop Stapeldon, which had grievously affected the Diocese at large, had found its way into the Mother-Church itself.¹ There had been a serious relaxation of discipline. Some of the Canons, greedy of filthy lucre, could only be regarded as mercenaries,—he was tempted to call them robbers. Their so-called Residence was a mere farce; for they spent their time on their private business, or in amusing themselves in the chace; and when, at rare intervals and reluctantly, they took their places in the Choir, they could not behave themselves even there with decency, but indulged in idle chattering, the Canons and the inferior Ministers alike, not shewing the least reverence and devotion even during the celebration of the Holy Mysteries, and rattling through the Canonical Hours, talking to one another the while, and frequently going out of the Church before the Office was finished. Moreover, they wholly neglected the hospitality to which they were bound, seeking their own, not the things which are Jesus Christ's; claiming their share, as if they had earned it, in the daily distribution and the quarterly division, thus defrauding their Brethren, and even the very boys of the Choir, of their due. And so, as the Bishop adds, the worship of God, the devotion of the people, and the honour of the Church were being destroyed, and a grievous scandal occasioned. He told them that it was impossible for him to pass over in silence such flagrant transgressions as these, and he called on the Dean to provide a remedy immediately. The Canons and their Vicars were to be compelled to do their duty, no longer preying upon the goods of the Church while their services were either withheld, or performed with shameless irreverence. Hurrying through the Sacred Offices could no longer be tolerated. In chanting the Psalms they were to observe the necessary pauses in the middle and at the end of every verse; and in singing the Antiphons, Hymns, and Responses they were to keep together, instead of jumbling the sentences one upon the other; for which end the Dean was required to see that all the books in use corresponded exactly both as to the notation and the text. Unless this Mandate were obeyed a fine of ten pounds, in aid of the Fabrick-Fund, would be imposed; and the Dean was cited to appear before the Bishop, in the Chapter House, or in the Cathedral Church, on the Juridical day next before the Feast of St. Peter in Cathedra, to shew cause why they should not be mulcted accordingly. As so many others in the Diocese had done, the Dean saw, at once, that Grandisson had, indeed, come to rule, and that within the Cathedral as well as outside, and that it would be dangerous to trifle with him; and on the 20th of February he certified the Bishop, that he was obeying him in this matter, day by day, and would always obey him to the uttermost of his power.¹

While this important business was in hand, the Bishop was summoned to London, to take part in a Provincial Council about to be opened in St. Paul's Cathedral on the 27th of January.² The Mandate reached him, at Chudleigh, on the 22nd of December; and on the 18th of January he wrote to the Archbishop, informing him that he had cited all who were expected to attend from his Diocese. He sent a list of their names, and enclosed a copy of the Gravamina which his Clergy desired to submit to the Council. These were three in number, and referred to the tyranny of certain Lords in the Diocese who had deprived their nativi of their antient right to dispose of their property by Will, the encroachments of the Secular Judges on the Privileges of the Clergy, and the abuse of the right of Appeal to the Court of Canterbury on the part of many who, in that way, sought to escape from the Ecclesiastical censures and punishments which they had incurred by their misdeeds. He wrote, also, privately to the Archbishop, telling him that he could not appear in person, and chiefly because the Council was to meet in London. The blood of the murdered Stapeldon still cried to Heaven for vengeance; and the lay-folk, their degenerate sons, had compelled their Bishops (so he had been told) to swear that they would take no steps in the matter, and would allow the murderers to escape with impunity. The mob was on their side, and universal chaos prevailed. The magnates of the City had made a show of endeavouring to restrain the madness of the people, but it was notorious that they were as guilty as the rest. He knew that, in due time, the Angel of the Lord would put a bit into their mouths; but, meanwhile, he did not see his way to mount either horse or mule that hath no understanding. The citizens³ had already torn his London House in pieces, and carried off all its contents; and he felt that it would be better that he should remain in the safe solitude of the glades of Chudleigh. It was a private Letter; but it might be shewn, if necessary, to his Brother-Bishops. And the following short statement was enclosed, which he wished the Primate to read to the Council,—“The Lord Bishop of Exeter is quite unable to attend, with due regard to his safety and his honour. He cannot attend safely, because, if he were present, he would feel compelled to take measures to secure the punishment of the men who had committed so great an outrage on his Predecessor. He cannot attend with due regard to his honour; for it would not become him to take his place in the Council, and allow such a crime to be passed over in silence.” It is clear, also, that he was offended with the Archbishop on personal grounds; for he wrote, at the same time, to Master John Bloyhou, Official of the Court of Canterbury, and lately his own Official-Principal,¹ exhorting him not only to support his excuses for non-attendance at the Council, but also to tell the Primate, privately (for he found it difficult to believe that he himself was responsible for such conduct), how astonished he was to find that he had been acting independently of the Bishop within the Diocese of Exeter, notifying his Enthronization,² by his Letters, to divers persons therein, and not to the Diocesan, and even writing some very extraordinary Letters to the Prioress and Convent of Polsloe, such as even their own Bishop would not have addressed to them; a proceeding which he hoped would not be attempted in the case of the other Religious Houses. We learn from a source external to the Register³ that Bishop Stapeldon’s case was not, after all, neglected by the Council. On the 10th of February the assembled Bishops and Prelates, with the whole Clergy, heard Mass—the “Missa de Pace”—which was celebrated by the Bishop of Norwich, and after the Gospel the Primate and his Suffragans, with the other Prelates, standing before the Altar, vested in their Pontificals and with lighted candles in their hands, solemnly excommunicated the murderers and their abettors.

³ The writer of the "Life" of the Bishop in the Dictionary of National Biography (vol. xxii., p. 371), refers to this letter, and quotes it inaccurately, making Grandisson allege "that it would be inconvenient to leave his Diocese" for this reason amongst others "that the people of Devon were enemies of God and his Church." But those words were applied to the Londoners—ipsi Londonienses, the men who were stained with the blood of his murdered Predecessor. He had his troubles at home, as we know; but he was overcoming them, and he was quite safe from outrage there,—"Secus nobis standum est, et solide terre securitati liberis pedibus innitendum."

The Register now becomes, through a large number of folios, a simple record, for the most part, of the Bishop’s daily and indefatigable labours in the ordinary work of his Diocese. Early in March he set out for Winchester, to attend the Parliament to be held there on the 11th of that month.⁴ On the 8th we find him at Otterton Priory,⁵ and on the same day at Colcombe,⁶ a seat of the Courtenays in the parish of Colyton. He reached Winchester on the 10th, and by the 21st he was on his homeward way, resting for some days at Itchenstoke. On the 30th of March, 1330, he was at Honiton.⁶ On the 31st he reached Clyst, where he appears to have remained continuously till the 1st of July, engaged, we cannot doubt, in superintending the works in the Cathedral, which were then in full progress. In July he paid a short visit to Oxford, reaching Wells¹ on the 5th, the Oxfordshire Bampton² (which was in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter) on the 10th, and Oseney Abbey,³ on the 12th. After sojourning for several days in Oxford, he returned to Clyst on the 10th of August, having spent about a week with his parents at Oxenhall,⁴ and he visited Canonsleigh Abbey⁵ on the 8th. He remained at Clyst till the 20th, preparing to renew the Visitation of Cornwall, for which he issued his Mandate to the Archdeacon on that day, starting almost immediately for the West. On the 29th he was at Buckland Abbey,⁶ at Modbury on the 30th, at Plymouth on the 31st, at Buckland-Monachorum (probably, confirming in the Parish-Church) on the 1st of September, and, again, at Plymouth⁷ on the 2nd. On the same day he crossed the Tamar to his Manor of Lawhitton, near the Assize-Town of Launceston, and forthwith commissioned John de Eysi and William de Londay to demand and take custody of certain clerks, should they be convicted before John de Stonore and Robert de Aspale and others, the King's Justiciaries.⁸ On the 4th he proceeded to his Manor of Poutone, near Padstow, where he remained till about the 16th of October. While he was there he discovered that disturbances had broken out again in the Cathedral, in consequence, no doubt, of his absence; and, this time, the Vicars were chiefly to blame. He had been informed, on trustworthy authority, that their conduct was disgraceful; they were not ashamed to indulge in loud and indecent laughter during Divine Service, and some of those who occupied the upper forms in the Choir at Matins, holding lighted candles in their hands, had even dared to drop the melted grease, deliberately and wilfully, on the heads of those who sat beneath them. They also disturbed the service by jeering at mistakes made in singing and reading by the less educated members of the choir, for whose deficiencies they ought rather to have shewn sympathy; correcting their blunders aloud, and in English, in a tone of derision. Also, they deliberately jumbled together the separate parts of the service, causing the greatest confusion; and it was clear that, though they might be in the Choir in the body, their heart was anywhere else—in the market, in the streets, or in their beds. The Bishop wrote, on the 15th of October to the Dean and Subdean,⁹ commanding them to deal severely with the offenders, who were to be summoned to appear on three successive days, in the Chapter-House, to hear their Bishop's Letter read. They were to be charged to desist from their evil courses forthwith, and order themselves reverently in the Sanctuary; those who refused to obey were to be heavily fined; and if, after that, any of them continued in obstinate rebellion, they were to be excommunicated and deprived; their blood would be upon their own heads.

From Pontone the Bishop went to Penryn,¹ where he remained about a week. He visited St. Probus² on the 29th of October; and on the 7th of November we find him at Glynn,³ near Bodmin, a Manor of the Carminowes. From thence, calling on his way at Cotynbeke, Lawhitton, Launceston, Tavistock, Meavy,² and Plympton, he returned to Chudleigh, on, or about, the 24th, and remained there, or in the neighbourhood, till the end of the year. The Register, now, for a time, records only the ordinary routine work of the Diocese, with a single exception: grievous sacrilege had been committed at Whitchurch, near Tavistock, where an armed band of lay folk had seized the Parish-Church by force, and refused to give up possession or allow any services to be held in it; and, as nothing else could be done, the Bishop wrote to the King, on the 21st of March, 1330-1, entreating him to deal with the rebels by his Royal authority.⁴ Early in 1331 (on the 25th of April) we find him at Lambeth,⁵ from whence he returned by way of Bosham,⁶ where there had been trouble for a long time past, his Jurisdiction being constantly disputed by the Bishop of Chichester and his officials; but the Register is silent as to what he did there. He visited his Manors of Farringdon⁷ and Chidham, and returned by a circuitous route--by Lambourne,⁸ Ashperton in Herefordshire,⁹ his birthplace, Donyatt in Somerset,⁹ and Petrisheghes⁹ to Clyst, where he arrived on the 9th of July.

The time was, now, approaching when it would be necessary for him to visit the Papal Court. He set out on the 18th of September, resting at Forde Abbey¹⁰ on that day, and at Salisbury on the 21st. He reached London on the 3rd of October and remained there till the 22nd, when we find him at Canterbury.¹¹ On the 23rd he sailed from Dover,¹¹ and, after spending a few days in Paris,¹¹ reached Avignon¹² on the 29th of November, where he remained till the 19th of December. It is recorded that, while he was there, he obtained a special "Privilege" from the Pope, and we are referred for a copy of it to a separate quaternus (p. 138). It was granted on the 20th of December. It will be remembered that the Bishop visited Lambeth on the 25th of April, and there can be little doubt that, while he was there, he discussed with Archbishop Mepeham the question of his general Visitation of the Province which was then impending. The consultation was, evidently, unsatisfactory from Grandisson's point of view ; and he resolved to keep the Metropolitan, at all hazards, out of the Diocese of Exeter, by the help of the Pope, from whom he succeeded in obtaining a general Inhibition, which made his position secure. He even contrived to include in the terms of the Indult his own Successors and all future Archbishops and their officials. "We cannot commend him," says Dr. Oliver,¹ "for his resistance, though it proved successful. . . . Such Visitations were conformable to the Canons, had been of long usage here, and were continued after his time ; and we cannot help believing that it was unworthy of his reputation, as also a dangerous departure from regular discipline, and affording an evil precedent, to have sheltered himself under special Briefs of his Patron." Neither do I "commend" him ; but I feel that, if we are to judge his action at all, we are bound to consider his peculiar position, his character, and his strong personality ; putting ourselves, as far as may be, into his place. Mepeham, as we have seen,² had been guilty of unjustifiable interference in the affairs of his Diocese on several occasions ; and he could scarcely be expected to regard with complacency the formal Visitation of a Primate who had not hesitated to visit his Flock by Letters, informally, and behind the Diocesan's back. He had found the whole Diocese, including even the Cathedral itself, in dire disorder, as we know ; his very means of sustenance had been cut off by the almost universal peculation which had been going on for years ; and every corner of his vast and most difficult Charge demanded the vigorous rule of a firm hand, if reformation was ever to be accomplished. He could not brook interference with his plans, which had been, already, crowned with a large measure of success, especially on the part of one who had shewn that he was of a meddlesome disposition, and would probably do great mischief by superseding his authority and unsettling the minds of his people, just as many of them, recognising and appreciating the faithfulness and unselfishness of their chief Pastor, were responding to his earnest call to return to the

² See p. xxx. He had, also, given grave offence to Bishop Grandisson by his conduct in the case of Sir John Dyneham, who, being guilty of adultery, had been excommunicated, and had appealed to the Court of Canterbury. See "Dyneham" in the General Index. How strongly the Bishop felt on this matter is shewn by the Letter which he wrote to Mepeham on the 16th of October, 1331. It was his way to use strong language when he felt that his efforts to put down iniquity in high places were being frustrated by unscrupulous and time-serving men ; and words did not fail him on this occasion. "As God is my witness," he wrote, "I would rather flee away into solitude than give place to the malicious, and continue to dwell amongst scorpions, subverters of the truth" (p. 262). See NOTE at the end of this Preface.

Shepherd and Bishop of their souls. The Diocese was remote, isolated practically from all the rest of England ; and he had availed himself of this peculiarity of position to the full, not for his own aggrandisement, but because it enabled him to make full proof of his Ministry without much risk of disturbance from without. Whether he was right or wrong in determining to keep his Diocese to himself, at any rate for a while and at a most critical time, we cannot doubt that his motives were conscientious, and that he was fighting, not for himself, but for the needs of his people as he understood them, and in defence of his arduous work. And the Pope was on his side.

Armed with his Indult, he returned to England, after a short stay in Paris, reaching Sandwich on the 9th of February. He remained in London¹ till the 28th of March, 1332 ; engaged, probably, in securing the active support of the King and Queen.² Journeying homeward by way of Faringdon and Shaftesbury,³ he reached Clyst⁴ on the 8th or 9th of April. The Archbishop was now well on his way to the Far West, engaged in visiting the adjacent Diocese of Bath and Wells,⁵ having already visited the Dioceses of Rochester, Chichester and Salisbury.⁶ He had publicly announced his intention to visit Exeter, ignoring the intervention of the Pope and the King, and probably hoping that Grandisson would, in the end, yield to the inevitable. If it were so, he had mistaken his man. As soon as our Bishop found that Mepeham was actually coming, he took up his abode in the Palace, and made preparation for his reception. And first he wrote, on the 25th of May, to the Dean of Exeter,⁷ forbidding him to publish any Letters which he might receive from the Primate ; for he had appealed to the Pope, against the threatened Visitation, and nothing could be lawfully done while the Appeal was pending. On the 10th of June he wrote to the Mayor of the City,⁸ claiming his support. The Archbishop, he said, either by the Mayor's default or with his connivance, had brought bands of armed men into the City, who had invaded the Precincts of the Cathedral, and had torn down the copies of his Appeal which he had caused to be affixed to the door of the Chapter-House. This had been done in defiance of the King's Mandate, which the Mayor had received and ought to have obeyed ; and the Bishop demanded an immediate answer. The Register is silent as to what actually transpired ; but we learn from another source¹ that Mepeham entered the City on the 1st of June, and proceeded towards the Cathedral, where the Bishop's armed retainers successfully resisted him, and he was not even allowed to enter the Close. A Provincial Council was summoned to meet in London,² to discuss the matter ; but, as might have been expected, both the Pope and the King having been defied, the Archbishop and his Suffragans could not agree, and nothing came of it. Mepeham died about a year afterwards, on the 13th of October, 1333, and it has been said that he died of grief on account of his disappointment ; but I am unwilling to believe that he was so poor a creature as that !

² They joined in his petition to the Pope for a second and more peremptory Mandate, which was granted on the 30th of May ; it is couched in minatory terms. A "Bulla Executoria" of the first "Privilegium" had been issued on the 1st of September, 1331 ; and, as the Primate persisted in molesting the Bishop, it was served on him by the Nuncio, Icherius de Concoreto, on the 7th of October, 1332 (pp. 140, 141).

Returning to Chudleigh on the 21st of October he remained there, or at one of his other Manors close at hand, till the 8th of July, 1333. The work in the Cathedral now demanded his presence and close attention ; for, as we have seen,³ the new pillars of the Nave arcades had recently been completed, and the arches and clerestory must have been in progress. On the 17th of November he issued a Mandate to his Official-Principal for the recovery of the Muniments belonging to the Palace-Archives and other things of value, which were still in the hands of those who had seized them after Bishop Stapeldon's death. On the following day he sanctioned the Appropriation of the Rectory of Yarnscombe to the Hospital of St. John in the City of Exeter, in furtherance of Stapeldon's great scheme for the promotion of the better education of the Clergy. That Bishop had not only founded a Hall in the University of Oxford, but he was also engaged in establishing a Grammar-School for boys in connection with this Hospital in Exeter, when his work was interrupted by his violent death.⁴ There was still trouble at Whitchurch,⁵ and it seems that Abbat Bonus, of Tavistock, had been at the bottom of the mischief from the beginning. He had numerous adherents—"sons of Belial" the Bishop called them,—and they had not only occupied the Church with an armed force, but had fortified themselves by throwing up a stone wall against the doorway, surrounded by a trench. It was a question of a disputed right of patronage,⁶ the Abbat and Convent claiming the right to present against Walter atte Treawen on whose presentation the Bishop had instituted David Alyam⁷ in March, 1330-1. It was impossible to induct Alyam ; for when the Abbat of Buckland went to Whitchurch for the purpose, he found the Church converted into a fortress, and met with such outrageous treatment at the hands of the garrison that he was fain to retreat, after pronouncing Sentence of Excommunication against the offenders, which he had been commissioned to do if they refused to submit. As this measure had no effect on the culprits, the Bishop wrote to the Archdeacon of Totnes on the 8th of December, ordering him to proclaim the Sentence throughout the Archdeaconry, and to take all such steps as might be found necessary to enforce it. Nearer home the Dean, Richard de Coletone, had been giving trouble for some time past. He had, in fact, been disaffected from the beginning ; and there can be no doubt that he bitterly resented the Bishop's active interference in the Cathedral, and the ruthless way in which he had exposed the malpractices of certain members of the Cathedral Body. At last the Bishop excommunicated him, the Dean having disputed his Jurisdiction and refused to appear before him when cited to do so ; and on the 13th of February, 1332-3, he issued a Mandate to the Subdean and Henry Bloyou, one of the Canons, for the sequestration of his revenues.¹ This strong measure had the desired effect. The Dean appeared before the Bishop on the 21st of March, confessed his fault, and promised entire obedience for the time to come. He was immediately forgiven and absolved ; and the Bishop, on the following day, wrote to the Subdean and to Bloyhou to tell them the good news : "I received him," he wrote, "with heartfelt joy ; his banishment from the Church had been a bitter grief to me ; I had mourned for him as for a son that was lost ; and now, to quote the Parable in the Gospel, I am, in spirit, feasting and making merry, for he was dead and is alive again, was lost and is found."² A few days later, on the 3rd of April, 1333, the Bishop dealt with another offender, one Richard Selere, who had been thrice Mayor of Exeter, and had been excommunicated for violently assaulting John Davy, a clerk. He was absolved on promising to make full satisfaction to the injured man, and to deliver by way of fine, a quarter of wheat apiece, "good, clean grain," to the Friars Preachers and Minors of Exeter, the Brethren of St. John's Hospital, and the lepers of St. Mary Magdalene's, before Michaelmas.³ Another trouble arose at this time, which was confined indeed to a single parish, but there was danger that it might extend to other places with serious results ; and it may be mentioned as evidence of the unruly temper with which the Bishop had had to contend from the first. The tithe-payers of the large Parish of Silverton, a few miles from Exeter, were leagued together to defraud the Parson of his dues, some of them cutting down the amount of their tithes and some keeping them back altogether. As might be expected, the

Bishop was down, at once, on what he called their "damnable presumption," giving them to understand that Excommunication was the punishment due to such an offence, and sending them a Monition to that effect on the 20th of April.¹

Early in 1333 the Scots invaded England, and the King forthwith marched against them. He wrote to the Bishops from Newcastle-on-Tyne on the 23rd of April, requesting the prayers of all Christian people for the success of his arms. Grandisson was prompt to take action, and on the 31st of May, feeling, probably, that, in his remote Diocese, the people would scarcely understand the matter, and would take little or no interest in a danger so distant, he appealed to them in moving terms,—“Who is there that dwells in any part of this Realm of England, who that has any ardent desire for the peace and honour of the King, and can fail to be roused by hearing of the savage fury and insolent pride of our enemies, or remain unmoved when so noble a Prince asks us for our prayers?” He had undertaken the war for the sake of his people, and to ward off the dangers which threatened them all; not regarding himself, nor shrinking from the risk or turmoil of the conflict, but caring only that his subjects might dwell at ease and be refreshed in the multitude of peace. And he ordered the Celebration of Masses with Litanies, Processions, and devout prayers in every parish.² On the 17th of June he appropriated the Rectory of Rockbeare to the Abbess and Convent of Canonsleigh, the patrons of the Benefice, reserving to himself and his Successors the right of Collation to the Vicarage.³ In July he spent a few days with his father at Oxenhall; but he was soon recalled to Exeter to deal with fresh troubles in the Cathedral.⁴ He had recently collated his nephew, his sister's son, John de Northwode, to a Canonry, with expectation of the first Prebend that might fall vacant. But the preferment was claimed by one William le Gyldene, who behaved so violently that the Bishop excommunicated him. The Dean, though but lately absolved on his submission, was, evidently, a turbulent man, for we find him again in trouble, suspended and excommunicated.⁵ And on the 23rd of August the Bishop commissioned the Subdean and William de Nassington to take the Dean's place in correcting the misconduct of the Vicars, who were not likely to mend their ways, with such an evil example before them. On the 11th of September he commissioned another of the Canons, John de Nassington, to exercise the Dean's right of patronage.⁵ There was trouble, also, with the Deans-Rural, many of whom, instead of doing their work themselves, had presumed to appoint as substitutes men of no character and wholly unfit for such an office, creating a serious scandal; and, on the 19th, the President of the Consistory Court was ordered to take such steps as might be found necessary to compel the Beneficed Clergy who had been elected, to do their work themselves. The Bishop resided in his Manor-House of Paignton during the month of September, and on the 4th of October he started on a Visitation of portions of East Cornwall. On his way, and on the same day, he dedicated the Parish Church of Dittisham, which had been rebuilt, and the High Altar at Blackawton.¹ He spent the 6th at East Allington, and dedicated the High Altar there; reaching Yealmpton on the following day.² On the 9th we find him at his Manor-House of Cotynbeke, where he remained till the 1st of November. It had, at last, become necessary to deal peremptorily and finally with the sad case of the Abbat of Tavistock, whose "enormities" could be tolerated no longer. The Bishop had been most patient with him, and had tried, by every means in his power, to bring him to a better mind;³ but all his efforts were in vain, and on the 24th of October Bonus was deprived.⁴ His successor, John de Courtenay, one of the Monks, was blessed by the Bishop at Clyst⁵ on the 24th of April, 1334. Proceeding northward from Cotynbeke, he dedicated the High Altar of St. Sampson's, Southill, on the 4th of November, 1333, the cemetery of St. Thomas, within the precincts of Launceston Priory, on the 6th, and the High Altar of Kilkhampton on the 10th, reaching Hartland Abbey on the 12th. The case of Dean Coleton's rebellion had become acute; for he had taken part in the opposition to the Collation of John de Northwode referred to above, and also of Richard Fitz-Ralph, to Canonries, and, the Primatial See being vacant by reason of Mepeham's death, he had induced the Official of the Court of Canterbury to intervene in the matter and impugn the Bishop's right and jurisdiction. Accordingly the Bishop issued an Inhibition to his four Archdeacons, from Hartland, on the 21st of November,⁶ forbidding them to obey the said Official or pay any attention to the Mandate which he had directed to them on the 9th of that month.⁷ On the 12th, moreover, he had ordered the Subdean to sequester the Dean's revenues.⁶ Leaving Hartland he reached Torrington on the 16th, and Winkleigh, where he dedicated the High Altar, on the 17th; after which he remained in his Manor-House of Crediton till the 14th of January, 1333-4. But he was not suffered to rest long; the Vicars in the Cathedral were again causing grievous scandal by shameless misconduct in the Choir, encouraged, we can scarcely doubt, by the evil example, in another way, of the Dean, their immediate head; and the Bishop, remembering their abominable conduct on the Feast of the Holy Innocents' in the previous year, when they not only disturbed the Services by loud laughter and other gross improprieties, but even disgraced themselves by indulging in vulgar revellings and obscene gestures before the people, wrote to them, on the 16th of December, through the Subdean and William de Nassington, to tell them that, if they dared to repeat such conduct on the same holy Feast, now near at hand, he would deal with them with the utmost rigour.¹ To Grandisson, who was a man of the most reverent and devout mind, and who was engaged at the time, at great self-sacrifice and with abounding zeal, in the arduous work of completing the Cathedral Church, which, he tells us, over and over again, he regarded as his beloved Spouse, the very thought of such sacrilege as this must have caused nothing short of agony. But he was dauntless, and the work went on unceasingly in the face of all rebuffs and discouragement. We soon find him in Exeter again;² where, on the 16th of January he appropriated the Rectory of Bere-Ferrers for the endowment of an Archpresbitery in that Church.³ On the 20th of January he was at Ottery,⁴ a place which was very near his heart, and for the benefit of which he was, already, contemplating great things.

On the defeat of Douglas, the Regent of Scotland, Baliol was received as King in a Parliament held in October at Perth; but, on his ceding to the English the South of Scotland, he was driven out, and fled to Berwick early in February: it was, doubtless, in consequence of these stirring events that our Bishop journeyed to the North, to attend the Parliament which was summoned to meet at York⁵ on the 21st of February, 1333-4. We find him, on his way, at Lutterworth⁶ on the 12th of February, and he remained in York till, apparently, the middle of March. The Register only records his movements, and gives no account of his doings in Parliament. He appears to have been in London⁷ on the 16th of March on his way to Faringdon, Hants, where he remained till the middle of April, 1334. On the 20th of April he passed through Widworthy and Gittisham⁸ on his way to Clyst, where he arrived on the same day; remaining there, or at one of his Manors in the neighbourhood and at Exeter, till the 13th of May, 1336. Evidently, the great work in the Cathedral, which must have been then advancing rapidly, demanded his almost continuous presence.

There is, of course, a full record of the routine work of the Diocese during this long interval. On the 6th of May, 1334, the Abbey-Church of Tavistock was formally released from Interdict, and the Monks who had been excommunicated were absolved.¹ On the 15th, William de Byttedene, the recalcitrant Prior of St. James's, Exeter, was excommunicated, and the case of one Peter de Beare, a depraved and heretical clerk, who was married, and seems to have led a most disreputable life, was severely dealt with.² Dean Coletone, who had appealed to the Pope, and was now at Avignon, was once more inclined to be reconciled to his Bishop; but, as he had no money and could not return to England, the Bishop, on the 28th of June, ordered a temporary relaxation of the sequestration of his revenues.³ One William, calling himself a hermit, had settled at "St. Davyd in la Hamme," in the parish of Ashprington, near Totnes; he was disturbing the neighbourhood by preaching heresies and reviling the Bishop, and was supposed to be insane: on the 30th of June the Bishop ordered the man to be brought before him, with what result we are not told.⁴ On the 1st of July a new series of Statutes was promulgated for the better government of Crediton Collegiate Church.⁵ On the same day the Rectory of St. Colan was appropriated to Glasney College, for the better endowment of the Sacristy,⁶ and Walter Meryet, who as Chancellor was bound by Statute to lecture periodically in the Cathedral, was released from part of the burden by permission to employ a deputy.⁷ The King having required the Bishop, by his Letters, dated on the 3rd of August,⁸ to send him a Return as to all aliens beneficed in his Diocese, the latter complied on the 12th of September, a full copy of the Document being recorded in his Register.⁹ Grave irregularities having been committed, in the matter of absolving penitents and enjoining penances, by the Archdeacons and their Officials, who had presumed to act in cases reserved to the Bishop alone, and were, therefore, deceiving the people, "crying Peace, peace, when there was no peace," they were commanded, on the 12th of December, to desist immediately.¹⁰ Pope John XXII died on the 4th of December: he was Grandisson's patron and staunch friend; and we are told that the Bishop received the tidings with anguish of heart and with tears. On the 22nd he issued a general Exhortation to the Diocese, announcing their loss, and requiring prayers to be offered in every Church for the repose of the deceased Pontiff's soul, and for those whose duty it would be to elect a successor, that God would guide them aright.¹¹ On the 23rd of January, 1334-5, the Rectory of Bickleigh was appropriated to Buckland Abbey.¹² A dispute having arisen at Wells between Alan de Conesburghe and Robert de Tautone, both of whom claimed the Provostship in the Cathedral, the Pope deputed Bishop Grandisson to investigate the matter. Meanwhile Tautone died; and the Bishop, on the 9th of May, 1335, sequestrated the revenues, pending a final settlement.¹ On the 31st of May the Bishop wrote in severe terms to the four Archdeacons, denouncing the grievous irreverence of which many priests were guilty in their administration of the Viaticum: he had discovered that this was of almost daily occurrence, and that many of the Clergy did not even take the trouble to vest themselves for this ministry, and carried the Blessed Sacrament to the sick as if it were a common thing, without a light, and without a bell to arouse the devotion of the faithful on their way.² There had been a great outrage committed in Plymouth at this time: the bailiff of Plympton Priory, John Haywarde by name, while engaged in his ordinary duties on the Priory estates, had been set upon by a band of men, to escape from whom he took refuge in the Church of Suttone. The ruffians broke down the door, dragged their victim out, and not only slashed him with their swords and beat him with clubs, but even went so far as to break his legs. They escaped, and it appeared that no one could, or would, identify them; so the Bishop issued a general Sentence of Excommunication against them on the 8th of July.³

The King was still in the North, ravaging Scotland, in concert with Baliol. And the Bishop, to whom Edward had appealed from Newcastle-on-Tyne on the 28th of June, issued his Mandate, on the 3rd of August, for the renewal throughout his Diocese of prayers for the success of the English arms.⁴

It will be remembered⁵ that Dean Coletone had written to the Bishop from Avignon, expressing his desire to be reconciled, once more, to his offended Father in God, and asking for a partial relaxation of the sequestration of his revenues, as he could not return to England for lack of money; and that his request was granted on the 28th of June, 1334. About a year elapsed before he set out: the negotiations and necessary arrangements, of course, took time; and probably he was detained by illness, broken down, we can well believe, by his utter failure to influence the Pope against the Bishop. He died on his way home,⁶ on the 4th of August⁷, 1335. On the 14th, two Licences were granted—to the Treasurer,

Richard de Wydeslade, to exercise the Jurisdiction pertaining to the Deanery, during the vacancy; and to the Chapter, to proceed with the election of Coletone's successor. On the 25th the Peculiar Jurisdiction of Braunton, which pertained to the Deanery, was committed to Richard de Bysshopleghe, Rector of Lawhitton. And on the 6th of September,¹ the Subdean, Richard de Brayleghe, was elected unanimously.² The Bishop confirmed the election on the 2nd of October, issuing his Mandate for the Induction, by the Treasurer, on the same day.³ And on the 19th of December, mindful of the recent troubles and scandals in the Cathedral Choir, he wrote to remind the new Dean that it was his duty to exercise controul over the Vicars; exhorting him, "by the shedding of the Precious Blood of Jesus Christ," not to hesitate to enforce the penal statutes against all offenders, remembering that he had assumed a share in the Bishop's responsibilities.⁴

Grandisson, as we have seen, was a strenuous reformer of abuses; and we, now, find him directing his attention to the state of his Consistory Court. There, as elsewhere, grievous abuses were prevalent. Men who had no standing as judges were presuming to exercise judgement; and even the lawful Judges, Officials, and Notaries were taking part in oppressing all who came within their clutches, blinded by a love of private gain which "ought rather to be called rapacity." Cases were heard not in open Court but in secret chambers; and many innocent persons were condemned, without resistance on their part, being simply worn out by the treatment which they received, and driven into submission as the least of the evils which threatened them. The fame, or rather, as the Bishop says, the infamy, of these misdeeds at last reached Grandisson's ears, and he promptly took measures to secure a remedy, issuing on the 3rd of February, 1335-6, a series of Rules, fourteen in number, for the better governance of the Court, and, at the same time, appointing a Commission to inquire into the excesses of which he was informed the Advocates, Proctors, and others serving in the said Court were guilty. He insisted on immediate obedience, and reminded the offenders that he was making no new demands upon them, but only, as they were well aware, insisting on their submitting themselves to the antient and time-honoured regulations of the Court, which pertained to his Spiritual Jurisdiction.⁵

On the 14th of May, 1336, he dedicated the High Altar at Stoke-in-Teignhead⁶; after which he resided for about a month at Paignton, and then set out to conclude his General Visitation of Cornwall, which had been twice commenced and, for various reasons, suspended. On his way¹ he dedicated the High Altar at Moreleigh, on the 13th of June, and that of Diptford on the 14th; the Church of North Huish and its High Altar on the 15th, the Church of Holbeton and its High Altar, and the Altar of St. Thomas, on the 18th, and the Church of Cornwood, its High Altar, and two other Altars therein, on the 19th. On the 26th, we find him in his Manor of Cotynbeke, near St. German's, where he found it necessary to deal peremptorily with a sad case of outrage at Plymouth, an attempt having been made to intrude one Roger de Trevelyas, by force of arms, into the Vicarage of Sutton, which was not even vacant at the time, but in the possession of Brother Nicholas de Weylonde, the lawful Vicar. He had threatened the offenders with Excommunication, writing from Paignton, on the 28th of May,² but with little or no result; and now he ordered the Church to be laid under Interdict, and the Sentence of Excommunication to be solemnly proclaimed.³ The sacrilegious ruffians had behaved with the greatest brutality, cruelly wounding one Bartholomew Glyse, who had taken refuge in the Church, and with much violence driving out of the place Walter de Kynelonde, a priest, whom the Bishop had sent to suppress the tumult; and they broke into Weylonde's house and stole everything they could lay their hands on—a large number of silver cups and spoons, all the Vicar's provisions and his bedding, and £20 in money.

It must have been with a feeling of great relief that the Bishop set out, on the 1st of July, to traverse the quiet highways and byways along the Cornish coast.⁴ The Church of St. Veep, between Lostwithiel and Fowey, had been recently rebuilt; and he dedicated it, on that day, in honour of SS. Cyric and Juliet, with its High Altar. Proceeding down the river to Fowey, where also the Church, originally dedicated to St. Finbar, had been rebuilt,⁵ he dedicated it, with its three Altars, in honour of St. Nicholas, Bishop and Confessor, on the 3rd. On the 10th he dedicated the High Altar of St. Gulval, close to Penzance on the east, and on the 11th that of "Paul" (the Church of St. Paulinus), just beyond that town on the west. His headquarters were at Alvertone, in the suburbs of Penzance, a Manor of the Baronial Family of Tyes.⁶ On the 12th he proceeded, with great state, to St. Buryan,¹ accompanied by a large retinue of Knights and eminent Clericks, to exercise in person his Diocesan Jurisdiction where, for so many years, both he and his Predecessors had been successfully resisted. There was now, it seemed, a prospect of better things, and Grandisson determined to make the most of his opportunity. The parishioners assembled in the Church in large numbers to meet him, and he spoke to them by an interpreter, Henry Marsley, Rector of St. Just-in-Penwith; for with the exception of the higher classes, who were educated men, they understood only their own Cornish tongue. At the outset he solemnly renounced everything that could, in any way, be regarded as prejudicial to the rights of the King, claiming only spiritual authority over them as their Bishop. All submitted, and quite unanimously; the principal inhabitants speaking in English or in French, and the others in their own language. This was done with great solemnity, all kneeling at the Bishop's feet, with uplifted hands, confessing that they had been rebels against the unity of the Church. The Hymn Veni, Creator, was then sung and prayers were said, after which the Bishop absolved them all. And then he preached to them from the text—"Ye were as sheep going astray, but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls." The sermon was in Latin, the interpreter afterwards reciting the substance of it to the congregation in their Cornish tongue. Many of the younger parishioners then came forward and received the First Tonsure at the Bishop's hands; and children, "almost more than could be numbered," gathered from all parts of the large Parish and its dependent Chapelries, were confirmed. The priests who served the Church took the oath of Canonical Obedience; but the Dean, still rebellious, was conspicuous by his absence; and, two days later, at Alvertone, the Bishop committed the administration of the Deanery to Henry Marseley, the interpreter mentioned above. The names of the five Chaplains are given, and also those of the principal inhabitants, thirteen in number; some of which, such as Vyvyan, Boscawen, and Penrose, are still names of honour in this far-western land.

On the 13th the Bishop visited² St. Just and St. Madron, dedicating the High Altars of both Churches; and on the 14th he celebrated the same solemn rite in the Churches of St. Ludgvan, and St. Colan (near St. Columb), not far from his Manor of Poutone, where he remained till about the 23rd; visiting Lezant, where, also, he dedicated the High Altar,³ on the 27th, and Lawhitton on the 31st, on his homeward way. He had made a complete circuit of the County; and there can be no doubt that he had confirmed or admitted to the first Tonsure in many places.

But there is no record of such work except in the case of St. Buryan; and the Register of his Ordinations (referred to on p. 820) has, unhappily, been lost. The works in the Cathedral, of course, required his constant supervision, and he resided in Exeter, or at Clyst hard by, till the 12th of February, 1336-7, and, probably, later; and the Register contains a full record of his ordinary routine work during the interval. Roger de Trevelyans, "the ringleader and charioteer of the rebels" at Plymouth, submitted and was absolved; and the Church of Suttone was released from Interdict on the 9th of August.¹ Even Dean Maunte, finding, of course, that he was no longer supported at St. Buryan, obeyed the Bishop's summons to Clyst, and made his submission there, taking the oath of Canonical Obedience on the 16th.² John of Eltham, Earl of Cornwall, died in September; and on the 30th the Bishop sequestrated his goods.³ He had, probably, good reason for doing so, for the officials of the Earls, as the Registers abundantly testify, had long been accustomed to oppress, and sometimes even grievously outrage the Clergy, presuming, no doubt, on their position as the agents, indirectly, of the Crown.⁴ But on this occasion he found that might was stronger than right; and on the 8th of October he wrote to his Commissaries, informing them that it had never been his intention to derogate the rights of the King, and that they would have to accept John de Mountvyroun as their colleague, on the King's behalf.⁵ On the 30th of October the Rectory of St. Madron was appropriated to the Hospital of St. John of Jerusalem in England.⁶ On the 12th of November the Bishop dedicated the High Altar of the Chapel of St. John's Hospital, Exeter; and on the 14th he reconciled the churchyard at Exminster, which had been polluted by the shedding of blood.⁷ On the 19th he settled finally with the Executors of Bishop Stapeldon, receiving from them the sum of two hundred marks.⁸ There had been troubles for some time past in connection with the Collegiate Church of St. Crantock, in Cornwall, which had been seriously hampered by the negligence and malpractices of the late Dean. The Vicars appointed by the Canons were ignorant men, who could neither sing nor read properly, and some of them were not in priests' Orders. On the 8th of October he had issued his Mandate to the Dean, William de Lunday, requiring him to provide a remedy against all such abuses for the time to come.⁹ And, now, he found that the Canons were non-resident, and that, in consequence, the worship of God was neglected, the duty of hospitality suspended, and the very buildings were becoming ruinous. So he issued a Mandate, requiring them all to reside under pain of Excommunication.¹ There had been much difficulty, for some time past, in inducing parishioners to pay the procurations due to the Bishop when Churches had been dedicated or reconciled, and there seemed to be some doubt as to the amounts chargeable. The Bishop was pained by perpetual altercations on the subject, and on the 12th of December he issued an authoritative "Table of Fees," confirming a former Table authorized by Bishop Stapeldon,—for the Dedication of Churches, five marks; of Altars, forty shillings; for the Reconciliation of Churches and their Cemeteries, either five marks or forty shillings, according to circumstances.² There were troubles at Launceston Priory, Adam de Knolle, the Prior, being a man of evil repute, unworthy of his Profession, and given to spending much of his time outside his House, consorting not only with men of the world but even with dissolute women. And on the 10th of February, 1336-7, the Bishop ordered Richard de Gomersale and Bartholomew de Castro to hold an Inquisition in the Priory and report.³

Early in March (being summoned to Parliament), he went to London,—one of his rare and brief absences from his Diocese.⁴ He had long been troubled about the affairs of the Earldom of Cornwall, which was erected into a Duchy on the 17th of March, when Prince Edward was invested as the first Duke. Two Documents were inserted in the Register, both without context, the first relating to the Charter of King Edward II, confirming to the Bishops of Exeter the Grant of the Tithe of Royal Fish, in Devon and Cornwall, made by King Henry II to Bishop Robert de Chichester⁵; the second containing a series of Petitions to the King touching the management of the Royal Duchy, and complaining of the many oppressions and exactions committed in the name of the Earls of Cornwall against the Church, in past times.⁶ By the end of the month he was at home again; at Honiton on the 31st, and soon after at Chudleigh,⁷ and at Exeter, where he appropriated the Rectory of Northmolton to Lilleshall Abbey.⁸ There were fresh troubles at Bosham; the See of Chichester was void by the death of Bishop

John de Langetone in June, 1337, and the Archbishop seized the opportunity to visit the College which had always been exempt from his Jurisdiction; but Grandisson, as the Ordinary of the place, appealed, on the 22nd of September, to the Pope.¹ There were troubles, also, again, in the Cathedral, arising from the persistent non-residence of Walter Meriet, the Chancellor. This had been going on for ten years, and had caused great anxiety to the Bishop, who complains that the man was incorrigible, and that reproof, rebuke, and exhortation were simply thrown away upon him; the offender was careful to secure every penny of his revenues, but he did nothing to earn them; he had even allowed the buildings at Stoke-Gabriel and St. Newlyn,—Churches appropriated for the endowment of his Office,—to fall in ruins to the ground, while the parishioners were wholly neglected. This was more than the Bishop could stand, and on the 31st of October he took vigorous measures to compel the Chancellor to reside and fulfil his duties.² On the 14th of November an Archpresbytery, for an Archpriest and five associate-priests, was established in the Church of Haccombe³ by Sir John Lercedekne, fulfilling the intention, frustrated by his death, of Sir Stephen de Haccombe, from whom Sir John had inherited the Manor through his wife Cecilia de Haccombe. The Church of St. Hugh, of Quethiock, in Cornwall, was appropriated to the new Foundation.⁴ On the 26th of November the Bishop visited the Cathedral in person, and he caused a full account of the proceedings to be entered in his Register.⁵ The names of all the Cathedral Body, the officials and ministers, are recorded, from the Dean to the junior custos, and the Articles of Visitation, fifty-one in number and of a most searching character, are set forth at large. The result of the Bishop's investigations was far from satisfactory, and in his consequent Decree, issued on the 4th of January, 1337-8, he denounced the offenders, in withering terms, as guilty of avarice and fraud; nay, in God's sight, of theft and sacrilege; commanding them to obey the Statutes. The Dean was to send to the Bishop full particulars, with the names, in all cases of colourable and fictitious Residence, within fifteen days.

We have, now, reached the date of the Foundation of the College of St. Mary of Ottery, which takes rank amongst the chief achievements of Grandisson's Episcopate. The Church is a truly magnificent building, recalling, with its transept-towers, the good Bishop's own well-loved "Spouse" of Exeter. It must have been a fabrick of some pretensions originally; but as remodelled, enlarged, and in great measure rebuilt by Grandisson, it is justly regarded as one of the glories of Devon, and a marvellous monument of the great Bishop's architectural knowledge, munificence, and devotion. From end to end it breathes his spirit ; and in every detail we see and feel the evidence of the continuous influence of his master-mind and matchless skill. It is impossible, within the narrow limits of a Preface, to do justice to such a subject as this ; and, happily, I have no need even to attempt the task. The Church has been described at length, with many excellent illustrations, in the Transactions of the Exeter Architectural Society¹ ; Dr. Oliver has dealt exhaustively with the history and Statutes of the Foundation in his Monasticon of the Diocese ; and, while I am writing, the Rev. J. R. Dalton, Canon of Windsor, is engaged on yet another such history, which will be far more full and accurate than its predecessors. I have had the advantage, through his courtesy, of reading many of his proofs ; and I may be permitted to say, here, that he has extended his researches beyond the fabrick of the Church, tracing and identifying, with marked success, all that can now be traced—a fragment here and there, and long-buried foundations—of the Collegiate Buildings, which were swept away after the Dissolution. I must be content, simply, to refer the reader to the numerous documents relating to the College which are included in these Volumes,² beginning with the purchase by the Bishop of the Manor and Advowson of Ottery, in 1335, from the Dean and Chapter of Rouen, who, he tells us, drove a hard bargain, compelling him to pay an exorbitant price for property which they were forced to acknowledge was of small value to themselves. The date of the actual Foundation was Christmas Eve, 1337 ; the sanction of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter for his Ordinances was obtained on the 22nd of January, 1337-8, and they were sent to Avignon for Confirmation soon afterwards ; the Pope objected to them as too prolix, and advised the Bishop to cut them down ; which he did, issuing the Statutes on the 29th of September, 1339, and sending the revised Document to Avignon at the same time, or, perhaps, early in 1340. Benedict XII died on the 25th of April, 1342, before a Bull of Confirmation had been issued. It was issued by Clement VI on the 27th of June following, and was one of the first of his Pontifical Acts.

On the 25th of May, 1338, the Church of Newton-St. Cyres was appropriated to Plympton Priory,³ and that of St. Merryn to the Dean and Chapter.⁴ Roger de Charleton, Archdeacon of Totnes, died in April, and his successor, John de Northwode, was collated on the 13th of June.⁵ He was the Bishop's nephew ; and, probably, there was a suspicion of nepotism, for the appointment was resented by certain persons "blinded by avarice and overcome by ambition," against whom the Bishop issued a strongly worded denunciation on the 24th.⁶ There was trouble again, at this time, with the Abbat and Monks of Tavistock ; and it would seem that Abbat Courtenay, of whom great things had been expected, was, in many respects, no improvement on his predecessor Bonus. On the 12th of July the Bishop issued a Commission for the Visitation of the Abbey¹ ; and a second Commission for an inquiry as to its condition was issued on 6th of August.² The results were a Sequestration-order on the 27th, and an Ordinance for its better government on the 31st, which led to Courtenay's submission³ ; but the Bishop issued a second Ordinance on the 12th of September, having regard to the serious state of affairs, which demanded an immediate and effectual remedy : he had ascertained that the Abbey, " which had once abounded in riches and honour " had been reduced to a miserably poor condition, and that its debts amounted to no less than £1,300, a very large sum in those days.⁴ It will be remembered that as long ago as July, 1333, an outrage had been committed in the Cathedral by one William de Gyldene (or Guldene), for which he was excommunicated.⁵ He had then resisted the Collation of John de Northwode to a Canonry, and he appears to have been the ringleader in the opposition to his promotion to the Archdeaconry of Totnes, referred to above. This man was suspected of heresy, and it is certain that he was a turbulent fellow, ambitious, envious, and utterly unscrupulous.⁶ On this second occasion he again resorted to open and sacrilegious violence, in order to secure his ends. The Bishop requested the Dean to send him a full report of what had taken place, and Dean Brayleghe complied on the 13th of November.⁷ It appears that Gyldene invaded the Choir, on All Saints' Day, during Divine Service, followed by a large band of armed ruffians. The Psalms of the Daily Office were being chanted at the moment ; but Gyldene did not hesitate to interrupt the Clergy violently, and some of his followers, approaching the Dean, demanded of him that he should, there and then, admit their leader to the Stall which had formerly belonged to Reginald de Campo Arnulphi. Efforts were made to pacify the intruders, but with little effect ; for afterwards, while Mass was being celebrated, the tumult was renewed, each of the Canons being assailed in turn, with the same purpose in view. All, whether known or unknown, who took part in this scandalous scene were, of course, excommunicated, and we hear no more of Gyldene.⁸

the President of his Consistory Court in 1336,¹ working, as we know, with unfailing energy and giving himself but little rest. At length, feeling that his work, in such a widely extended and scattered Diocese, was overwhelming, and fearing that any part of it might be neglected, he commissioned Richard Fraunceys, Bishop of Waterford, to serve as his Coadjutor, on the 18th of February, 1338-9; the immediate result being that Churches and Altars were dedicated in twelve places, and Confirmations were held.² The Chancellor of the Cathedral, Walter Meriet, was still guilty of persistent non-residence; and the Bishop, declaring that he "could no longer endure to sew pillows for his arm-holes, or supply a bolster for a mad man's head," cited him, on the 1st of July, 1339, to appear before him at Clyst on the 10th.³ We hear no more of him after this. He was a wealthy man and had large estates, in the enjoyment and management of which he was, apparently, wholly absorbed. But he seems to have retained his Dignity in our Cathedral till his death on the 17th of May, 1345⁴; his successor (as far as we know, for the Register is silent on that point) was Thomas de Bokynham, who was collated on the 25th of March, 1346.⁵ The Bishop had great trouble, from time to time, throughout his Episcopate, with the scions of great Families, who, often, seem to have thought that they were entitled to take liberties with him; but he was no respecter of persons, and did not spare them. Walter de Botrioux, a member of a powerful Baronial Family, was Rector, at this time, of St. Ruan-Lanyhorne, in Cornwall. He could not be induced to reside on his Benefice, but wandered about in all directions, absorbed in secular pursuits and committing other offences, "as to which," the Bishop says, "we remain silent for the present." On the 2nd of July he was cited to appear at Clyst, having been previously admonished, but without effect.⁶ He must have satisfied the Bishop, in the end, by full submission; but it was considered advisable that he should resign Lanyhorne, and the Bishop sent him away, almost to the Land's End, to St. Just-in-Penwith, to which he was collated (by lapse) on the 12th of November, 1340.⁷ On the 8th of August in that year, the Bishop, having discovered that there were great irregularities in Frithelstock Priory, commissioned the Abbat of Hartland to deal with the matter, and specially with the misconduct of the Sub-prior, who had been guilty of incontinency. The Abbat was to take with him the Bishop's Ordinance for the correction and reform of all abuses.⁸

On the 23rd of December Hugh de Courtenay, Earl of Devon, died. He had given the Bishop, as we know, a very unfriendly reception when he came into the Diocese, and he appears to have maintained his hostile attitude for many years. As late as 1335, we find a letter¹ addressed to him by Grandisson on the 22nd of December, which begins with the ominous words,—“Amendement d'alme!” The Bishop remonstrates with his cousin for his remorseless persecution of himself, his people, and the Ministers of Jesus Christ.² How he would like to be the Earl's good Father, if only he would behave himself as a good Son! He cannot any longer put up with continual maltreatment. He prays for him, night and day, to God, Who, by His Prophet declares that he willeth not the death of a sinner, but that rather he should be converted and live, but Who also warns us to submit to correction, lest He be angry with us and we perish. On the 3rd of November, 1340, shortly before the Earl's death, the Bishop wrote to him again,³ in a different strain. He gives him his Blessing; and, having heard that he was very feeble, he tells him that his heart's desire and prayer to God—his daily prayer—is that they may both be led to seek to do the will of God and not their own will, and that all things may work together for their

² He had written to the Archbishop, a few days before, complaining bitterly of the administration of the Earldom of Cornwall. The officials, he says, had usurped all rights, both of the King and the Bishop, interfering in all directions, and forcing into their newly invented “Court” men who were not even tenants of the Earl, and that in causes Ecclesiastical as well as civil. Men were beginning to talk of insurrection; for, the Earl being the King's brother, and withal a youth and easily led astray, they saw but little chance of obtaining justice in any quarter. “Over and above all this,” he adds, with characteristic plainness of speech, “I have to reckon with the mad conduct of that silly old man, the newly fledged Earl of Devon, who will not allow the men on his estates to make their Wills, or any such Wills, if made, to be proved before the Diocesan; and he excludes from his domains all exercise of Ecclesiastical discipline. In his private Chapels he ignores the Interdict which I have laid upon them; and, although he is possessed of no special Privilege that anyone has ever heard of, he arranges for Celebrations, or rather profanations, therein continually, not having obtained, or even so much as asked for, any Licence from me. So vain-glorious is he that he even goes about proclaiming everywhere that he is the King's equal, and can make any laws he likes, and judge all sorts and conditions of men. Pretending that he has received Commission to act in this manner, he boasts that no one in the Realm is his equal in wisdom, and that, in fact, all the affairs of the Realm depend on himself in the main. Such absurdities, and others which for very shame I refrain from repeating, he affirms concerning himself, and proclaims amongst the simple folk of Devon, who are easily deceived because they never see any other sort of King; whereas in every deed and action, he is the most contemptible of men. I feel that I must not attempt to deal with these and other injuries inflicted on the Church as long as our Lord the King is absent from England, lest perchance disturbances should arise against even my presumption also; and you know, as well as I do, that some people think me an audacious man. He Who knows all things knows the truth as to these matters; and to Him I commit myself, and whatever He may have in store for me, in trustfulness and humility” (p. 293, No. 250).

eternal good. God will do His part if they are willing to do their part. And he added that he had directed Benedict de Pastone to deliver his advice to the Earl with all good will and humility, in the expectation that he would be granted a patient and courteous hearing. Courtenay was buried in the Conventual Church of Cowick, on the 5th of February, 1340-1, in the presence of a great concourse of notable men; and it is pleasant to know that the Bishop attended the Exequies, celebrating Mass, and preaching from the words—"He died in a good old age, full of days, riches, and honour."¹

On Sexagesima Sunday, the 11th of February, 1340-1, there was great excitement in Exeter. The Cathedral bells were set ringing early in the morning, and a message was sent to the Bishop, who was at Chudleigh, to the effect that a notable miracle had been wrought on a blind man, one John le Skynnere, whose sight had been restored.² Grandisson was suspicious from the first, fearing that the people might be deceived and that grave evils might ensue; and he wrote immediately to the Dean, his Official-Principal, and the Subdean, forbidding them, under pain of Suspension, Interdict, and Excommunication, to allow the bells to be rung again, or to take any other steps to celebrate the alleged miracle till the case had been fully investigated: such portents, he told them, were often the work of the devil, and of men who were greedy of filthy lucre and vain-glory. No time was lost; and on the 13th the Bishop wrote to the Dean and Subdean, informing them that, as he had feared, Satan had been transforming himself into an Angel of Light. Skynnere had appeared before him, and had been closely examined. At first the man had stoutly protested that the miracle had indeed been wrought, declaring that he was ready to confirm his statement by an oath; but he wavered and contradicted himself, and at last broke down, confessing that, being a poor man, he had concocted this story in the hope of being able to make money: for seven years past he had been quite blind of one eye, and so remained; he was always able to see a little with the other, and he could see no better now; he must have been tempted by the devil both to lie and to perjure himself. The Cathedral authorities were severely rebuked for their credulity, and advised to follow, in future, the example of the Jews, who called the parents and friends of the blind man whom our Lord had healed, and strictly examined them. On Quinquagesima Sunday the imposture was publicly exposed in the Cathedral, by the Bishop's mandate.³

³ Five years before this occurrence the Bishop had to deal with a curious case of alleged restoration of sight, under rather suspicious circumstances. Sir Roger, the Perpetual Vicar of St. Crantock, had become blind, and was unable to attend to his duties; and the Bishop had appointed a coadjutor to relieve him, of course at the Vicar's cost. The latter seems to have become tired of the expense, and

The Bishop had been, for some time, greatly perturbed by the numerous and serious infringements of the Privileges and Liberties of the Church, which had been committed in his Diocese; and, at last, he determined to take the matter seriously in hand. He excommunicated the offenders, being determined to earn the right to say to them—"my hands are pure from the blood of all of you; for I have not shunned to declare unto you the counsel of God." The Documents, which are lengthy and of much interest, are dated 24 February and 16 March, 1340-1, and 1 July, 1341.¹ Between the second and third of these dates the Bishop was in London,² attending, no doubt, the Parliament which was held there in April. He seems to have left Clyst³ soon after the 13th of that month, and to have remained in London till the 28th of May. On the 29th we find him at Kingston-on-Thames,⁴ on his homeward way.

After this nothing of importance is recorded till the 21st of May, 1342, when the Bishop issued an Ordinance for the reformation of the abuses which, for some time past, had disgraced Launceston Priory.⁵ It did not have the desired effect, however. The Prior, Adam de Knolle, was, evidently, past correction. He led a dissolute life, and was fast ruining his House; and the Bishop saw clearly that it would be necessary to remove him. On the 22nd of December, 1344, he announced his intention to appoint a coadjutor,⁶ and on the 13th of January following he committed the administration in temporals to three of the Canons. But things went from bad to worse; the Prior still surrounded himself with men of scandalous character, and he misappropriated grievously the goods of his House, even sending victuals regularly from his own table to one Joan, the

it was suddenly announced that he could see very well, and could do his work himself. "If this be true," wrote Grandisson to the Dean of St. Crantock, on the 12th of May, 1335, "a miracle must have been wrought!" And he ordered the case to be thoroughly investigated (p. 784).—Again, in 1359, on the death, in the repute of sanctity, of Richard Buvyle, Rector of Whitstone, in Cornwall, great excitement prevailed in the parish, and throughout the neighbourhood, in consequence of the numerous miracles which, it was said, had been wrought at his tomb. Pilgrimages were made to the place, which was so crowded that it was difficult, in the heart of the country, to feed the people, and fairs were established and there were great disturbances. For a considerable time the Bishop did not know what was going on; but, as soon as the matter was reported to him, he intervened strenuously, and with his usual caution; ordering a thorough investigation to be made by his Commissary in the Archdeaconry of Cornwall, which was then vacant (29 Aug., 1361). The Inquisition was held in the Church of Wyke-St. Mary, and the Commissary made his Return on the 27th of October. A lengthy Schedule was annexed to the Return, setting forth the names of many who declared that they had been healed, and giving full particulars of each case. Unfortunately, we are not told what the Bishop did; but a long and very interesting account of the proceedings on the spot, from first to last, was recorded in his Register (pp. 1231—1234).

wife of Henry Cosyn, his partner in sin, and persecuting Brother Stephen, the Subprior, who ventured to resist him.¹ At last the offender was removed : threatened with Excommunication, and told, in plain terms, that he would be deprived and expelled if he did not submit, he formally resigned his Office on the 26th of June, 1346, the Bishop appointing Thomas de Burdone, one of the Canons, as his successor on the 13th of July.²

Adam de Carletone had held the Archdeaconry of Cornwall since January, 1307. He was, now, old and infirm ; and the Bishop wrote, on his behalf, to the Beneficed Clergy of the Archdeaconry on the 28th of May, 1342, informing them that, as the Archdeacon would not be able to hold his Ordinary Visitation, and would, consequently, be deprived of his procurations, he relied on their giving him substantial help, out of courtesy and gratitude for his services in the past. Carletone, however, felt that he would never again be equal to the discharge of the duties of so arduous a post ; for the Archdeaconry comprised the entire County of Cornwall, and the difficulty of moving from place to place was very great. It seems, too, that he had never been really in touch with the Cornish people, whose tongue he did not understand ; and, yearning for his native County and the many friends from whom he had been separated so long, he obtained the Bishop's permission to exchange, with John de St. Paul,³ for the Rectory of Brington, in Huntingdonshire. A pathetick letter which he wrote to the Bishop on the occasion was copied into the Register.⁴ "I am bound," he told him, "to visit all the Churches, and many other places, every year, inspecting the Books, Vestments, and other Ornaments, correcting wayward souls, ascertaining whether, or not, the Churches are duly served, and doing many other things which involve great toil. I cannot possibly do my duty any longer, being well stricken in years and weak in body ; and I am filled, every day, with remorse, when I think of the consequences to others of such a collapse. Moreover," he added, "I have never got on well with these Cornish folk, for they are a truly wonderful race, of a rebellious temper, unwilling to be taught or to submit to correction. A more influential man than myself is needed to deal with them ; one who is on familiar terms with the King and the Prince, and other Magnates of the Realm, who would give him their support in difficulties which I cannot deal with, seeing that I have but few friends in these parts, and am too weak and ailing to stand up, alone, against so many rebels." He thought however, that he was still equal to light work in a country parish ; and he would be happy if he could go to Brington, where he could visit his few parishioners every day, free from the fatigue of long journeys, and surrounded by old friends, who could speak to him in his own English tongue. And John de St. Paul was exactly the man to deal with Cornishmen, and make them submit to his authority. The exchange was effected on the 19th of June, 1346.

A Provincial Council was held in London in 1342, to deal with general questions of Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction.¹ The Bishop wrote to excuse himself from attending, being ill and afraid to undertake so long a journey in the winter; but, in the end he was forced to go, in obedience to a Royal Writ, requiring him to appear, at Westminster, on the 29th of September, to shew cause why he had resisted John de Sodbury, Hamon de Direworthi, and others, whom the King had commissioned to deal with certain alleged outrages, committed, in Devon and Cornwall, by Ecclesiastical persons under cover of the Privileges of the Clergy and the Liberties of the Church.² It is evident that these men acted in a high-handed manner. They commenced their operations by arresting Paul Brey, Professor of Civil Law, Richard Giffard, and John de Piltone, priests, and Rectors of Churches having cure of souls, whom they condemned to banishment and outlawry, even going so far as to pronounce them worthy of death. It was not likely that the Bishop would sit still while this was going on. He forthwith cited them all, as having incurred the Sentence of Excommunication, to appear before him, at Clyst, on the first Juridical day after the 8th of September, the Feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin; and it is evident from the consternation which ensued that they had, at any rate, exceeded their instructions. Hamund de Direworthi could not wait till the appointed day, but presented himself at Clyst on the 4th. The Bishop was, of course, surprised to see him so soon, and asked him what he wanted. He replied that he had ventured to anticipate the date of the appointment, because he was anxious to tell the Bishop that he had been an unwilling agent from the first, having been forced to serve under the Royal Commission by threats of forfeiture of all his goods; and he confessed that he could offer no excuse for his conduct, as he had acted with his eyes open, and in violation of his conscience. After a searching examination on all crucial points, the Bishop received his confession and absolved him, requiring him, by way of penance, to make publick confession of his errors, before the King's Council and elsewhere, and to take every step in his power to undo the mischief which he had done. Another of the Commissioners, John Berde, Under-sheriff of Devon, also anticipated the appointed day; he appeared at Clyst on the 6th, and confessed that he was guilty of the charges brought against him, except that he had not, personally, taken part in pronouncing the sentences of outlawry. The Bishop pronounced him excommunicate; but, on his humble petition, he was absolved, and a like penance was enjoined. Richard Duraunt, coroner, appeared on the 10th; he acknowledged that he had done everything that he was charged with, and that it was he who had pronounced the sentences of outlawry. He was not at all penitent; so he was excommunicated, and departed unabsolved. But six days afterwards he returned to Clyst, and with due humility and tears confessed his errors, and the Bishop absolved him after he had taken an oath never to offend against the Liberties of the Church again. The other Commissioner, John de Sodbury, Rector of Shepton-Malet, was the most hardened and violent of all. The Bishop describes him as "a priest, delicately nurtured by the Church, his holy Mother, from the patrimony of the Crucified, who had sharpened his tongue like a sword, uttering mad and blasphemous words against his Mother, her Ministers and Liberties"; he had even ventured to arrest certain clerks in the Cathedral, before the High Altar. This man was determined to resist the Bishop's authority to the last; and, instead of appearing in person, he sent his proctor to Clyst, who, imposing on the Bishop's patience, contrived to waste eight days in making frivolous excuses for the absence of his principal. Sodbury was, then, excommunicated; but he had already complained of Grandisson's strenuous resistance to the King, who issued a Writ on the 3rd of September, commanding the Bishop to appear, and shew cause, at Westminster immediately after Michaelmas. By a happy coincidence, as the Bishop tells us, the Provincial Council was in full session at the time, and he resolved to make the most of the opportunity. Accompanied by all the Prelates and other Magnates of the Realm, he appeared before the Council, which was presided over by the Duke of Cornwall, in the King's absence; and the case was heard and determined in the Bishop's favour by an unanimous vote, the sentences of outlawry being declared null and void, and all other proceedings of the Commissioners within the two Counties suspended till the next Session of Parliament. By this time Sodbury was penitent enough, and the Duke interceded with the Bishop on his behalf, promising for him that he would be faithful to the Church for the time to come, and make amends for the evil that he had wrought. He made his submission before the Provincial Council; and on the 21st of October, in the presence of the Archbishop and his Suffragans, Bishop Grandisson absolved him, in the Lady-Chapel of St. Paul's, after he had taken oath, on the Archbishop's Cross, to stand by the Mandates of the Church.

The Bishop left London shortly after these events, and we find him at Ottery on the 31st of October, 1342.¹ He remained at Exeter, or in its neighbourhood, till the beginning of May, 1343, when he started for London, on his¹ way to the Roman Court at Avignon. He reached Dover² on the 25th, where he appointed William de Crouthorne (his Official-Principal), William de Nassington, and Benedict de Pastone, his Vicars-General, to administer the Diocese during his absence. After this date there are no entries in the Register till the 12th of September,³ on which day he wrote to the Nuncios, explaining the delay in answering their communication on the subject of certain procurations which were due to them on account of the expenses of their recent embassy to England. Though it was dated on the 31st of October, it had not been delivered to him till about the 3rd of May, when he had just arrived in London, and was on the point of starting for Avignon; but he had commissioned the Treasurer (Richard de Wydeslade), and the Archdeacon of Barnstaple to deal with the matter in his absence; and now, immediately on his return, having received a reminder on his way through London, he hastened to complete the business. And, certainly, no time was lost, for the Acquittance is dated only ten days later.⁴

At this point, the character of the Register becomes wholly changed: with few exceptions, only the more important Acts of the Bishop are recorded; and, as these were, in nearly every case, performed at Exeter, Clyst, or Chudleigh, we are no longer able to follow his movements about the Diocese. Dispensations, Licences, Letters-Dimissory, and the like, which he was accustomed to issue from all sorts of places, have nearly altogether disappeared, and there can be no doubt that they were recorded in separate quaterni (which have been lost), as they were at the beginning of his Episcopate.⁵ I must be content, therefore, to give brief notices of the more important of the existing entries.⁶

⁶ It would, of course, be impossible, within the narrow limits of a Preface, to notice all matters of interest recorded in this bulky Register: neither is it necessary that I should attempt the task, as the Index will be found, I hope, a complete guide to the contents of the three Volumes. But it may be well to direct attention to some of the more remarkable entries; viz., a Mandate touching the Dedication of Cornish Churches to unknown local Saints—their legends and acts (p. 585): a remarkable case of "Child-Marriage" and subsequent Divorce—Richard, Earl of Arundel, aged about seven years, and Isabella, a daughter of the late Hugh le Despenser, aged about eight (p. 988): the extraordinary vagaries, at Dartmouth, of Hugh, Archbishop of Damascus; this man served as coadjutor to the Archbishop of York, 1344—1351; in 1347 he came into the Diocese of Exeter, and, without licence from the Bishop, presumed to exercise Episcopal functions,—it need not be said that Grandisson was not remiss in dealing with him; the case came before Archbishop Stratforde, and eventually the offender, having made his submission, at Lambeth, 3 Sept., 1347, was absolved, at Croydon, on the 4th by the Commissaries of the Bishop of Exeter (pp. 1027—1031): Excommunication of Margery Ryvel for practising divinations at Modbury and Dartmouth (p. 1044): the doings of a fanatical

On the 18th of October, 1343, the Bishop was at Bishop's Tawton, keeping the Anniversary of his Consecration by the celebration of Mass in the Parish-Church ; and, after the Gospel, while he was preaching, a body of armed men suddenly rushed in, intending, it was believed, to murder him. He was rescued from their violence, for the Church was full of Clergy and Lay-folk ; and he immediately excommunicated all the offenders—"sons of perdition," as he calls them, "blasphemous and barbarous men, behaving like infidels." This outrage was due to the old enmity against Archdeacon John de Northwode, the Bishop's nephew, and had been organized by John Peris, an intruder who claimed the Archdeaconry of Totnes for himself and had been excommunicated. Amongst the rioters were John atte Watere, of Combe Martyn, the pretender's nephew, and John de Bodeville, his cousin.¹

On the 30th of November, the Bishop, finding it necessary to intervene again in the case of Bodmin Priory (which, through gross mismanagement, was being brought to desolation), wrote to the Prior and Convent in severe terms, telling them that his patience was quite exhausted, and that, unless they immediately obeyed his Mandate, the Prior would be deprived, as utterly unworthy.² On the 1st of December, 1346, the Bishop issued his Mandate for the Visitation of the Priory, which was followed on the 20th of April, 1347, by the issue of an Ordinance for its reform and better governance, during the Suspension of the Prior.³

On the 21st of December, 1345, Juliana Lampre, who had succeeded Margaret Aunger as Abbess of Canonsleigh, received her Benediction at Chudleigh. An interesting account is given of all the proceedings in her election.⁴ Brother John Gras (or Cras), Abbat of Torre, received his Benediction at the same time. Polsloe Priory became vacant on the 15th of April, 1347, by the death of Margery (or Margaret) de Wydepole ; whose successor, Juliana de Brutone, was elected on the 22nd of the same month : in this case, also, a full account of the proceedings is recorded.⁵

The Cathedral was the scene of a memorable event in 1347. Richard Fitz-Ralph, Dean of Lichfield, had been appointed Archbishop of Armagh, on the 31st of July, 1346, by Pope Clement VI, who, on the 12th of January, granted him permission to be consecrated by any Catholick Bishop whom he might select. His choice fell upon Bishop Grandisson, who consecrated him on the 8th of July with great solemnity ; the Bishops of Bath and Wells, Salisbury, and St. Asaph assisting. Newenham, and Buckfast were present on the occasion with many Clerks, and Knights and other laymen. And we are told that, after the conclusion of the ceremony, the Archbishop rode through the streets of Exeter, in his Pontificals, on a palfrey covered with a white cloth, after the custom of the Roman Court.¹ Five days later he was commissioned by Bishop Grandisson² to act for a time, as his coadjutor ; and it is recorded that "he made the circuit of nearly the whole Diocese, confirming children and dedicating Churches, etc." It is probable that the Bishop availed himself of the opportunity to make this arrangement, that he might be free to deal with certain serious disorders in the north of his Diocese, which demanded his immediate intervention. The peace of the Church had, for a long time past, been disturbed and the Liberties of the Clergy infringed, by influential but turbulent laymen, who did not hesitate to resort to acts of gross violence, in order to secure their ends. They had been denounced, as we have seen, by the Council recently held in London, and had been condemned by the King to whom some of them appealed ; and these excesses were not confined to the Duchy of Cornwall, but were rampant in all parts of the Province of Canterbury. The King was greatly moved by the reports which reached him, and he requested the Archbishop and Bishops to issue a general sentence of Excommunication against the offenders, and that without delay.³ The chief offender in the Diocese of Exeter, at this time, was Sir Theobald de Greneville, head of a most antient and influential Family in North Cornwall, who had been lords of the great Manors of Kilkhampston and Bideford from time immemorial. He was only four years old when his father, Henry de Greneville, died in 1328 ; so he must have been in his twenty-third year at this time. The Bishop, with habitual plainness of speech, describes him as "a youthful Knight, or rather a mere tyro, prodigal of his knightly honour, having no fear of God before his eyes, no reverence for the Church ; regardless of the opinion of his fellow men and of his own reputation. When he ought to have stood by the side of his King in the battlefield, he skulked at home ; and when he brandished his sword, it was not, as he was in duty bound, against the enemies of the Church and Realm, but against God himself, His Church and her Ministers, and against simple, poor, and unoffending country-folk, all alike the objects of his ungovernable rage." He had many adherents, including such "notorious malefactors" as Thomas de Mertone, Richard Tyrel, John de Lunes-cote, and John Trenger ; a significant list, shewing how widespread and serious were the dangers which Grandisson had to face. These men and their retainers, to the number of about five hundred, invaded the Manor of Bishop's Tawton on the 24th of March, 1347, at dawn of day. They were all armed, "after the manner of men arrayed for mortal combat"; and, having disposed their forces on every side, so that no one could escape, they attacked the Manor-house, the house of the Vicar, and even the houses of some of the Bishop's tenants, breaking down the doors, and carrying off everything on which they could lay their hands, to the value of more than two hundred marks. The attack was so sudden that all were taken by surprise, and resistance was almost impossible; but the victims did their best to defend themselves and were mercilessly maltreated, some of them being killed.¹ All the offenders were excommunicated; but the rebellion, for it was nothing else, was by no means quelled. The next outrage was committed in Greneville's own parish of Kilhampton.² Thomas de Stapeldon, who had been Rector since 1324,³ died in 1342;⁴ and the Bishop, soon afterwards, sequestrated all the revenues of the Benefice, the buildings having been allowed to fall into a scandalous state of dilapidation.⁵ The Grenevilles were the Patrons; but Theobald was a minor at the time, and the right of patronage was claimed and exercised by Sir John de Raleghe, of Charles, who presented Thomas de Cruce, Rector of Whitstone, and the Bishop admitted him. But Theobald was determined that his kinsman, Walter de Merton, a son of the late Sir Richard, should be the new Rector; and the latter, being quite unscrupulous, forthwith intruded himself and took possession, in defiance of the Bishop. This was, of course, an intolerable state of things, and Grandisson excommunicated the offender on the 21st of August, 1347.⁶ A tremendous struggle ensued; for Greneville would not give way, and, of course, the Bishop could not. Monitions, requisitions, and inhibitions were tried in vain; and, meanwhile, the issues were confused by the action of the rival Patrons, who had carried their case to the Court of King's Bench. The Judges decided in Theobald's favour, mistaking the case (per errorem), and the Court of Canterbury, misled by their error, ordered Walter to be instituted forthwith. The Bishop, however, immediately declared that the Admission of the intruder, so obtained, was null and void, on the ground that Thomas, the Rector in possession, had appealed to the Holy See.

² There had been trouble in this parish for some time; for, the Bishop having appointed Thomas Poddynge, Rector of Exbourne, on the 17th of October, 1336, to serve as coadjutor to the aged Rector, Thomas de Stapeldon (p. 829), one Thomas de Moltone, an unworthy clerick, invaded the Rectory-house, and, finding the unfortunate coadjutor sitting at supper in the hall, sprung upon him suddenly and stabbed him with a dagger (pp. 844, 850).

And he was not mistaken ; for the Roman Court, by Decree, restored the expelled Rector to his Benefice, and condemned the intruder in the costs of the suits, requiring him to refund the large sum of money of which he had plundered the Benefice during his usurpation. The case was re-heard in the King's Court, with the result that the former Judgement was annulled, and Sir Theobald was ordered to refund the costs which he had, in error, recovered from Sir John de Raleghe. The proceedings were, officially, reported to the Bishop, who was directed to regard the Benefice as void, and admit thereto any fit clerk who might be presented to him by Sir John de Raleghe. But Walter, and his wrong-headed Patron, Sir Theobald, were not disposed of so easily, and they did not hesitate to defy both the Courts and the Bishop. On the 5th of July, 1348, Grandisson issued a Commission to the Abbat of Hartland and the Prior of Launceston, who were directed to proceed to Kilkhampton and deal with the offenders on the spot.¹ They were warned that they would not find the task an easy one, as it was known that Theobald and his minions had taken possession of the Church, and were prepared to hold it, by force of arms, against all comers. This was not encouraging ; but the two Commissaries set out on their dangerous enterprise on the 22nd, and on the 30th they reported the results to the Bishop.² They told him that, as they were entering a narrow lane close to the Rectory-house, they were stopped by a crowd of armed men, who had painted their faces or wore masks lest they should be recognised, and dared them, at peril of their lives, to approach the Church. The bows of these ruffians were bent ; and, as the Commissaries and their attendants seemed inclined, for the moment, to hold their ground, they were immediately attacked with the utmost violence ; arrows flew amongst them in all directions, and their very horses were belaboured with clubs. Resistance was out of the question ; and, to save their lives, they fled from the place, their enemies pursuing them along the road for a mile, pelting them with stones, and beating brutally some of the Abbat's servants whom they overtook. The ringleaders³ were Sir Theobald, Walter de Mertone, his intruded nominee, and Thomas, Walter's brother ; who, as soon as the defeated Commissaries were out of sight, returned to the Church, with their followers, and proceeded to fortify it effectually, building stone walls against some of the windows. They all remained in the sacred building for several days and nights, defiling it abominably, as the outraged Bishop tells us, and turning it into a den of thieves. As for the Commissaries, they had been driven out of Kilkhampton, but they were not utterly defeated. It was the Feast of St. Mary Magdalene, and, anticipating their failure at the head-quarters of the rebellion, they had requested the Vicars of three adjacent parishes, Launcells,

Stratton, and Poughill, to keep their congregations in Church as long as possible, that they might be witnesses of the promulgation of the Bishop's Mandate. This was done, without interruption, in each of the Churches, and in the vulgar tongue, so that all might understand.¹ We are not told what the Bishop did in these embarrassing circumstances ; but the results of his action are duly recorded. On the 14th of January, 1349-50, Sir Theobald, accompanied by Sir John de Raleghe, of Beaudeport, appeared before him at Chudleigh, and, on bended knee, confessed his sin and prayed the Bishop to absolve him. The Act of Submission (written in French, and given in full in the Register), was read by Sir John, on Greneville's behalf ; and, the Bishop having addressed him, with all solemnity, as to the heinousness of his offences against God and the Church, he was sworn on the Holy Gospels to be obedient and faithful for the time to come ; his sureties being Sir John de Dynham, Sir John de Raleghe, and Almaric Fitz-Waryn, Sheriff of Devon. Thereupon the Bishop absolved him, enjoining on him, as part of his penance, that he should immediately proceed to Ottery, and offer a wax taper in the Collegiate Church. The Precentor of Exeter, the Provost of Glasney, the Precentor of Crediton, and nineteen other clericks and laymen, summoned as witnesses, were present on this important occasion.² The disputed question as to the patronage of Kilkhampton was, soon afterwards, settled by compromise : Thomas de Cruce disappears from the scene ; and John de Raleghe, priest, was instituted on the 28th of October, 1350, on the presentation of Sir Theobald. He had been previously presented by Sir John de Raleghe, of Charles, and the Bishop now admitted him on the presentation of the repentant Sir Theobald, who was declared to be the true Patron.³

John de Engleborne, Prior of Plympton, died on the 14th of September, 1347, and was succeeded by Brother Robert de Forde on the 3rd of November. The proceedings in this election are also⁴ set forth at length.⁵ The Rectory of St. Wendron, which included the town of Helston, had long ago been appropriated to the Abbat and Convent of Rewley, near Oxford, who had been accustomed to starve their Vicars, not even allowing them a house of residence—a serious drawback in the case of a parish of more than 12,000 acres, with two Churches about two and a half miles apart. John Breyt (or Bret), who was instituted to the Vicarage⁶ on the 21st of September, 1347, immediately laid his hard case before the Bishop, who was not slow in applying a remedy. All former taxations were withdrawn ; and, within little more than a month, on the 28th of October, the Bishop issued his Ordinance, securing to the Vicar and his successors a very liberal endowment, and requiring the Rectors to build immediately in the town of Helston and as near as possible to the dependent Chapel there, a suitable manse, of the value of at least four shillings of rent per annum.¹

The times were lawless, especially in this remote far-western land ; and before the troubles in North Devon were settled the Bishop was compelled to cope with a serious outbreak in the extreme south of the County. There had been dissensions for some time, in several parishes ; and, at last, the Archdeacon of Totnes, John de Northwode, sent William de Tounstalle, to make inquiry on the spot, and try to restore peace between the disputants. The Commissary summoned the parties to appear before him in the Parish-Church of Yealmpton ; but no sooner had he taken his seat at the High Altar, and attempted to open the proceedings, than he was set upon by a howling mob—"sons of perdition," as Grandisson called them,—about two hundred of whom, armed to the teeth, made their way through the Church, assailed Tounstalle and the Advocates and Proctors who were with him with drawn swords, and, snatching out of their hands the Rolls and Registers and other Muniments of the Archdeaconry, drove them all out of the Church, assaulting them violently as they fled. Murder would, doubtless, have been committed, the Bishop tells us, had not a brave Lady, Dame Margaret de Monthermer, whose house was close to the Church, opened her doors to the fugitives and sheltered them from "the satellites of Satan." "O how wretched and miserable is our fate," he exclaimed, as he wrote his Mandate, and, after his manner, committed the utterance which was forced from him to his pen, for us,—“what place can ever be safe, who among us can ever feel secure, if even the Church is exposed to such calamities, and the Clergy, her favoured sons, to such dreadful peril ?” He wrote on the 21st of March, 1347-8, to the Abbat of Tavistock, the Prior of Plympton, the Rectors of North Bovey and Petertavy, and the Vicar of Suttone, commanding them to meet in the parish-church of Suttone on the 13th of April, Palm-Sunday, there to pronounce Sentence of Excommunication against all the offenders, whose absolution, on their submission, he reserved specially to himself.²

The Abbat of Buckfast, Brother Stephen de Cornubia, received his Benediction, at Chudleigh, on the 8th of June, being Whitsunday, 1348. Once more there was trouble at Tavistock ; the Bishop had been most patient with Abbat Courtenay, as he had been with his unworthy predecessor Bonus ; but his cousin, who had begun well,³ soon yielded to the temptations which surrounded him, and became utterly worldly, abandoning himself to the pleasures of the chase and wasting the revenues of his House more and more recklessly, mortgaging or selling its possessions in order to provide funds to meet the cost of his extravagant living. He submitted, as we have seen,¹ to the Bishop's Ordinance in 1336. There was no real improvement, however, and Grandisson was compelled to intervene again on the 27th of June and on the 5th of July, 1348.² On the 4th of December he issued a strongly worded Decree, addressed to the Abbat and Convent, and specially to the former. Divine Service was to be duly and regularly executed in the Conventual Church, to which end the Monks were commanded to abandon altogether the unprofitable habit of wandering about the country-side, in which they had been accustomed to indulge. The Abbat was to consort with his Brethren, and take counsel with them, instead of with certain lay persons, of doubtful character, who had been his chosen companions in the past; he was to reside continuously, taking his meals in the common Refectory, or, at any rate, in the house close by which went by the name of "Misericordia," unless he happened to be ill, or found it necessary to entertain apart guests of distinction; his useless and burdensome crowd of servants, and all his hounds, were to be sent away; his chaplain was to sleep in his chamber, whenever he withdrew himself from the common dormitory, and to accompany him when, for necessary recreation and rest, he resorted to one of their Manor-houses, all expenditure being accounted for in writing to those who had been appointed to administer the goods of the House; and as, in time past, he had misused his own official seal and the common seal of the Convent for unlawful purposes, he was forbidden to use them again without the express consent of the entire Community: his private seal he was permitted to retain; but he was forbidden to use it to the prejudice of his House, under pain of Excommunication. The Bishop reminded him of the forbearance with which his frequent offences had been endured for many years, and gave him to understand that, if the barren fig-tree were spared for yet another year, it must bear fruit, or he would be compelled to cut it down.³ But the end was near; Courtenay died in 1349, probably one of the victims of the plague known as "the Black Death."

And now, for a while, the Registrum Commune fails us almost entirely. For the general routine work of the Diocese was all but paralysed, and there could have been, with one notable exception, but little to record. On the 7th of July, 1348, the terrible

Pestilence, which, originating in the Far East and following the trade-routes, had already overspread great part of Europe, reached our shores at the port of Melcombe-Regis (Weymouth), in Dorsetshire.¹ It spread with great rapidity through the Southern and Western Counties, carrying death and desolation in every direction, and especially in Devonshire; in Cornwall, apparently, except in a few localities, and notably at Bodmin, the visitation was less severely felt. We do not know exactly when it entered the Diocese; probably, as early as July. The average number of Institutions in ordinary years, on avoidance by death, resignation, or exchange, was thirty-six, and in June 1348, there were only three Institutions; but in July there were eight, which would give a yearly average of ninety-six; in August there were only three (the normal number); but it must be remembered that Institution did not, as a rule, follow immediately on a vacancy, and this would be true, especially, of the period in question, when the sudden outbreak of the plague had thrown everything into confusion. In September there were seven, bringing the annual average up to eighty-four. In October² there were only two; which does not prove that there were fewer deaths amongst the Beneficed Clergy, but rather that, in the general

¹ So the Monk of Malmesbury tells us in his Eulogium Historiarum,—"Circa Festum Translacionis Sancti Thome, Martiris, crudelis pestilencia, cunctis futuris seculis detestanda, de partibus transmarinis in Australem sinum Anglie, ad portum qui dicitur Melcumbe, in Dorsetia, applicuit, que, Australem plagam circumquaque perlustrans, in partibus Dorsetie, Devonie, et Somersætie, innumera-bilem populum miserabiliter occidit . . . Deinde Bristolliam veniens, paucis admodum relictis, versus partes Aquilonares transiens, nec civitatem nec villam, nec capham, nec eciam nisi raro domum relinquens, quin majorem partem vel totum interfecit, ita quod quinta pars hominum et mulierum ac infantium in tota Anglia sepulture traditur. Unde tanta fuit hominum penuria quod vix vivi sufficiebant ad infirmos custodiendos et mortuos sepeliendos." This was a contemporaneous, and there is every reason to believe a trustworthy account, except as to the extent of the mortality, which there is abundant evidence to show far exceeded one fifth of the population. On this point, and on the whole subject generally, I must refer the reader to an admirable and exhaustive treatise,—The Great Pestilence, now commonly known as The Black Death, by Dr. Gasquet, O.S.B. (published by Simpkin Marshall, and Co., in 1893), to which it was my privilege to contribute; and a valuable and most interesting account of the havoc wrought by this plague in the Diocese of Norwich will be found in a little volume by Dr. Jessopp, entitled The Coming of the Priars. Father Gasquet says (and he, certainly, proves his case), that "those who, having examined the records themselves, have the best right to form an opinion, are practically unanimous in considering that the disease swept away fully one-half of the entire population of England and Wales" (p. 194).

consternation, Patrons hesitated and those who were hoping for preferment wavered. We shall, probably, not be wide of the mark, therefore, if we take this month together with the following month, November, in which there were ten Institutions, and this would give a yearly average of seventy-two for each of the two months. There were six Institutions in December; thirty-one in January, and thirty-five in February. In March there were sixty, a yearly average of 720 ! The plague was then at its height. And, now, the Registrar begins to group his entries, not by the year, as heretofore, but by the month. Under April, 1349, we find fifty-three Institutions; in May there were forty-eight; in June, forty-six; in July, thirty-seven. In August the number fell to sixteen; but in September there were twenty-three. These figures, appalling as they are, do not, by any means, represent all the deaths that occurred amongst the Beneficed Clergy, but only the Institutions of as many as could be found to accept the vacant Benefices. For months afterwards, though by this time the plague had ceased,¹ there was but little diminution in the number of Institutions: there were sixteen in October, seventeen in November, fourteen in December; and, indeed, we do not again reach the normal figure—three in a month—till the end of 1350. It must not be supposed that this was due to cowardice, or to any reluctance on the part of the surviving priests to accept posts of danger in sorely impoverished parishes; at least half of the whole body, and probably much more than half, had fallen; and Patrons, where they survived (and in many cases they had died leaving no representatives), could find no one to present; so that to living after living the Bishop was left to collate by lapse, as best he could. Neither was his task an easy one, and extraordinary and irregular measures were found necessary to meet the difficulty. He applied for help to the Pope, and obtained permission to ordain fifty illegitimate candidates for Holy Orders, and a hundred others who were under the Canonical age but had attained their twenty-first year. He had represented to the Pope that it was impossible to find priests to serve the vacant Churches, which, on every side were lying desolate.² This is a terrible record; and, if it be examined in detail, the awful character of the visitation will be still more apparent. At Ashburton, for instance, John de Undele was instituted to the Vicarage in November, 1335,³ and it appears that he held it till the fatal year, when he was succeeded by David Penylis, who died just before Christmas, 1348. His Institution is not recorded, owing, no doubt, to the confusion which prevailed; but on the 1st of January Richard Yurl was instituted, who seems to have fallen immediately, for his successor, Thomas de Botercombe, was instituted only ten days later.¹ Again, at Dawlish, we find Thomas de Beauforest Vicar in 1346²; within less than three years, on the 22nd of January, 1348-9, he was succeeded by Hugh de Combe,³ who, in his turn, was succeeded by John Andreu, on the 1st of March following⁴; he was stricken down in little more than two months, John Payewel succeeding him on the 7th of May.⁵ Apparently, on his death, the Patrons could find no one ready to take the dangerous post, and the Living was allowed to lapse to the Bishop, who collated Robert de Luttetone on the 9th of August, 1351.⁶ Thus far, it will be seen, I have dealt only with the Incumbents of Parishes and other Benefices, who, as Dr. Gasquet points out (p. 204), represented only a portion of the clerical body; and, in any estimate of the whole, allowance must be made for Chaplains and others, who were far more numerous than is commonly supposed. He gives good reasons for his belief that the total death-roll in the clerical order throughout the land would be some 25,000; a large number, indeed; but it "can hardly be considered excessive, when it is remembered that the peculiar nature of their priestly duties rendered them specially liable to infection." As to the Religious Houses in the Diocese, the records are scanty, but these are enough to shew that they shared, to the full, the common lot. John de Courtenay, Abbat of Tavistock, died in 1349; and his successor, Richard de Esse, was seized, immediately after his Confirmation, with so grievous a sickness⁷ that he could not go to the King, who, on the 17th of October, wrote to Bishop Grandisson, commanding him to proceed to Tavistock⁸ and receive the Abbat's fealty. And on the 21st of September, 1351, the Bishop appropriated the Rectory of Whitchurch to the Abbey, which, he says, had long suffered from divers misfortunes and was greatly impoverished; the result partly, as we have seen, of the extravagance of the last two Abbats, but, also, of the destruction of their property in the Isles of Scilly by pirates, and of the ruin wrought by the Pestilence.⁹ Whatever his sickness may have been, the Abbat recovered, and lived to rule his House till 1362. The death of Roger de Raleghe, Abbat of Hartland, was reported to the Bishop, as having recently occurred, on the 13th of March, 1348-9.¹⁰ Nothing is said, in either of these cases as to the fate of the Brothers and the other inmates; but it is not likely that all escaped; and such records as exist shew that the

Monasteries suffered most severely, and in many instances were almost depopulated. At Newenham, for instance, Abbat Walter de la Houe, and two of his Monks, alone survived; no fewer than twenty Monks and three lay-brothers having been cut off.¹ At Bodmin the Augustinian Priory was, in like manner, all but destroyed; and, the Bishop's intervention having been found necessary, a full account of the visitation and its results is given in the Register.² John de Kilkhamptone, the Prior, died on the 27th of February,³ and, almost simultaneously, all the Canons were cut off except two—Roger de Honytone and William de Tregawythan. These terrified survivors wrote to the Bishop on the 17th of March in pathetick terms, telling him that they were left like orphans, and entreating him to provide a Superior for their House as quickly as possible. On the 19th the Bishop wrote to the Prior of Launceston, telling him of this Letter, and adding that, as he could not see his way to appoint either of the survivors, one of whom was in very feeble health and the other quite unfit for such a responsible post, he had decided to appoint a Canon of his House, Brother Oger Bante, in whose general fitness and prudence he had all confidence. The Prior of Launceston replied on the 21st, consenting to the Bishop's proposal, but saying that he did so with great reluctance, as he could ill spare a Brother so capable and so useful to his House.⁴ Bante was formally appointed on the 22nd, and a Mandate was issued for his immediate Induction. The mortality in the town and parish was frightful, no fewer than fifteen hundred of the inhabitants having died of the plague,⁵ including the Vicar, whose successor was instituted on the 8th of April, 1349.⁶ John de Puteolis, Prior of St. James's, Exeter,⁷ died some time before the 9th of December, 1349, on which day his successor, John Lespert, was instituted⁸; but he was not able to reside, the House being brought to such desolation that the Brothers had nothing to eat! In the neighbouring Priory of St. Nicholas, Prior John de Brethone died in 1348-9; John de Wye, his successor, was admitted on the 26th of

Mr. Davidson tells us (History of Newenham Abbey, p. 86) that 88 secular persons living within the walls, also, perished, "ad magnum dampnum hujus domus," but he does not tell us where he found his quotation; and Dr. Oliver gives the same figures (Monasticon, p. 359), but cites no authority.

March,¹ but within a few weeks he also was cut off, and his successor, Thomas Ovyngge, Monk of Battle Abbey, was instituted on the 6th of June.² Nicholas Isabel, Prior of St. Michael's Mount, died in 1349, and was succeeded by Brother John Hardy on the 3rd of October.³ The Master of St. John's Hospital, in the same city, whose name has not been preserved, succumbed, no doubt, to the fatal sickness, for his successor, Brother John Bolehille, was instituted on the 10th of February, 1348-9.⁴ William Jaune, Dean of St. Crantock, who was collated in June, 1348,⁵ must have died soon afterwards, for his name disappears from the Register, and William Trevenwythe succeeded him before the 1st of February, 1351-2.⁶ William de la Huna, Prior of Minster, near Boscastle, was carried off by the sickness on the 26th of April, 1349, and we find that, soon afterwards, "the House was so impoverished by the death of tenants and labourers that it could not support both its members and the Chaplain they were bound to find to do the parish-work, as neither the Prior nor his brethren spoke English, or rather Cornish" (Rot. Pat. 29 Edw. III, p. 2, m. 19).⁷ Imbert, Prior of Barnstaple, died in 1349, his successor being instituted on the 9th of December.⁸ At Pilton, the Prior, John de Lakenham, died early in 1349.⁹ The Hospital of Clyst-St. Gabriel, a Home for the relief of twelve blind or worn-out priests, suffered severely.¹⁰ The Prior of Modbury, John de Fovea, died early in 1349, and his successor was instituted on the 9th of June.¹¹ The Abbats of Buckfast and of Torre died at about the same time, and their successors received their Benediction together on the 21st of May.¹² It will be observed that, with two or three exceptions, we are told nothing as to the fate of the members of these Houses; but there can be no doubt that in all these cases, as at Newenham and Bodmin, the Superiors were not the only victims. It need not be said that the Bishop never left his Diocese during all this disastrous time: that was nothing new for him, as the reader knows. He remained at Chudleigh or at Clyst¹³ throughout those terrible months, engaged day by day in the appalling task of receiving ever accumulating tales of woe¹⁴ from every part of his

The Bishop's work in the Cathedral was still carried on, as the Fabrick-Rolls testify; and between Michaelmas, 1349, and Michaelmas, 1350, the expenses were mainly met by gifts, legacies, and mortuaries—"tempore mortalitatis."¹⁴ And not from the Clergy and the Patrons only, but from all sorts and conditions of men, as the Court-rolls and other contemporaneous records abundantly testify (Gasquet, p. 172). In 1351 the Canons, Vicars, and other members of the great Diocese, and doing his utmost to provide for his orphaned and desolate Churches. The Diocese "was fortunate indeed," says Dr. Oliver, "in possessing such a Pastor and Bishop as John de Grandisson. He had a commanding influence and large pecuniary resources; and he was never so happy as when he could console and relieve his afflicted and indigent fellow-creatures."¹ There was a recrudescence of the pestilence in September, 1361, "in a mitigated form," we are told; but it must be remembered that, if there were fewer deaths, there was but a remnant left to die! That it wrought great havoc amongst the Clergy the Register of Institutions clearly shews. In August there were three Institutions, the normal number; but in September there were four; in October, twelve; in November, twenty-four; in December, twenty (and now the Registrar again begins to group his entries under months, a plan which he had abandoned in 1352); in January, twenty-eight; in February, twenty-six; in March, twenty-four; in April, fifteen; in May, seven; and then the Registrar again abandons making his entries by months, which may be regarded as a sign that the sickness was past: there were, indeed, eight Institutions in June; fifteen in July; three in August; eleven in September; eight in October, and for some little time the normal number was exceeded; but some of these Institutions were, beyond all doubt, to Benefices which had become vacant when the plague was at its height, and to many Benefices the Bishop, as before, was left to collate by lapse.²

The long-standing controversy as to the King's claim to Jurisdiction in St. Buryan, as a Royal Chapel and Peculiar, which had apparently been happily settled by the submission of Dean Maunte, Cathedral Body who were resident, complained to the Bishop that several of the non-resident Canons, who were farming the Manors and appropriated Churches belonging to the Chapter, had failed to make their returns or transmit their rents to the Treasurer. On the 1st of April the Bishop directed the Dean to look into the matter and report. This was done on the 22nd, and it was shewn that the arrears amounted to no less than £365 13s. 2½d., or about £6,000 of our money! It is, of course, possible that the "Farmers" had not done all they might have done, and the terms of the Complaint and of the Bishop's Letter imply as much: but there can be no doubt that their defalcations were more apparent than real, their misfortune rather than their fault (pp. 1101, 1105).

It appears that, in the interval, the Dean and the Prebendaries had rebelled again, repudiating the Bishop's Jurisdiction, but expecting him, as they could not dispense with his services altogether, to ordain and confirm at their bidding, and to send them the Holy Oil whenever they required a supply. Of course, Grandisson refused to be made a mere episcopal hack after this fashion, and the King commanded him to shew cause for his refusal before the 18th of March. His claim to exercise Jurisdiction was indisputable, as he had no difficulty in shewing; but the King and the Duke had made up their minds, and he was forced to submit. From that time till the preferment of Dean Stanhope,² in 1817, the Deans received Institution from the King, or from the Duke of Cornwall, as Ordinary. Grandisson, was, of course, greatly moved; and, when his clerk brought to him, for his signature, the fair copy of his Return, he could not resist the temptation to speak his mind,—

“J. EXON., by my own hand. And I would that my Lords the King and the Prince, and his lieges, could only know all the circumstances of this business; for then they would clearly see and would determine that, for the avoiding of all manner of perils, it is far better that these men should submit themselves to their Bishops than that they should thus, with no one to rule over them, be left to perish utterly. For who can absolve them from such outrageous sins and excesses as they have been guilty of, apart from the authority of the Apostolick See? For very shame I hold my peace as to the reports which have reached me. But I may be permitted to speak as to things which are manifest to all men. Forasmuch as they are herded together, like brute beasts, in the very tail of the world, they contract marriages within all prohibited degrees, and get themselves divorced when they have been married lawfully. And so they fall under the Sentences imposed by Canon-Law, and never rise up again.”³

At about this time, the Prior and Convent of Frithelstock, who had frequently given much trouble to the Bishop, took it into their heads to build a chapel, just outside their enclosure, in a wood called "Wadeclyve." They had no Licence from the Bishop ; and, when he heard of their proceedings and ordered the works to be stopped, they defied him, and set up their altar, with an image of the Blessed Virgin above it, or rather, to quote the Bishop's words, "of the proud and disobedient Eve or the bold Diana." On the 17th of November, 1351, he appointed as his Commissaries, to deal with this offence peremptorily, the Dean-rural of Hartland and the Vicars of Monkleigh and Buckland-Brewer, who reported on the 31st of December that they had visited the place, received the submission of the Prior and Convent, and witnessed the complete demolition of the so-called chapel. An interesting missive, entitled "A wholesome Letter concerning Obedience," was addressed by the Bishop to his Commissaries on the 28th of January (p. 1110).

I must, perforce, pass lightly over the remaining years of Grandisson's Episcopate ; for the scanty entries¹ in the "Registrum Commune" are concerned almost entirely with routine work, and the folios for the years 1362—1369 have perished. A few matters of interest, however, demand special notice. There are several references to the War in France, beginning with a copy of the King's Writ, issued on the 9th of June, 1355, commanding prayers to be offered throughout the realm for the success of his contemplated invasion of that country (p. 1158). On the 11th of September the Bishop issued a general order to this effect, explaining to his people that, as all proposals for peace had been rejected by the enemy, the Prince of Wales was compelled to continue his campaign ; he asked them to pray fervently for the success of the English arms ; but, above all for the cessation of strife, that there might be no more shedding of the blood of Christians, for whom the Son of God shed His own blood, commanding us, by the mouth of His Apostle, to live, as far as lieth in us, at peace with all men.¹ In the following year the French were totally defeated, on the 19th of September, at Poitiers, and the French King was amongst the prisoners. On the 10th of October the King ordered his subjects to join him in giving God thanks for this signal success;² and on the 28th our Bishop complied with the terms of the Mandate,—“pro capcione Regis Francie”: it was a glorious victory; but let us, he wrote, implore our Saviour, Who hath shewed so great a token upon us for good, to over-rule it all to the increase of His own praise and the comfort and peace of His people.³ No reference is made to the landing of the Royal prisoner at Sandwich in 1357, or to his being set at liberty in 1360, only to find that he could not govern his subjects under the terms of release imposed on him by the victors; but we have a copy of a Letter addressed by the Bishop to his Diocese on the 25th of September, 1359, shortly before the renewal of hostilities, in which he exhorts the Faithful to pray earnestly for the success and safety of the King and the Prince and their army, trusting in the King of Kings and the grace of His Heavenly succour.⁴

On the 25th of July, 1331, Ralph de Tremur was instituted⁵ to Warleggan, in Cornwall, on the resignation of his uncle, John⁶: they were of an antient family long seated at Tremur, a manor in the adjacent parish of Lanivet. The parish is remote and small, consisting of a narrow strip of land between the parishes of Blisland and St. Neot, and bounded on the north by Temple and the Bodmin Moors; an insignificant Benefice in itself, but it was destined, as we shall see, to become famous throughout the land. At the time of his Institution he appears to have been studying in Oxford, and he at once obtained Licence of non-residence for a year from the ensuing Michaelmas, the Bishop requiring him to take accolite's and sub-deacon's Orders forthwith, and granting him Letters-Dimissory.⁷ On the 17th of October, 1332, this Licence was renewed for another year,⁸ and again, for yet another year, on the 10th of October, 1333.⁹ It is evident that he preferred residence in the University to the quiet routine of a country clergyman's life in the wilds of Cornwall; and in September, 1334, he resigned Warleggan.¹⁰ After this he is not mentioned in the Register for the space of twenty years. In the interval he had taken deacon's Orders; and he must have devoted himself assiduously to his studies at Oxford, for the Bishop tells us that he was a renowned Master of Arts, and a learned grammarian, able to speak fluently in four languages, in Latin, French, and

English, and in the Cornish and Breton tongue.”¹ But he adds that he was ashamed to remember that Tremur was a native of the Diocese of Exeter, for he was a most determined heretick, and spent his time in wandering about Devon and Cornwall, and in many other parts of England, spreading his pernicious errors, which were all the more dangerous because he was such a learned man. The case is of considerable interest; for Tremur must be regarded as, in some sort, the pioneer of the “New Learning,”—“un savant diacre,” to quote the words of a Reviewer of my Books, “qui trente ans avant Wycliffe, allait prêchant un peu partout contre le dogme de la transsubstantiation.”² This man, says the Bishop (in a letter addressed through his Official Principal, the Dean, and the four Archdeacons, to the whole Diocese,³ on the 7th of March, 1354-5), has lapsed into deadly heresy touching the Sacrament of our Lord’s Body and Blood—“the Sacrament in which all other Sacraments are completed, perfected, and established; by which the people of Christ are daily refreshed spiritually, that they may not faint by the way; than which it is impossible to imagine anything more worthy, or more conducive to the salvation of men, seeing that thereby the Faithful grow in grace, through the corporal, though invisible, Presence of their Saviour. Our Lord, Who is the Truth, said—My Flesh is meat indeed, and My Blood is drink indeed; and, again, Except ye eat the Flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his Blood, ye have no life in you: he that eateth My Flesh and drinketh My Blood hath eternal life, and I will raise him up at the last day; and, after His Resurrection, before he ascended, in the body, into Heaven, He made promise to His disciples, referring to this Sacrament, and saying—Lo, I am with you all the days, even unto the end of the world. But this man proclaims openly and teaches in secret otherwise than the Holy Catholick and Apostolick Church believes, preaches, and affirms; erroneously and heretically asserting and maintaining that the bread and wine are not changed substantially, by the words of Consecration, into the Flesh and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ; which manifestly, and beyond all doubt, is to subvert entirely the Catholick Faith, to make void every one of the Sacraments, and utterly to destroy the Truth of the Gospel. Worse than all, he does his best, through the malice of the devil, not only to lead others along with himself to destruction, but to secure the secret support, for the purpose of spreading his execrable errors, of simple and unlearned folk, ignorant of Theological Verities, and already prone to heresy.” In recording facts of history we are, of course, bound to put ourselves, as far as possible, in the place of the parties concerned, abstaining from all comment and controversy, and allowing the actors to speak for themselves; and, knowing, as we do, how greatly the Bishop must have been moved by the promulgation in his Diocese of a doctrine which he could not but regard as being destructive of the faith and teaching of the Church, we shall not be surprised by the strength of the language with which, after his manner, he denounced its author unsparingly—"O detestable tongue, more poisonous than the tongue of any mad dog, which ought to be cut out by the surgeons of the Church and of the Crown, to be torn into little bits, and cast to pigs and swine!" He cited Tremur to appear before him, if he could be found, and ordered the Mandate to be read, during Mass, in the Cathedral, and in every Church in the Diocese, forbidding the Faithful, under pain of Excommunication, to hold any sort of intercourse with the offender; "they were not to speak to him, or sit near him, or eat or drink with him, or pray with him, or encourage him in any way, by receiving him into their houses, shewing him hospitality, taking his part, or supplying him with anything that might help him to do his deadly work; but they were to shun him utterly till the time should come when he would no longer walk in darkness but in the light." So the Bishop was then, at any rate, hopeful. But we gather from a Letter which he wrote, about a year later, to the Bishop of London, that he had found the case a hopeless one.¹ In the interval he had been collecting evidence, and he brings a series of charges against Tremur which certainly prove that he was a violent and lawless man. "This iniquitous and blasphemous fellow," he wrote, "vilifying the Catholick Faith (and that not only in the Diocese of Exeter, but in that of London also) has had the audacity to say, in the presence of many persons of repute,—'Ye adore, idiotically, the work of your own hands: for what doth a priest do but gape over a small bit of bread and breathe upon it?' Moreover, deriding Blessed Peter, he declared him to have been a mere empty-pated rustick; and he called John, the Blessed Evangelist, a false and lying witness, because he said of himself that he was the Disciple whom Jesus loved; and, again, This is the Disciple which beareth witness of these things, and we know that his witness is true. But he has done even more execrable things than these and more horrible to pious ears; for, secretly stealing from a Church the Pyx which contained Christ's Body, he conveyed it into a house, took out the Sacrament and threw it into the fire, and carried the Pyx away with him." Moreover, some years after he had resigned Warleggan, he returned to the place, intruding himself with much violence on the Rector, his lawful successor, robbing him of his goods, and then setting fire to his house! Tremur had been excommunicated by the Court of Canterbury, when Simon de Islepe was Dean of the Arches, and therefore before October, 1349, when he became Archbishop. But Grandisson was not satisfied, and he pleaded for the degradation of the offender. "I have done everything in my power," he tells the Bishop of London, "and I have been careful to lay before my Lord of Canterbury all the facts of the case : unless justice be done, I will deliver my own soul by appealing to the Apostolick See." There is no record as to the result ; neither is Tremur mentioned again in the Register. That, in spite of his learning, he was an unscrupulous and dangerous fanatick no one can doubt ; by some he was thought to be a lunatick ; but Grandisson did not think so, maintaining throughout that there was too much method in his madness.

William, Lord Grandisson, the Bishop's father, died on the 27th of June, 1335, his wife, Sybilla, having predeceased him on the 21st of September, 1334. Peter, his son and heir, succeeded him, and died without issue, on the 10th of August, 1358, the Bishop succeeding to his honours, but not to his estates. He was, perhaps, as his biographer says, "the wealthiest Lord Bishop that Exeter had hitherto possessed,"¹ but, mainly, as the result of his frugality and self-denial. His munificence was boundless ; and his gifts to the Cathedral are described as countless by the compiler of a catalogue² of such gifts, beginning with those of the first Bishop, Leofric. He gave, we are told, "all the Books of the Choir ; Vestments of every colour ; Ornaments and jewels of gold and silver and of other material, the number of which is not fully recorded, here or elsewhere, because in his lifetime and after his death they were multiplied beyond number ; as God knoweth Who knoweth all things."³

² Ibid., p. 297.—Many of his gifts are mentioned in the Inventory of 1506, printed by Oliver in his Appendix to the Lives (p. 320-376).

³ Of his gifts to the Cathedral the most interesting, perhaps, is the "Legenda," still, happily, in fairly good preservation : it is written on vellum, in two volumes, numbered 3,504 and 3,505 in the Stuart Moore Catalogue or Kalendar,—"Legenda de usu Exoniensis Ecclesie, secundum ordinacionem et abbreviacionem Johannis de Grandissono, Episcopi." Of the three parts into which it is divided, the first contains "quicquid legitur de Biblia, in qua fiunt saltus, non mutato textu Biblie ; ut, quia omnia non possunt legi, saltem ille legantur que magis tempori correspondent" ; the second part contains sermons and homilies ; the third "Lecciones proprias Sanctorum." The Bishop recorded his gift on the first folio of each volume. Some of the words have been obliterated ; but a comparison of the two entries enables us to re-construct the inscription, as follows:—"Ego, Johannes de Grandissono, Exoniensis, do Ecclesie Exoniensi librum istum, cum pari suo, manu mea, anno Consecracionis mee xxxix^o, in festo Annunciacionis Dominice." Vol. I has been injured by damp ; but Vol. II is in excellent condition : both retain the original pig-skin binding ; and the latter retains, also, its loose cover with clasps. The writing is regular and well executed throughout, and the illuminations are good.—Another MS. may be mentioned here (No. 2,242), being the original copy of a Statute by the Bishop, at the foot of which he wrote,—"Confirma hoc, Deus, quod operatus es in nobis : manu nostra—Johannis de Grandissono, Exoniensis presbiteri." Appended to this document is a very fine impression of his Seal. That the Bishop was a learned and most industrious student to the end, and (as we say) very fond of his pen, his Registers and those of his predecessors, which he annotated throughout, abundantly shew. And see (p. 117)

The Bishop's Will was dated at Chudleigh, on the 8th of September,¹ 1368. It is an elaborate and most interesting Document, and I have printed it at length, with a translation², in the Appendix. He died, at Chudleigh, on the 16th of July, 1369, the morrow of St. Swithun's Day, in the 77th year of his age and the 42nd of his Episcopate; and he was buried in St. Radegunde's Chapel, just outside the great west door of the Cathedral, without ostentation or display, as he had been most careful to direct. Would that it were possible for me to end my narrative here! But, alas, it is my melancholy duty to record that, about two hundred years later, his modest but most venerable tomb was brutally desecrated, and his bones torn from what should have been their last and honoured resting-place,³—an indelible blot on the fair fame of Exeter, and on the memory, especially, of those who, as Guardians of the Church which owed so much to the great Bishop's munificence and zeal, were, surely, bound to secure his grave against outrage and pollution. I find it impossible to believe that such a deed could have been perpetrated, whether by ignorant fanaticks or by mere robbers of churches in quest of treasure, without the knowledge, I refrain from saying the connivance, his Letter to Pope Benedict XII, in which he refers to his "Life" of St. Thomas of Canterbury, as "ex multis scriptoribus in manipulum per me noviter redactam." He compiled, also, (in 1337), "a volume of 105 folios, called the Ordinale, or Book regulating the Offices performed in his Cathedral. He was indeed, anxious that everything there should be done decently and according to order, and on fol. 12 insists that in the recital of the psalms, hymns, and other portions of the service, in vain will the tongue labour if the heart prayeth not; that what air or wind is to the fire, devotion is to words uttered in the Sanctuary. On fol. 136 he refers to an accurate Antiphonary 'quod dicitur Grantson, et illud Gradale Antiquum cum Psalteriis,' which he had presented to his Church. We are disposed to think that the present Ordinale, in the possession of the Dean and Chapter, is not the original, from the difference, very perceptible in the handwriting in various parts; and, again, from certain entries, for example (fol. 71b)—'In crastino Octave Assumptionis Sancte Marie fiat semper memoria vel obitus Johannis de Grandissono, Episcopi Exoniensis, cum distribucione lxs.'" (Oliver's Lives of the Bishops, p. 84).

¹ The Feast of the Nativity of the Blessed Virgin. He did not merely sign his name, but, after his manner, added a few words under his signature, referring to the Day; words which, as Canon Dalton has kindly reminded me, were, doubtless "sung, or read, by him, in his Chapel, that very morning," being quoted from the Fifth Respond in the second Nocturn of the Office for Mattins,—"Nativitas tua, Dei Genetrix Virgo, gaudium annunciavit universo mundo: Ex te, enim ortus est Sol Justicie, Christus Deus noster; Qui, solvens maledictionem, dedit benedictionem, et, confundens mortem, donavit nobis vitam sempiternam."

³ Prepared, as we know, for this purpose by himself. How anxious he was to provide against the possibility of his being buried elsewhere is shewn by the fact that, as early as 17 December, 1331, he obtained an Indult from Pope John XXII,—"that if he died more than a day's journey from his Church his body may be embalmed and brought thither."—Papal Regesta, vol. ciii, fol. 478 (Ed. Bliss).

of the Dean and Chapter of the day.¹ But the times were dark and dangerous—dark, and already darkening more and more unto the evil day which saw both Church and King go down, for a season, under the iron hand of a cruel, tyrannical, and hypocritical faction. The precise date of the sacrilege is not known. Hoker, writing in 1599, tells us that “his tombe was of late pulled up, the ashes scattered abroad, and the bones bestowed no man knoweth where.” Westcote, whose “Survey of Devon” was completed in 1680, tells us, in language which, certainly, seems to reflect on the Cathedral authorities (for he gives particulars as from the testimony of an eye-witness), that “he was taken up, shrouded in lead, not long since, the lead melted, and the Chapel defaced—an unworthy deed; and it is to me a marvel that they escaped unpunished, in regard the very heathen had laws against violating or defacing of monuments or sepulchres.” And Izacke refers in his “Memorials” to this monstrous wickedness in terms which I endorse with all my heart,—“Surely, the reliques of this worthy Prelate deserved a more reverend respect, even amongst savage beasts.” I shudder whenever I pass, by the desecrated spot, into the glorious Nave, the abiding memorial of his surpassing genius, princely munificence, and life-long piety. Lux perpetua luceat ei, cum Sanctis Tuis in eternum, quia pius es.

RINGMORE RECTORY, 1 Sept., 1899.

NOTES TO THE PREFACE.

PAGE The Castle of Grandson stands at the south-west end of the Lake of Neuchâtel, in the present Canton de Vaud. It was just on the borders of Savoy and the County-Palatine (not the Duchy) of Burgundy, which remained a fief of the Empire till Louis XIV absorbed it in 1674. Leland speaks of William de Grandisson as “de genere Imperatoris; qui frater fuit nobilissimi Domini Othonis de Grandisone, in Burgundia, Diocesis Laucenensis, ubi Castrum de Grandisone est situm firmis saxis.” The railway now skirts the lake, and passes through the precincts of the picturesque old château with its ivy-clad towers. Part of it has been put in order, and contains a small collection of antiquities and natural history specimens. Otho, the last of the Family to whom the Castle belonged, was the poet and warrior Chaucer referred to at the end of his Compleynt of Venus (Skeat's Chaucer, vol. i, p. 404).—J. N. D.

PAGE xxv. "Probably consecrated on 21 Nov., 1367."—This date (21 Nov.) was, apparently, taken from the Exeter Kalendar (prefixed to the Chronicon Exoniense), where against it (11 Kal. Dec.) is written—"Dedicacio Exonie, majus duplex." The 21st of November is the Feast of the Presentation of the B. V. M., and it may have been supposed that Bishop Grandisson selected the day for that reason. But Pope Paul II first commanded this Festival to be observed in 1464, a century after Grandisson's time. Of course, the entry in the Kalendar refers to the original Dedication of the Cathedral by Bishop Marshall. As for the year—1367—it is a mere conjecture, without even a shadow of proof.—F. J. B.

PAGE xxvii. The Patrons of Abbat Bonus referred to, here, as "de Peragrúa, de Garvo, and de Mota," were Arnaldus de Pelagrúa, created Cardinal Deacon of St. Mary in Porticu by Clement V, at Lyons, 18 Dec., 1305, who died at Avignon in 1335; Bernardus de Garvo, created Cardinal Deacon of St. Eustachius' by the same Pope, 19 Dec., 1310 (he was afterwards Cardinal Priest of St. Clement's and died at Avignon in the Pontificate of John XXII); and Gailardus de Mota who was created Cardinal Deacon of St. Lucy's in Silice, at Avignon, by John XXII, 17 Dec., 1316. He was Archdeacon of Oxford 1312—1345, and died at Avignon in 1357.—F. J. B.

PAGE xxxiii. See the Kalendar of Papal Registers, vol. ii, page 290 (ed. Bliss), for an Indult dated 14 July, 1329,—“To Simon, Archbishop of Canterbury.—The ill-health of his predecessors, Robert and Walter, has hindered Visitations being made for so many years that a doubt has arisen as to the order in which they are to be taken. Indult to visit his Province in the following order,—first, his own Chapter and Diocese; and then whatever Diocese seems most to need it.” Probably, it was under this Indult that Mepeham wished to visit the Diocese of Exeter; and it would seem that no Visitation had been held within the Province since Archbishop Peckham's time, in 1282, except in the case of vacant Dioceses.—F. J. B.

I have already (vol. i, page vii) expressed my thanks to the kind Friends who, for many years, have assisted me in my work. Mr. Baigent, I need scarcely repeat, has helped me with all his heart, and in every possible way; and I am specially indebted to him for his great kindness in compiling the admirably arranged Pedigree of the Grandisson Family which enriches the present Volume. I have, also, received great assistance from Canon Dalton, of Windsor, Canon Edmonds, of Exeter, Mr. Macray, of the Bodleian, and Professor Meyer, of Paris. Alas, I have to mourn the loss of my other helpers, who have been called away since the publication of the First Volume of this Register,—Winslow Jones, John Maclean, Charles William Boase, Benjamin Wyatt Greenfield, John Ingle Dredge. I cannot say how much I miss their most useful and almost continuous letters, and their never-failing encouragement and support. May they rest in peace!—If I am spared to complete the two Volumes of Bishop Brantingham's fine Register, which covers the interval between Bishop Grandisson's Register and Bishop Stafford's (published in 1886), my Series will be complete for the space of nearly 200 years. I dare not venture to look beyond; neither, on the other hand, do I venture to assign any limitation to a work which ought to be continued, by myself or by another, to the end of the Medieval period, when our Registers become little more than Registers of Institutions to Benefices. My mind is to work on till, my eyes becoming dim and my natural force abated, I am compelled to leave to others the completion of a work, which, our Lord blessing my endeavours, I have carried so far towards completion.—Nunc mea; mox hujus; set crastina nescio cujus.

² William Mugge.—Both Le Neve and Oliver omit the name in their Lists of the Archdeacons. He was, also, Treasurer of Exeter Cathedral, succeeding Robert de Middeloude, who died in 1367. Le Neve, who calls him “de Mugge,” tells us that he occurs as Treasurer “20th Sept., 1367 (Reg. Ebor.)” Oliver omits his name; but I find that he did enjoy this Dignity, for he is mentioned as Treasurer in Bishop Brantingham's Register (vol. i, fol. 43), 19 Nov., 1373. He had been appointed Warden of the Collegiate Chapel of St. George, in Windsor Castle, as early as 18 June, 1349, when he succeeded the first Warden, John de la Chambre, who held the Office only for a few months, and was, probably, one of the victims of the “Black Death.” Mugge retained the Office till his death in 1380.

Jhesu Christi, pro nobis Crucifixi, Precioso Sanguine sumpto de Maria Virgine redemptis, tam presentibus quam futuris, Johannes, etc., salutem inde cunctis Fidelibus profluentem.—Cum, preter sollicitudinem que ex debito Cure Pastoralis nostris imbecillibus incumbit humeris, Preceptis eciam salutaribus ac Monitis Apostolicis Sanctissimi in Christo Patris ac Domini nostri, Innocencii Sexti, Summi Pontificis, pridem excitati, ut, pro Grege credito et Ecclesiis nobis subjectis impigre vigilantes, ipsarum dispendiis occurramus. Hinc est quod defectus et lapsus intollerabiles et nimis nocivos in Visitacione proxima Ecclesie Collegiate Criditonie, quondam Cathedralis et sollemnis, nostre Diocesis, Jurisdiccione, et Patronatus, per certos nostros Commissarios, Auctoritate tam Apostolica quam nostra deputatos, excercita, compertos, juxta grariam desuper nobis datam curavimus reparare, ipsius Collegii aliqua pretensa Statuta, cum Consuetudinibus vel potius corruptelis, prout opus fuerat, declarando, et aliqua quasi inconveniencia in formam debitam redigendo, ac, per istorum subscriptorum edicionem, in quantum istis sunt contraria, penitus adnullando. Statuimus, eciam, quod Cantor, ultra regimen in Choro et in Officiis Divinis, omnium Vicariorum et inferiorum Ministrorum ipsius Ecclesie, pro ipsorum excessibus, salva Jurisdictione nostra ordinaria, Canonicam habeat coercionem et absentancium punicionem in omnibus competentem. Defectus, eciam, tales, et absencie Vicariorum ac ceterorum Ecclesie Ministrorum, per Cantorem aut per Thesaurarium, vel eorum in hac parte Commissarium, annotentur, et ut continetur inferius puniantur; et eisdem Cantori et Sacriste per equales porciones applicentur. Thesaurarius, vero, ut predicitur, habeat specialem curam et custodiam Librorum, Vasorum, Ornamentorum, Vestimentorum; necnon omnium bonorum infra ipsam Ecclesiam repositorum, ad Ecclesiam ipsam communiter pertinencium vel divisim, utpote Librorum, Vestimentorum, et Fabrice emendacione, aliisque necessariis expensis communibus dicte Ecclesie, onera supportare et agnoscere teneatur. Statuimus, eciam, et decernimus quod tam Cantor, preter corpus Cantarie, quod dicitur Wollysgrave, quam Thesaurarius, preter corpus Thesaurarie, quod vocatur Carswille, Prebendas bursales in dicta Ecclesia obtinere et retinere licite valeant, si eisdem Canonice conferantur; alias, autem, quod Thesaurarius, pro supportacione laboris sui circa premissa et cetera annexa residencie, sex marcas de bonis Ecclesie communibus, quousque unam ibidem habuerit Prebendam bursale, percipiat annuatim. Item, statuimus et ordinamus quod nullus dicte Ecclesie Canonicus ad dividendam in fine cujuscunque termini pro residente habeatur, nisi pro illis dumtaxat diebus in quibus Matutinis, vel Majori Misse, aut Vesperis, in habitu Canonicali interfuerit, prout decet. Item, quia Vicarii Chori, [qui] in Sacerdotum sexdecim nunc numero, duobus aliis in Ministros inferiores et necessarios per nos conversis, consistunt, in Choro continue deservire tenentur, et sub colore sepius stipendiorum suorum in oblacionibus et domorum redditibus cum sollicitudine non modica colligendis proveniunt ab Officio Divino voluntarie ac subdole se absentarunt, et nedum secularibus set eciam quandoque vilibus et nephariis se negociis implicuerunt, ac dolose impediverunt ne presentati loco Vicariorum deficiencium admitterentur, ut eorum porciones suis interim usibus applicarent, et excessivas multociens ceperunt porciones, noticiam communium reddituum non habentibus fraudulentem pro libito ministrando; quorum pretextu Vicariorum numerus diu remansit, et adhuc remanet, non completus, Cultusque Divinus et honor Ecclesie noscuntur, non sinescandalo, deperire; statuimus et ordinamus quod redditus et obventiones omnimodi, pro dictorum Vicariorum sustentacione ordinati, per Cantorem vel Thesaurarium, vel duos Canonicos residentes, et unum de Vicariis per eosdem communiter eligendum, colligantur et recipiantur; de quibus semper viginti solidi, in principio cujuslibet quarterii, singulis Vicariis pro ipsorum necessariis liberentur; et quicquid in fine anni post calculum superfuerit in duas partes equaliter dividantur; quarum una inter ipsos Vicarios, per

A.D. 1360-1. Cantorem vel Thesaurarium et sic electum Vicarium, equalibus porcionibus distribuatur, et pars alia in communi cista Vicariorum, pro domorum sustentacione et annis sterilibus, aliisque supportandis per eos oneribus, Vol. I. reponatur. Et, quia ex pristina habitacione divisa et solitaria ipsorum Vicariorum occasio scandali multociens ministrabatur, habitacionem pro eis communem, non sine gravibus sumptibus, construi et reparari fecimus, infra quam eos exnunc, in esculentis et poculentis communiter victitando, simul statuimus et precipimus habitare. Et, si quis eorum hoc facere recusaverit, nichil recipiat, nec pro Vicario habeatur; set infra quindecim dies alius subrogetur. Nota. Item, cum taberne et evagaciones, presertim nocturne, secundum Sacros Canones et Provinciales ac Synodales Constituciones, clericis, et specialiter constitutis in Sacris, sint interdicte, districcius inhibemus ne aliquis dictorum Vicariorum tabernas excerceat, aut contra clericalem modestiam discurrat in habitu inhonesto. Quod ut striccius et caucius evitetur, precipimus et ordinamus ut, si quis eorum, post pulsacionem ignitegii, in taberna vel alibi extra clausum Ecclesie, absque causa rationabili quam probare per duos teneatur testes, inventus fuerit, seu de hoc coram Cantore, aut, in ejus absentia, coram Thesaurario, legitime convictus, pro prima vice qua sic deliquerit tres denarii, pro secunda sex denarii, et pro tertia duodecim denarii, ad usum Cantoris et Thesaurarii, vel Fabrice Ecclesie, de ipsius stipendio subtrahantur. Et, si quarto convictus fuerit in hoc deliquisse, ipsum ab Ecclesia statuimus penitus amovendum. Nota. Item, quia stipendium ab Ecclesia absque specie sacrilegii capere non potest qui Officium debitum non impendit, statuimus quod a quolibet Vicario dicte Ecclesie, quociens a Matutinis, Magna Missa, vel Vesperis, evidenti cessante causa, absens fuerit, obolus; pro aliis, vero, Horis quibus non interfuerit quadrans, de suo stipendio subtrahatur. A quolibet, vero, Secundario, quociens Matutinis, Magna Missa, aut Vesperis, et aliis diei Horis non interfuerit, obolus de suo stipendio subtrahatur. A quolibet, autem, puero chorista quadrans pro hujusmodi absentia subtrahatur. Pro aliis, vero, Horis si puer absens fuerit, nisi Scolis tunc vacaverit, disciplinam septem vel decem ictuum recipiat super nudum. Et, ut premissa omnia et singula, submota quacumque excusacione exquisita, perpetuis temporibus inviolabiliter observentur, Ordinationes et Statuta quaecumque dicte Ecclesie nostre huic Ordinationi nostre contraria, quatenus eidem adversantur seu repugnant, revocamus, irritamus, et omnino subducimus per Presentes. Quas in presencia Canonorum et Ministrorum ejusdem Ecclesie, singulis quarteriis cujuslibet anni, exnunc, in ejusdem Ecclesie Capitulo legi precipimus et sollempniter publicari (sic). Hec Precepta servantibus gratiam in presenti et gloriam in futuro; prevaricantibus hic penitentiam aut in futuro supplicium sempiternum. Fiat! Fiat! Amen.—In quorum omnium testimonium sigillum nostrum, una cum sigillo communi ejusdem Collegii, Presentibus est appensum.—Data in Manerio nostro de Chuddeleghe, nono die mensis Marcii, Anno Domini Millesimo CCC^{mo} lx^o, et Consecracionis nostre tricesimo quarto. Et nos, Decanus et Capitulum Ecclesie Exoniensis, premissis omnibus et singulis quantum ad nos attinet assencientes, sigillum nostrum commune fecimus hiis apponi.

es erant et exiles, ac etiam, propter temporum et rerum mutabilitatem hominumque maliciam indies excrecentem, in tantum attenuati quod dilecti filii, Custos et Capitulum, ac ceteri Ministri ejusdem Ecclesie, in quadragenario jam constituti numero, onera necessaria eis, juxta Ordinacionem eorum primariam per Sedem Apostolicam specialiter confirmatam, incumbencia verisimiliter non poterunt imposterum congrue supportare, nec tot Ministri ipsius Ecclesie stipendiis primitus assignatis decenter et commode sustentari ; ad honorem Dei et predictae Gloriosissime Virginis et Matris Sue Marie, per cooperacionis sue ministerium supplere, et pro anima sua dictorum Ministrorum numerum ampliare, nobis sepius dum vixit cum instancia supplicavit quatinus Ecclesiam Parochialem de Northam, nostre Diocesis, in qua iidem Custos et Collegium plenum jus obtinent Patronatus, et pro cujus adquisicione idem Dominus Otho domos suas et redditus in Civitate Londoniensi eisdem Custodi et Collegio dedit et legavit in usus infrascriptos, et ad supportacionem onerum, tam predictorum quam infrascriptorum, eisdem concedere, annectere, et perpetuo unire auctoritate ordinaria dignaremur. Nos, igitur, ipsius Othonis pium et laudandum propositum merito approbantes, prefatis Custodi et Collegio paterna mansuetudine providendo, dilectos in Christo filios, Decanum et Capitulum Ecclesie nostre Exoniensis ad tractandum nobiscum super hujusmodi Appropriacione, ex predictis causis et aliis, fecimus convocari ; habitisque tandem super premissis cum eisdem tractatu diligenti et sollempni, ac deliberacione et causarum predictarum cognicione debitis atque plenis ; quia comperimus premissa omnia et singula sufficienter esse probata, quodque evidens necessitas et manifesta utilitas requirunt quod fiat unio sic petita, eandem unionem decrevimus Canonice faciendam. Unde, demum, de unanimi collaudacione et consilio ac consensu eorundem Decani et Capituli ac aliorum quorum interest, concurrentibus que in hac parte requiruntur, predictam Parochialem Ecclesiam de Northam, cum omnibus suis juribus et pertinentiis, prefate Ecclesie nostre Collegiate, ac Custodi et Capitulo ejusdem, auctoritate Diocesana appropriamus, incorporamus, ac annectimus perpetuo et unimus ; Jurisdiccione et jure nostro Episcopalibus, et Ecclesie nostre Exoniensis dignitate et cujuscumque Ordinarii alias in omnibus semper salva ; reservata, tamen, primitus de fructibus, redditibus, et proventibus ejusdem Ecclesie, pro Perpetuo Vicario in eadem, ad Presentacionem dictorum Custodis et Capituli per nos et Successores nostros instituendo, congrua porcione, ex qua idem Vicarius congrue valeat sustentari, et Episcopalia jura solvere, aliaque sibi incumbencia onera supportare ; ita quod prefati Custos et Capitulum, per se, alium, seu alios, ejusdem Ecclesie possessionem licite apprehendere et tenere, fructusque, redditus, et proventus ipsius, in usus dumtaxat ac secundum modum et ordinem infrascriptos, libere convertere possint, nostra vel Successorum nostrorum, aut cujuscumque alterius Licencia minime requisita. Modum, autem, per quem, et in quos usus, proventus dicte Ecclesie de Northam converti et distribui debeant imperpetuum, salva dicti Vicarii porcione decem librarum in numerata pecunia assignanda, Presentibus annotamus.—In primis ordinamus et statuimus quod in predicta Collegiata Ecclesia sint exnunc duo Presbiteri Vicarii, ultra numerum octonarium consuetum ; quorum uterque habeat, singulis annis, de fructibus supradictis, quantum unus de ceteris Vicariis aliunde annuatim percipere consuevit ; in omnibus ut alii facturi et et cohabitaturi, ac pro anima prefati Domini Othonis specialiter oraturi. Et tam octo priores Vicarii quam ipsi duo, ac Presbiter Matutinalis, percipiant de dictis fructibus, annuatim, ultra jam constituta stipendia, quilibet unam marcam, precipue ut honestum habitum habeant, prout decet et secundum quod in Statutis Ecclesie continetur. Succentor, vero, eo quod ceteros excedit in labore, ultra ea que percipit in communi dimidiam marcam habeat annuatim.—Statuimus, etiam, et ordinamus quod unus de Vicariis, singulis exnunc annis, in Festo Sancti Michaelis per residentes Canonicos

A.D. eligatur, qui circa omnia que ad officium Sacriste pertinent diligentem sub 1361. eodem gerat sollicitudinem atque curam, et habeat per annum, in hujus-
Vol. I. modi laboris compensacionem, dimidiam marcam. Item, octo Clerici Secundarii et Clericus Capelle Beate Marie habeant, annuatim, quilibet quadraginta denarios, ad habitum decencio-rem; et octo pueri choriste habeant, annis singulis, quilibet sexdecim denarios. Et duo clerici, Ecclesie Custodes, unam marcam inter ipsos equaliter dividendam. Item, Presbiter Parochialis et Magister Scholarum, annuatim, habeant uterque dimidiam marcam. Summe, autem, pecuniarum predicte solvantur ad quatuor anni terminos consuetos. Die, insuper, Obitus dicti Domini Othonis, viginti solidi inter Canonicos, Vicarios, et ceteros Ministros presentes, secundum Ecclesie consuetudinem, dividantur.—Ordinamus, insuper, octo solidos et octo denarios ad inveniendum unum cereum in Dominicis et singulis Feastis cum regimine Chori, tam ad Matutinas quam ad Vesperas, in Choro continue arsurum ultra luminaria consueta. Quicquid, vero, de fructibus et proventibus hujusmodi, deductis et supportatis oneribus supradictis, resi-duum fuerit, in Thesauro prefate Ecclesie Collegiate integre reponatur, in Festo Sancti Michaelis cujuslibet anni, in recepcionem hospitum converten-
 dum. Si, tamen, hujusmodi cetera onera supportari valeant aliunde, tunc hujusmodi residuum inter Canonicos, secundum modum et ratam residenciam eorundem anni precedentis, dividatur; ita, tamen, quod quatuor Canonici in Officiis constituti duplum respectu percipiant aliorum. Si, vero, prefata Ecclesia de Northam, cujus fructus et proventus, ultra porcionem Vicarii, ad valorem quadraginta marcarum ad minus annis communi-bus estimamus, aliquo casu fortuito ad supportacionem predictorum onerum non sufficiat, volumus quod tunc de porcionibus suprascriptis, prout justius et honestius fuerit, defalcetur. In quorum omnium testimonium sigilla nostrum ac dictorum Decani et Capituli Presentibus sunt appensa.—Data in Capitulo nostro Exoniensi, primo die mensis Septembris, Anno Domini Millesimo CCC^{mo} lxj^{mo}, et Consecracionis nostre tricesimo quarto.—Et nos, Decanus et Capitulum Exoniensis Ecclesie supradicte, habito super premissis omnibus et singulis cum Venerabili in Christo Patre et Domino, Episcopo nostro predicto, tractatu diligenti, ut premittitur, et sollempni, dicte Appropriacioni, Unioni, et Annexioni, necnon omnibus et singulis supradictis actis, habitis, atque gestis, consensum nostrum concordem prebemus, consilium, et assensum; sigillum nostrum commune apponi, cum sigillo
 ejusdem Venerabilis Patris, Presentibus facientes, in testimonium veritatis.—
 Data die, meuse, et loco, ac Anno Domini supradictis.

 eisdem suis Processibus, asserens se circa prosecucio- nem negotiorum predictorum per mensem et ultra ante primam diem mensis Maii ultimo pre-

A.D. 1361. jam futuras, medietatem expensarum suarum pretensarum, factarum et fiendarum per tempora supradicta ab Ecclesiis, Prelatis, et Viris Ecclesiasticis Regni Anglie exigendam fore decrevit; et medietatem hujusmodi, injuncta quadam alia summa quingentorum et quadraginta florenorum, quam idem Abbas ratione suarum expensarum sibi, in suis Processibus, esse debitam asserit, eo quod per duos menses, videlicet Novembris et Decembris, ultimo preteritos, pro pace inter Reges Anglie et Francie dudum reformanda, ut pretendit, insistebat; quamquam iidem duo menses post pacem inter ipsos Reges finaliter concordatam, et post completum nuncium suum in hac parte, et postquam de expensis, procuracionibus, et stipendiis suis quibuscumque, dum circa expeditionem negotii reformationis pacis ejusdem vacasset sibi assignatis, plene et integre, juxta petitionem suam, sibi fuerat satisfactum, notorie contigerunt; prout sibi placuit, et nimis excessive, ad duo milia quadringentos septuaginta et sex florenos taxavit in Processibus suis supradictis. De qua summa nobis, et Clero nostrarum Civitatis, Diocesis, et Provincie, summam mille quingentorum et triginta sex florenorum assignavit et imposuit, nobisque sub gravibus penis et Censuris Ecclesiasticis demandavit quatinus dictam summam, infra sexaginta dierum spacium a die presentationis Processuum suorum nobis facte computandorum (quem terminum pro termino peremptorio ac Monicione Canonica nobis assignavit) nostris expensis et periculo sibi, vel suo Procuratori, realiter et integraliter solveremus. Verum, quia reformatio pacis inter dictos Nobiles Viros Regnum Anglie, et precipue Ecclesiam Anglicanam, non concernit; presertim cum ipsi Nobiles sint de Regno Francie et non Anglie, quorum neuter terras aut feoda vel possessiones tenet in Anglia; nec Ecclesia solebat contribuere ad commoda, contenciones, et dissidia privatorum; nec de commodo Regni Anglie seu Ecclesie Anglicane agitur in hac parte; nec oportuit ipsum Dominum Abbatem a principio maxime mensis Junii ultimo preteriti usque ad Festum Sancti Michaelis proximo futurum circa expeditionem dicti negotii vacare, sicuti non vacavit; attentis prorogacione et continuacione tractatus pacis et treugarum inter dictos Nobiles notorie initis videlicet a principio dicti mensis Junii, vel saltem prope principium, usque ad Festum supradictum; considerantes Mandata hujusmodi, nobis directa, fore nimis ardua, insolita, et inaudita, et Ecclesie Anglicane prejudicialia, que si traherentur ad consequenciam Ecclesie Anglicane ultra vires suas faciliter gravaretur, quin verius confunderetur, et, sublata libertate sua, quod absit, servituti laciore miserabiliter subderetur; ideo ad execucionem Processuum predictorum et contentorum in eisdem, absque deliberacione et consilio Confratrum et Suffraganeorum nostrorum, quorum interesse sicut et nostrum notorie vertitur in hac parte, Processus hujusmodi hactenus distulimus publicare. ² This document has been kindly copied for me by Canon Dalton, of Windsor, where the original is preserved. The first few lines, as far as the asterisk, will be found (as I have indicated) on "fol. 221," which, however, is no more than a fly-leaf, and the writing is not contemporaneous. The Windsor MS. is in perfect condition, and the seals are, really, beautiful. The great seal is in red wax ; the the obverse in green wax ; and I learn from the Canon that there is "yet a third impress, on the margin of the wax guard, in red wax, representing the Virgin and Child within a legend—Misericordia . . ." A full and very interesting description of the Bishop's seals will be found below in a document relating to the Collegiate Church of Bosham. On the back of the Original MS. is written, in a later, but not much later, hand,—"Registratum in ultimo quaterno Registri Domini Johannis de Grandissono ; et deficiunt in eodem Registro vij anni registrandi." This is very interesting, for it shews that the loss of so many quaterni of the "Registrum Commune" is of no recent date.

A.D. 1361-2. Johannes, miseratione Divina Exoniensis Episcopus, salutem in Domino sempiternam.—Licet pridem Vicariam Ecclesie Parochialis Sancti Stephani de Saltesse, nostre Exoniensis Diocesis, Custodi et Collegio Libere Capelle Regie de Wyndesore appropriate, in diversis rebus altilagii consistere ordinaverimus, et certis oneribus supportandis ; quam ultra viginti librarum summam tunc temporis non estimabamus nec adhuc extendere estimamus, prout in quadam nostra Ordinatione alias super hoc facta plenius continetur ; porcionem illius augmentandi, diminuendi, interpretandi, ac in toto seu in ejus parte immutandi potestate nobis, et Successoribus nostris, in eadem specialiter reservata ; Serenissimus, tamen, Princeps et Dominus noster, Dominus Edwardus, Dei gracia Rex Anglie Illustris, pro dicti sui Collegii comodo et honore, ac certitudine porcionis et sustentacionis Vicariorum dicte Ecclesie qui pro tempore erunt, nobis per suas Literas supplicavit quatinus, pro securitate dictorum Custodis et Collegii, ac indemnitatem Vicariorum dicte Ecclesie qui ad Presentationem dictorum Custodis et Collegii instituendi erunt in ipsa, et ne forte, ex infortunio, porcio emolumentorum Vicariis dicte Ecclesie applicandorum ad tantam exilitatem contingeret devenire quod non sufficeret eis ad victum, nec ad alia eis imposita onera supportanda, aut alias, ex meliori fortuna, ad tantam accresceret summam* quod, contra jus commune, dictorum Custodis et Collegii excederet porcionem, secundum estimacionem nostre Ordinationis predictae, decerneremus Vicariam illam ad summam viginti librarum fore, juxta ejus verum valorem annuum, ordinandam in pecunia numerata. Nos, itaque, attendentes dicti Domini nostri Regis laudabile propositum in hac parte, et tam utilitati quam securitati Custodis et Collegii predictorum quam Vicariorum de quibus premittitur prospicere cupientes, et ut, pro quiete utriusque Partis, cunctis appareat evidenter in qua pecunie summa et valore Vicaria ipsa et Vicariorum porcio congrua consistere debeant, et que ac qualia onera agnoscere debeant et subire, supplicationibus Regiis et beneplacitis obtemperare volentes, Vicariam ipsam ordinamus et Vicariorum porcionem assignamus pariter in hunc modum. In primis, quod Vicarii qui erunt pro tempore ejusdem Ecclesie habeant et recipiant, nomine Vicarie sue, unam aulam, unam cameram, unam coquinam cum bracinio, et unum stabulum pro duobus equis, de Rectoria Ecclesie supradicte. Volumus, eciam, quod Vicarii ejusdem Ecclesie habeant porcionem congruam, ex qua sustentari, et onera dicte Ecclesie incumbencia per modum subscriptum valeant supportare ; quam ad viginti librarum summam, vel ad ejus valorem in alia usuali moneta, Canonice assignamus, equis porcionibus ad quatuor anni terminos principales, in pecunia numerata, de fructibus dicte Ecclesie, per manus dictorum Custodis et Collegii, seu illorum Procuratoris, persolvendam ibidem. Et, si dicti Custos et Collegium in solucione predicta ultra unius mensis spacium ab aliquo termino negligentes fuerint aut remissi, tunc bene liceat nobis et Successoribus nostris, vel, Sede vacante, Custodi in Spiritualibus tunc ibidem, omnes fructus dicte Ecclesie sequestrare, et sub arto custodire Sequestro, donec Vicario qui fuerit pro tempore, una cum arreragiis, plenarie fuerit satisfactum. Divina per totam Parochiam, ubi Rectores dicte Ecclesie Divina celebrari facere tenebantur aut etiam celebrare, Vicarii qui erunt pro tempore, suis propriis sumptibus, faciant celebrari. Habeat, insuper, Vicarius qui pro tempore fuerit aream pro orto competentem. Domos suas sibi assignatas sustentabit, et quociens opus fuerit reedificabit. Vinum, ceram, thus, et panem Vicarii inveniant pro Sacramento Altaris. Procuraciones Archidiaconi et Synodalia persolvant ; et Libros ligari faciant quociens Ecclesia indigebit. Cetera omnia onera dicte Ecclesie incumbencia, quocumque nomine censeantur, superius non expressa, Custos et Collegium predicti subibunt. In cujus rei testimonium sigillum nostrum Presentibus est appensum.—Datum in Manerio nostro de Chuddeleghe, octavodecimo die mensis Februarii, Anno Domini Millesimo trecentesimo sexagesimo primo, et Consecracionis nostre tricesimo quinto.

A.D. 1263. Exoniensis Episcopi, de Mandato Illustrissimi Principis, Domini nostri, Domini Edwardi, Regis Anglie Tercii a Conquestu, in Libera Capella sua de Boseham per Venerabiles Viros, Magistros Johannem Wyliote, Cancellarium Exonie, et Robertum Wykforde, Archidiaconum Wyntonie, dicti Reverendi Patris Commissarios in hac parte specialiter deputatos, exercita viij^a die mensis Maii, Anno Domini M^o. CCC^{mo} sexagesimo tercio, et Consecrationis dicti Patris xxxvj^{to}.

In primis dictus Magister Johannes Wyliote, Cancellarius Exonie, proposuit Clero et populo tunc congregatis Verbum Dei in Latino, assumptus sibi pro themate Custodite Sacerdotium. Deinde, post completum Sermonem, dictus Magister Robertus Wykforde, Archidiaconus Wyntonie, causam adventus eorum, ac quid ibi essent facturi et qualiter processuri, exposuit in vulgari. Et subsequenter, Literis Patentibus[sub] magno sigillo dicti Domini nostri Regis, dicto Reverendo Patri, et postmodum Literis Commissionis ejusdem Reverendi Patris prefatis Commissariis directis, publice tunc perlectis, ac Certificatorio de Citacione Canonorum, Vicariorum, et aliorum Ministrorum facta recepto, quarum tenores inferius describuntur; preconizati fuerunt Canonici, Vicarii, et alii Ministri dicte Capelle, alta voce; quorum nomina hic sequuntur.

Edwardus, Dei gracia Rex Anglie, Dominus Hibernie et Aquitannie, Venerabili in Christo Patri, Johanni, eadem gracia Exoniensi Episcopo, Capellano nostro, ac Libere Capelle nostre de Boseham Ordinario immediato, salutem. —Quia, ex plurimorum relacione, accepimus quod in eadem Capella nostra, cujus Capellariam vos, et Predecessores vestri, ex Concessione Progenitorum nostrorum inde facta optinetis et optinuerunt, ac in Prebendis et Membris ejusdem quamplures defectus imminet; et quod Libri, Vestimenta, et alia Ornamenta Capelle illius et Ecclesiarum ad eam pertinencium, ob defectum custodie, surripiuntur et alias distrahuntur; ac Canonici, Vicarii, et alii Ministri et Officarii Capelle ejusdem vitam ducunt alias dissolutam, et Officiis Divinis in eadem Capella non intendunt ut tenentur; quodque Cantarie, elemosine, et alia pietatis opera, que in Capella illa pro animabus dictorum Progenitorum nostrorum et heredum suorum abolim ordinata et stabilita fuerunt, subtrahuntur et diminuuntur, in nostri grave prejudicium et gravamen manifestum; nos, volentes ea que pro salute animarum, et per Progenitores nostros, fundata et ordinata existunt, nostris temporibus manutenere et observare, vobis committimus et mandamus quod defectus predictos et statum Capelle predictae, et Prebendarum et Membrorum ad eam pertinencium, in propria persona vestra si vacaverit, alioquin per alios sufficientes viros, ex parte vestra illuc mittendos, nomine nostro ac jure nostro Regio, supervideatis, et vos de defectibus illis, et per quos et quibus temporibus evenerunt, ac omnibus aliis predictis diligenter informetis; et ea debite corrigi et reformari, et ad statum debitum reduci faciatis; ita quod in vestri defectum querela ad nos non perveniat iterata, per quod oporteat nos ad hec apponere manum nostram; nos de toto facto vestro, in hac parte facto, in Cancellaria nostra, sub sigillo vestro, distincte et aperte certificantes. Teste meipso, apud Westmonasterium, xx^{mo} die Marci, Anno Regni nostri tricesimo sexto.

Johannes, miseracione Divina Exoniensis Episcopus, Capellanus Regius Libere Capelle sue de Boseham, sub ipso Ordinario immediatus et Prebendarum ejusdem Collator, dilectis nobis in Christo, Magistris Johanni de Branktre, Theaurario Eboraci, Johanni Wyliote, Cancellario Exonie, Johanni Beutre et Roberto Wykforde, Ecclesie nostre Exoniensis Canonicis, salutem in Domino sempiternam. —Cum ad visitandum, corrigendum, et reformandum defectus in dicta Capella Regia, Prebendis et Membris ejusdem, ac personis Canonorum, Vicariorum, et aliorum in Choro Ministrorum, ac rebus ad ipsam et ejus Ministros spectantibus, patenter ruinis, ut dicitur, quod dolenter referimus, imminentes, juxta exigenciam et tenorem Literarum Domini

A.D. nostri Regis nobis in hac parte noviter directarum, quas vobis inspiciendas
 1863. mittimus et nobis per latorem Presencium remittendas, commode ad
 Vol. I. presens personaliter intendere nequeamus; vobis, vel duobus vestrum conjunctim, de quorum consciencie puritate et circumspeccionis industria firmam fiduciam in Domino obtinemus; ad omnia et singula premissa, et alia que nobis per dictas Literas Regias sunt commissa, facienda et expedi-enda, cum coercicionis Canonice [et] exequendi quod in hac parte decreveri-tis potestate, committimus vices nostras, donec eas ad Regiam Majestatem, vel nos, duxerimus revocandas. Rogantes quatinus de omnibus que feceri-tis in premissis Dominum nostrum Regem, vel nos, citra Festum Nativitatis Sancti Johannis Baptiste [24 June], per vestras patentes Literas, sigillo autentico, aut signo et subscripcione alicujus Notarii Publici, consignatas, reddatis, cum tenore Presencium, cerciores.—Datum in Manerio nostro de Chuddeleghe, penultimo die mensis Aprilis, Anno Domini M^o. CCC^{mo}
 sexagesimo tercio, et Consecracionis nostre tricesimo sexto.

(fol. Reverendo in Christo Patri ac Domino, Johanni, etc., Capellano Regie, ac 49b.) Libere Capelle Regie de Boseham Ordinario immediato ac Prebendarum Collatori unico et Patrono, vestrisve Commissariis vel vices gerentibus, vestri in Christo filii humiles et devoti, Thomas Keynes et Nicholaus de Braybroke, dicte Capelle Regie Canonici, omnimodam obedienciam et reverenciam debitam, cum honore.—Mandatum vestrum reverendum, nobis directum, die xij^a mensis Februarii, Londoniis, recepimus, in hec verba,— Johannes, etc., dilectis in Christo filiis, Domino Thome Keynes et Magistro
 Nicholao de Braybroke, ejusdem Capelle Regie Canonici, salutem, etc.—
 Literas Domini nostri Regis nuper recepimus, per quas, ut liquere poterit, nobis committitur et mandatur quod, cum in dicta Capella Regia, Pre-bendis et Membris ejusdem, necnon in Libris et Ornamentis, ac rebus aliis ad ipsam Capellam spectantibus quamplures imineant defectus graves, correccione et reformatione celeri indigentes; ac quidam de Canonici, Vicariis, et aliis Ministris ejusdem Capelle Regie, vitam, ut dicitur, ducentes notorie dissolutam, Divinis ibidem ut tenentur Officiis non intendant; quodque Cantarie, elemosine, et alia pietatis opera, que ibidem abolim
 ordinata et stabilita fuerint, subtrahantur et diminuantur; defectus predictos et alios, si qui fuerint, necnon statum Capelle predictae, ac Prebendarum et Membrorum pertinencium ad eandem, per nos vel alios supervideri, corrigi, ac reformari, et ad statum debitum reduci celeriter faciamus. Quocirca vobis, conjunctim et divisim, committimus et, in virtute Obediencie injungendo firmiter, mandamus quatinus premuniatis, seu premuniri faciatis, omnes et singulos alios dicte Capelle Regie Canonicos, et Vicarios eciam et Ministros quoscumque, ac in eadem celebrantes aut officiantes, quod sufficienter compareant, et vos similiter compareatis, ac
 quilibet compareat, coram nobis aut vices nostras gerentibus, in Capella Regia de Boseham supradicta, die Mercurii proxima post Festum Sancti Mathie, Apostoli [1 March], hora prima, cum continuacione et prorogacione dierum tunc sequencium, super premissis et ea contingentibus, quatenus eos et vos, conjunctim et divisim, concernunt, responsuri, ac super requi-rendis tunc ab eis et vobis veritatem quam noveritis deposituri; facturi ulterius et recepturi quod justum fuerit et consonum rationi, secundum predictarum exigenciam Literarum. De die, vero, recepcionis Presencium, et quid feceritis in premissis, nos aut vices nostras gerentes, dictis die et loco, certificetis per Literas vestras patentes, harum seriem et citatorum nomina continentes.—Datum in Manerio nostro de Chuddeleghe, vj die mensis Februarii, Anno Domini M^o. CCC^{mo} sexagesimo secundo, et Conse-cracionis nostre tricesimo sexto.—Hujus, igitur, auctoritate Mandati vestri reverendi, omnes et singulos Canonicos, Vicarios, Ministros quoscumque, ac celebrantes aut officiantes in eadem Capella, premunivimus, aut premuniri fecimus, peremptorie, et citari, quod compareant, et quilibet eorum compareat, sufficienter, die et loco predictis, cum continuacione et prorogacione

A.D. 1863. dierum tunc sequencium et locorum, ad respondendum, faciendum, et recipiendum, in omnibus et singulis que dicte Litere Regie et vestre in se Vol. I. exigunt et requirunt. Nomina, vero, citatorum in cedula Presentibus annexa seriusus continentur.—Datum apud Boseham, die mensis predicta, Anno Domini supradicto. [There was, evidently, a prorogation from 1 March till 8 May.]

Quibus Mandatis successive perlectis et expositis, ut prefertur, prefati Commissarii statim viderunt et examinarunt diligenter omnia Vestimenta, Libros, aliaque singula Ornamenta predictæ Capelle, et ea ordinate in Scriptis redigi, et defectus inibi compertos notari fecerunt; ac Canonicos, Vicarios, et ceteros ipsius Capelle Ministros, seu in eadem ministrantes aut officiantes, preconizari fecerunt.

Dominus David Wollore, Canonicus Capelle de Boseham, Prebendarius Prebende de Waletone in eadem, citatus, preconizatus, comparuit per Magistrum Galfridum Spede et Willelmum Beek, Procuratores suos literatorie constitutos; quorum Procuratorii tenor subsequitur,—IN DEI NOMINE, AMEN.—Per presens Publicum Instrumentum cunctis appareat evidenter, quod Anno ab Incarnacione Domini, secundum cursum et computationem Ecclesie Anglicane, M^o. CCC^{mo} sexagesimo tercio, Indiccione prima, die prima mensis Maii, Pontificatus Sanctissimi in Christo Patria, Domini nostri, Domini Urbani, Divina Providencia Pape VI^{ti}, Anno primo, in mei Notarii Publici infrascripti et testium presencia subscriptorum, in Manerio Venerabilis Patris Domini Simonis [de Langham], Dei gracia Eliensis Episcopi, tunc Cancellarii Anglie, situato in quodam loco vocato Holbourne, juxta Londonias, et personaliter constitutus, reverendus vir, Dominus David de Wollore, clericus, se asserens Canonicum Libere Capelle de Boseham Domini nostri Regis Anglie Illustris, fecit, constituit, et ordinavit suos veros et liberos Procuratores Magistrum Galfridum Spede et Willelmum de Beeke, conjunctim et divisim, et quemlibet eorum in solidum; ita quod non sit melior condicio occupantis, set quod unus eorum inceperit alter eorum libere proseguire valeat et finire. Deditque et concessit predictus Dominus David prefatis Procuratoribus suis, et eorum cuilibet divisim et in solidum, potestatem generalem et mandatum speciale, nomine ipsius Domini David, et pro eo, in quibuscumque Visitacionibus per Venerabilem Patrem, Dominum Exoniensem Episcopum, ipsiusve Commissarios seu Commissarium, in dicta Capella, ex parte Domini Regis, seu ejus Mandato faciendis seu celebrandis, comparendi; ipsiusque Domini David absenciam personalem excusandi; ac ipsius Domini David absencie hujusmodi legitimum impedimentum proponendi, allegandi, [et]. si oporteat probandi; quodcumque juramentum in hac parte licitum requisitum in animam ipsius Domini David prestandi; ac omnia alia et singula faciendi que in hujusmodi Visitacionibus, vel eorum aliqua, necessaria fuerint vel oportuna, eciam si Mandatum aliqua premissorum magis in se exigant speciale. Promisitque dictus Dominus David michi, Notario Publico infrascripto, stipulanti vice et nomine omnium et singulorum quorum interest, vel intererit, in hac parte, se ratum, gratum, et firmum perpetuo habiturum quicquid per dictos (fol. 50.) Procuratores, vel eorum aliquem, actum, gestum, seu factum fuerit in premissis et quolibet premissorum.—Acta fuerunt hec Anno, Indiccione, Pontificatu, die, mense, et loco predictis; presentibus Reverendis viris, Magistro Johanne de Nortone et Domino Johanne Codyngtone, Canonici Ecclesie Cicestrensis, testibus ad premissa vocatis specialiter et rogatis.

Dominus Johannes Gobet, Vicarius predicti Magistri Nicholai de Braybroke, Prebendarii de Fontyngdone in dicta Capella, citatus, comparuit personaliter et juravit ut supra.

Dominus Willelmus Mooge, Vicarius Domini David Wollore, Prebendarii de Waletone in eadem Capella, citatus, comparuit personaliter, et juravit Canonicam Obedienciam ut supra.

Dominus Johannes Scote, Vicarius dicti Domini David Wollouere (sic), Canonici, et Prebendarii de Waletone, juravit Domino et Ministris suis Canonicam Obedienciam.

Dominus Johannes Ovyngge, nuper Vicarius, et nunc aliquando Divina celebrans in ipsa Capella, citatus, preconizatus, non comparens, est expectatus usque in diem crastinum per Commissarios. Quo die, videlicet nono die dicti mensis Maii, ipse preconizatus, et non comparens, reputatur non esse contumax; pena eisdem Commissariis reservata. Idem Dominus Johannes, postea comparens, juravit ut alii Vicarii superius Obedienciam Canonicam.

Dominus Willelmus Sturmy, habens Perpetuam Cantariam quondam fundatam in Ecclesia de Boseham per quendam Magistrum Willelmum Fischeborne, Prebendarium de Fontyngdone, et de Patronatu Prebendarii ejusdem Loci qui pro tempore fuerit, citatus, comparuit personaliter, et juravit Canonicam Obedienciam Domino Exoniensi Episcopo, Ministris et Commissariis suis, et alia omnia ut de aliis superius notatur.

Johannes Squerel, aquebajulus parochialis, citatus, comparuit personaliter.

Johannes Seynt Denys, clericus parochialis, citatus, comparuit personaliter.

Item, deficit clericus quem debet Sacrista invenire.

Magistri Galfridus Spede et Willelmus de Beeke, Procuratores prefati Domini David Wollore, requisiti ad exhibendum Literas Ordinum dicti Domini David, dixerunt se non habere, nec tunc exhibuerunt; quibus ad exhibendum postea de gracia est concessum. Requisiti si in Divinis Officiis, tam Matutinis, Missis, et Vesperis sit Capelle bene et sufficienter deservitum, dicunt quod non. Requisiti in cuius defectum, dicunt quod in defectum illorum ad quos Ministrorum dicte Capelle pertinet Visitacio et correccio. Requisiti si Ministri dicte Capelle sint bone conversacionis, honeste vite, non fornicarii, non mercenarii, non vagabundi, non dissoluti, set casti et modesti, dicunt quod sunt, ut credunt. Requisiti de numero Vicariorum, dicunt quod deberent esse quinque, et non sunt nisi tres, videlicet Vicarius Dominorum Roberti Mildenhale, David Wollore, et Magistri Nicholai de Braybroke; alii, videlicet Dominorum T. Keynes et Willelmi Wykham, qui est noviter intitulatus, deficient.

Magistri Galfridus Spede et Willelmus de Beeke, Procuratores Domini Roberti

A.D. 1363. Mildenhale, jurati, et super premissis articulis requisiti, in omnibus dicunt ut supra; hoc addito, quod Vicarius quidam dicte Capelle celebrat in Vol. I. quadam Capella Prebendali de Fontyngdone, et sic detrahitur Officium Capelle Regie.

(fol. 51.) Magister Nicholaus de Braybroke, Canonicus et Prebendarius Prebende de Fontyngdone, personaliter comparens, dicit quod pessime deservitur Capelle in Divinis Officiis, ut est publica vox et fama. Dicit, etiam, quod quidam Vicarii, absque causa rationabili, nimis frequenter ab Horis Canonicis se absentant; et, si presentes fuerint, indebite suum peragunt Officium. Requisitus de numero Vicariorum, dicit quod deberent esse quinque, et non sunt nisi tres. Requisitus de conversacione Ministrorum, dicit quod ipsorum quidam luxuriosam nimis ducunt vitam, ut fama clamat; et sunt inter se rixantes et conviciantes, etiam infra Capellam, quod multociens in tantum Divinum turbatur Officium, ex quo scandalum oritur inter plebem. Nomina talium non expressit; et ideo prefati Commissarii monuerunt Ministros prefatos, sub penis et Censuris, ut melius et honestius solito officiant in dicta Capella, sine strepitu et murmure.

Concerning Benefices held in plurality,—

[At the beginning of the Register of Archbishop Simon de Langham will be found a Return of all the Pluralists in the Province, together with their declarations made in accordance with the Constitution of Pope Urban V, dated at Avignon, 3 May, 1366. The Archbishop's Certificate to the Pope, containing all the Returns, is dated at Lambeth, 12 Jan., 1366-7. By the kindness of Mr. Baigent, who copied for me the portions which relate to the Diocese of Exeter, I am enabled to supply a Document of much interest, which, doubtless, found a place in the lost folios of Bishop Grandisson's Register, and also such extracts from the Returns of the other Bishops as relate to this Diocese.]

[29]. Reverendissime Paternitati vestre vester humilis et devotus filius, Adam Murymouth [junior], Bacallarius in Jure Civili, significando exhibeo quod in ECCLESIA vestra CATHEDRALI EXONIE Canonice sum assecutus Canonicatum et Prebendam quatuor librarum in pecunia numerata. Hic est verus valor ejusdem. Item, Ecclesiam Parochialem de MARWENCHURCHE [Marhamchurch], vestre Diocesis, taxatam ad x marcas ; et solent solvi pro Decima xij solidi et iiijd.—Exhibita est hec cedula xvij^a die mensis Octobris, A.D. M^o. CCC^{mo} lxxvj^{to}.

[30]. Reverendissime Pater et Domine,—Ego, vester alumpnus humilis et familiaris devotus, Nicholaus de Braybroke, presbiter, nomina, numerum, taxas, et qualitates Beneficiorum meorum que ante et citra publicacionem pretense Monicionis seu Constitucionis Apostolice obtinui, ac eciam obtineo in presenti, vestre Reverende Paternitati, juxta vim et effectum Monicionis hujusmodi, reverenter exhibeo hac septima die instantis mensis Octobris, A.D. M^o. CCC^{mo} lxxvj^{to}, Pontificatus Sanctissimi in Christo Patris et Domini nostri, Domini Urbani, Divina Providencia Pape Quinti, Anno quarto. Obtineo, videlicet, in Libera Capella Domini nostri Regis Illustris de BOSEHAM Canonicatum et Prebendam de FUNTYNGDONE non curatam, et taxatam ad xxvjli, xiijs. iiijd. ; que, quidem, taxa verum valorem annum aliquando, per medietatem taxe et alias, notabiliter excedit. In ECCLESIA vestra EXONIENSI, ex Collacione vestra, Canonicatum et Prebendam non curatam ; nec, ut creditur, taxatur ; valentem annuatim iiij^{or}li. In Ecclesia vestra Collegiata SANCTI CARENTOCI, vestre Diocesis, similiter ex Collacione vestra ordinaria, Canonicatum et Prebendam quos nuper obtinuit Dominus David Wollevere, non curatos ; taxatos ad xls. In eadem Diocesi vestra Ecclesiam Parochialem et curatam de BIDEFORD, laici patronatus, taxatam ad xijli., sex solidos, octo denarios. In Ecclesia Collegiata de Landwybrevy [Llanddewi-Brefi, in Cardiganshire], Menevensis Diocesis, ex Collacione Domini nostri Regis, Sede Menevensi tunc vacante, Canonicatum et Prebendam de Lampader Trefegloos [Llanbadarn-tref-Eglwys], non curatos ; et taxatos ad viijli. Et ex habundanti ego, Nicholaus supradictus, coram vobis, Reverendo Patre et Domino meo, dictis die, mense, et anno personaliter constitutus, si et quatenus, ex vigore pretense Monicionis hujusmodi Apostolice, de prefatis Beneficiis meis duo compassibilia michi eligere artatus fuero, eligo sic, et non aliter nec alio modo, dictos Canonicatum et Prebendam in Libera Capella Regis de Boseham, ac eciam Canonicatum et Prebendam in Ecclesia vestra Exoniensi, volens semper, ut teneor, Mandatis Apostolicis humiliter obedire.

[31]. Reverendissime Paternitati vestre devotus filius vester, ego, Johannes de Chaundos, Bacallarius in Jure Civili, exhibendo significo quod in ECCLESIA vestra CATHEDRALI EXONIE obtineo Canonicatum et Prebendam quatuor

Item, Ecclesiam Parochialem de UFFCOLMPE [Uffculme], curatam, vestre Diocesis; taxatam ad septemdecim libras, quatuor solidos, et quatuor denarios.—Exhibita xvij^o die mensis Octobris, A.D. M^o. CCC^{mo} lxxvj^{to}.

[32]. Magister Robertus Sumpter, alias Souter, cognomine multiplex, pretendens se Decanum et Canonicum Ecclesie Exoniensis, suspectus quod nec rite ordinatus nec intitulatus extitit, sed potius uxoratus; super quibus coram Episcopo suo legitime vocatus, eundem Episcopum contumaciter recusavit Judicem suum in omnibus causis et negociis suis, tam presentibus quam futuris, et specialiter in exhibicione predictorum. Tandem, tamen, per Procuratorem exhibuit sub hac forma,—Magister Robertus Sumpter, Exoniensis Diocesis, Legum Doctor, dominus meus, obtinet DECANATUM ECCLESIE CATHEDRALIS EXONIE; qui, quidem, Decanatus est Beneficium electivum et curatum; idemque Decanatus taxatur ad lxxij^{li}. sterlingorum. Item, idem Magister Robertus Sumpter obtinet Canonicatum et Prebendam in dicta ECCLESIA CATHEDRALI, non curatam nec taxatam; valentem, tamen, annuatim sex marcas sterlingorum. Item, supradictus Magister Robertus est Canonicus, sub expectatione Prebende, sine limitatione taxe, in Ecclesia Saresbiriensi.

[33]. Vobis, Venerabili in Christo Patri ac Domino meo, Domino Exoniensi Episcopo, ego, Henricus Pyke, Magister in Artibus et in Utroque Jure Bacallarius, in hiis Scriptis clare, particulariter, et distincte, Beneficia mea exhibeo; et ostendo quod in ECCLESIA vestra EXONIENSI Canonice sum asecutus, et obtineo in presenti, Canonicatum et Prebendam, quorum fructus, redditus, et proventus ultra quatuor libras sterlingorum, secundum taxationem Decime, minime se extendunt; et Ecclesiam Parochialem de BRISTOWE [Bridestowe], vestre Diocesis, cujus fructus, redditus, et proventus ultra xij^{li}. sterlingorum, secundum Taxacionem Decime, minime se extendunt.

[34]. Reverendissime Paternitati vestre exhibendo significat devotus et supplex orator vester, Nicholaus Terrier, in Jure Civili Licenciatus, quod obtinet in ECCLESIA vestra EXONIENSI Canonicatum et Prebendam quatuor librarum in pecunia numerata; et ille est verus valor. Item, obtinet Ecclesiam Parochialem de EXEMYNSTRE, curatam, vestre Diocesis, et taxatam ad xvij^{li}. vjs. et iiij^d. Exhibita fuit hec cedula xvij^a die Octobris, A.D. M^o. CCC^{mo} lxxvj^{to}.

[35]. Pater reverendissime,—Ego, *Radulphus Tregrisioue*¹, Bacallarius in Legibus, vestre Diocesis, habeo in eadem Diocesi Ecclesiam Parochialem de DULO, taxatam ad x marcas et xld.; et Canonicatum sub expectatione Prebende in ECCLESIA CATHEDRALI EXONIE, in qua omnes Prebende sunt equales, et earum quilibet valet annuatim iiij^{li}. Facta fuit hec exhibicio xix^a die mensis Octobris, A.D. M^o. CCC^{mo} lxxvj^{to}.

[36]. In Dei Nomine, Amen.—Vobis, Reverendo Patri ac Domino suo, Domino Johanni, Dei gracia Exoniensi Episcopo, ego, Simon Wythiel, presbiter, vestre Diocesis Exoniensis, moram in eadem Diocesi vestra trahens, prout per nonnulla tempora traxi, ratione Beneficiorum meorum in dicta Diocesi vestra habitorem (si et quatenus vigore cujusdam Constitutionis sive Mandati, noviter, ut dicitur, per Sanctissimum in Christo Patrem et Dominum nostrum, Dominum Urbanum, Divina Providencia Papam Quintum, edite, et in Romana Curia, ut dicitur, publicate, [artatus] fuero in hac parte, eo quod alias in dicta Romana Curia, de Mandato dicti Sanctissimi Patris, Camerario suo simili modo exhibui), exhibeo, notifico, et insinuo, in hiis Scriptis, nomina, numerum, qualitates, et taxas Beneficiorum meorum, omnium et singulorum, que obtineo et habeo die et tempore presentis exhibicionis, videlicet vicesimo die mensis Octobris, A.D. Item, obtinuit, et obtinet, Ecclesiam Parochialem et curatam de Tisseburi, Saresbiriensis Diocesis (que Diocesis est contigua), ut Rector; in qua, etiam, Ecclesia fuerunt ab antiquo, et sunt, unus Vicarius pro cura animarum et unus Capellanus ad celebrandum ad Altare Beate Marie in dicta Ecclesia, per Diocesanum Perpetui instituti; cujus totius Ecclesie, videlicet Rectorie, Vicarie, et Capellanie, fructus, redditus, et proventus xxxviii*li.* vjs. vii*gd.* sterlingorum, secundum Taxacionem Decime, valorem annuum non excedunt. Porciones, vero, dictorum Vicarii et Capellani, quas percipiunt de eisdem; Vicarii, videlicet, predicti xiii*li.*, et Capellani antedicti quinque libras sterlingorum, communi hominum estimacione, valent annuatim.—Facta fuit hec exhibicio xxvj^{ta} die mensis Octobris, A.D. M^o. CCC^{mo} lxxvj^{to}.

The names of other Clerks who held Benefices in the Diocese of Exeter, in plurality, are found in the Certificates of other Bishops of the Province; such entries being made with reference to the Benefices in which they were residing at the time, or were accustomed commonly to reside, whether Beneficed in the Diocese or not, eisdem anno et mense :—

[fol. 6]. DIOCESE OF CHICHESTER,—

- (1). Thomas de Ocle, "moram trahens in Civitate Cicestrensi," was R. of Kemble [Kynele, MS.—Dioc. of Sarum, xl. marc.]; Preb. of Estmerdone, in Chichester Cathedral—xij. marc.; and in the Collegiate Church of GLASNEY—"xls., communibus annis."

[fol. 7]. DIOCESE OF LONDON,—

- (2). Sir Thomas de Bredone, priest (see No. 20, supra), "in Diocesi Londoniensi ut plurimum moram trahens" was R. of ST. ILLOGAN (in Cornwall,—viii*li.*), and had expectation of a Prebend in Chichester Cathedral.

- [fol. 8]. (3). Sir John de Wythornwyke, priest, "in Civitate Londoniensi ut plurimum moram trahens, . . . obtinet Ecclesiam Parochialem curatam de SULFRETONE [Silverton, Devon—xii*j.* marc.]. He was, also, Prebendary of Sutton in Salisbury Cathedral,—xxv. marc.; and Master of the Hospital of Newton (Dioc. of York), which was not taxed "propter ipsius exilitatem, et propter onera eidem incumbencia Hospitali, que excedunt aliquibus annis valorem ejusdem."

- [fol. 9b]. (4). Magister Willelmus le Pyl, presbiter, Magister in Artibus, Bacalarius in Medicina, et Sclaris in Theologia, in Civitate Londoniensi ut plurimum moram trahens, . . . obtinet Ecclesiam Parochialem de Southparet" (South Perrot, Dorset,—x. marc.); et Porcionem in Ecclesia SANCTE TETHE, Exoniensis Diocesis, taxatam ad v*j.* marc., . . . et Canonicatum ECCLESIE EXONIENSIS sub expectatione Prebende in eadem; super qua, nondum pacifice per ipsum obtenta, ut dicit, est in lite."

- (5). Sir Walter de Columpton, priest (see No. 22, supra), "in Diocesi Londoniensi ut plurimum moram trahens," R. of STOKES FLEMING, xli., and Canon of EXETER "sub expectatione Prebende, nondum assecute, in eadem, ex Gracia Sedis Apostolice sibi facta."

- [fol. 10]. (6). Master Robert de Grymstone, "antiquus Bacallarius in Legibus et Sclaris

- A.D. 1306. in Jure Canonico, in Diocesi Londoniensi ut plurimum moram trahens," was R. of Holme (Dioc. of Norwich,—xli.). "Item, dixit quod Collacio sibi est facta de Canonatu et Prebenda quos obtinuit Magister Stephanus Pym-pelle in ECCLESIA EXONIENSI, taxatis ad vj marcas sterlingorum. Et, ut dixit, habet jus ad Liberam Capellam de Carrake, Fernensis Diocesis, in Hibernia, taxatam ad ij marcas sterlingorum."
- [Abp. Lang-ham's Regis-ter.] (7). Sir John Cristemasse, priest, "in Civitate Londoniensi quasi continue moram trahens, . . . obtinet Ecclesiam Parochialem de BLISTONE [Blisland], Exoniensis Diocesis, taxatam ad ix marcas sterlingorum; et unum Minorem Canonatum in Ecclesia nostra Londoniensi, non taxatum; valor, tamen, verus annuus ejusdem se extendit ad cs. sterlingorum; necnon, unam Capellaniam in eadem nostra Londoniensi Ecclesia, Minori hujusmodi Canoni-catui unitam et annexam, non taxatam; verus, tamen, valor, etc. cs."
- [fol. 11b.] (8). Master Robert Sumpter, "Legum Doctor" (see No. 32, p. 1255). There are no additional particulars given as to this unworthy Dean of Exeter, except that he was non-resident as well as contumacious,—“in Diocesi Londoni-ensi ut plurimum trahens moram.”
- (9). Sir John de Troys, priest, "Thesaurarius Domini Regis Anglie Illustris in Hibernia, in Diocesi Londoniensi pro tempore moram trahens," held, among other Preferments, the Prebend of APPELDERAM in BOSHAM,—xxli.
- [fol. 12.] (10). William de Wykeham, clerk, Archdeacon of Lincoln, resided for the most part in London. The list of his Preferments occupies an entire page of the Register; and, among them, he held, by virtue of an Apostolical Dispensation, the Parish Church of MENHENYOT (Cornwall), a Benefice in lay patronage, having cure of souls and not compatible with another cure. It was taxed in £8, but he had already resigned it at the date of the Monition.
- [fol. 12.] (11). David de Wollere, priest, "Clericus principalis Domini Regis" [Master of the Rolls]. He had served in the King's Chancery for forty years, or more, and held the Prebend of WALETON in BOSHAM,—1 marc. (but it was not worth so much, and he had to pay a vicar, besides other burdens).
- [fol. 13b.] (12). Sir Thomas de Brantyngham, priest, "in Civitate Londoniensi pro tem-pore moram faciens; Thesaurarius Domini Regis Anglie Illustris in Partibus de Gysenes, Merke, et Calesiis." There is no Exeter entry in the Certificate; but some four years later he succeeded Grandisson as Bishop of the See.
- [fol. 14b.] (13). Sir William de Bughbrigge, priest, "et Clericus, Thesaurarius, et Gene-ralis Receptor Domini Ducis Lancastrie, ac negotiorum ejusdem Ducis in Curia Domini Regis Anglie, apud Westmonasterium et Londonias, Prosecu-tor, et in Diocesi Londoniensi ut plurimum moram trahens, . . . optinet Ecclesiam Parochialem curatam de TORYTONE MAGNA [Great Torrington], Exoniensis Diocesis, taxatam ad xx li, sterlingorum. Et est Beneficium compassibile cum alio Beneficio curato." He held, also, Prebends in Here-ford and other Cathedrals. "Item, idem habet quandam Graciam, a Sede Apostolica sibi nuper factam, de Canonatu sub expectatione Prebende in Libera Capella Regia de BOSHAM, Cicestrensis Diocesis, nondum assecu-tam; qua, quidem, Gracia nunquam uti intendit, sed ei renunciat per Presentes, ut dicit."
- [fol. 15b.] (14). Sir Thomas de Keynes, priest, "Elimosinarius Domini Regis," held, inter alia, a Prebend ("Prebendam annuam cursualem") in ST. CRANTOCK,—liijs., iiijd.; also, the Prebend of WESTBROKE in BOSHAM,—xxli.
- (15). Sir Walter Almaly, priest (see No. 7, supra). He was residing pro tem-pore in the Diocese of London, and had not yet obtained peaceable possession of NORTHMOLTON, "eo quod ipsa litigiosa est."
- DIOCESE OF NORWICH,—
- [fol. 18.] (16). Master Nicholaus de Baggethorpe, priest, "Legum Doctor, et in Jure Canonico Bacallarius, in Diocesi Norwicensi moram trahens." He held the Rectory of Fen Ditton (Dioc. of Ely,—40 marks), "et obtinet quandam Gra-ciam seu Provisionem, sibi factam et concessam per . . . Urbanum Papam Quintum, de Dignitate cum Prebenda in ECCLESIA CATHEDRALI EXONIE."

A.D. 1306. DIOCESE OF SALISBURY,—

[Abp. Langham's Register.] (17). Sir Roger de Cloune, priest, Archdeacon of Salisbury (80 marks—"et consistit in procuracionibus et proventibus incertis"). He held, also, the R. of Campsall (Dioc. of York,—100 marks), "ex Dispensacione Apostolica;" the Prebend of Grymstane in Salisbury Cathedral, 80 marks; and the Prebend of WESTSAUNFORD, in CREDITON,—4 marks.

[fol. 20.] (18). Sir John Seys, priest, held the R. of Hanney (Berks,—60 marks), "in qua Perpetuus est Vicarius; qui percipit omnes ejusdem Ecclesie fructus et proventus preter garbas et fenum dumtaxat; et est Pensionaria Prioratui de Longa Villa Giffardi in cs. sterlingorum; de qua Ecclesia Archidiaconus Loci percipit annuatim, pro procuracione sua, novem solidos, vd. ob., ejusdem monete. Et Canonicatum et Prebendam in ECCLESIA EXONIENSI, taxatos ad vi marcas sterlingorum, de quibus assignantur anno quolibet ad Fabricam Ecclesie tres marce. Necnon, Ecclesiam Parochialem et curatam de SLAPTON, Exoniensis Diocesis, ex Dispensacione Apostolica, taxatam ad ix marcas sterlingorum; de quibus percipit Archidiaconus Loci, pro procuracionibus, annuatim, quinque solidos ejusdem monete." He held, also, a Prebend in St. David's Cathedral,—5 marks. "Et Canonicatum et Prebendam de Landegi in Ecclesia Collegiata de Aberghwili, dicte Menevensis Diocesis, taxatos ad xij marcas sterlingorum; de quibus Vicarius in eadem Ecclesia percipit, singulis annis, ij marcas ejusdem monete."

his Prebend in Glasney Collegiate Church to Master Walter de Milemete. (Rot. Pat., 2 Edw. III., p. 1, m. 16), and on the 15th he granted to Stoctone his Prebend in the Cathedral (Ibid., m. 14)—F. J. B.

² He was inst. to the Rectory of Whitstone, in Cornwall, 10 Sept., 1310 (Stapeldon's Register, p. 270). And he must have resigned that Benefice before 2 Nov., 1327, when Thomas de Cruce occurs as Rector. This Thomas was not instituted by the Archbishop, Sede vacante, but, evidently, just before Bp. Stapeldon's death, when his Register fails us. There can be no doubt, therefore, that Seneschal became Provost between 17 June, 1325, and 15 Oct., 1326.—See pp. 23, 28.

¹ That there should be any such Exchange as this seems, at first sight, unaccountable; for the Prebends in the Cathedral were all of equal value, a fact which is frequently mentioned in the Registers; no estates or property of any kind were appropriated to any of them; and, consequently, they had no names. The stalls were not occupied in consecutive order, according to seniority, as Dr. Oliver supposed (History of the Bishops of Exeter, pp. 220, 221). All the Prebendaries, as Prebendaries, were of equal rank, and a junior Prebendary, just collated, would be installed not (as it were) "in the lowest room," but in the Stall which had been occupied by his predecessor, wherever it might be. Exchanges were occasionally desired for reasons which had nothing to do with the value or dignity of the Benefice, but on personal grounds; for instance, a Prebendary who had weak sight might desire to secure better light by changing from one side of the Choir to the other; or a man whose hearing was defective might desire to be nearer the High Altar or the singers. In every case a formal process was necessary.

- A.D. bendarius Prebende quam olim tenuit in eadem Magister Johannes de Brutone, et Johannes de Northwode, Canonicus, et Prebendarius Prebende quam 1839. olim habuit Magister Rogerus de Cherletone in eadem, personaliter constituti, et volentes, ex quibusdam causis, sua Beneficia hujusmodi adinvicem permutare; ipsa in manus Domini, ex causa Permutationis hujusmodi, resignarunt. Unde Dominus, Permutationi hujusmodi consensiciens, et causas approbans et justas ac Canonicas reputans, per Decretum, receptis Resignationibus hujusmodi, contulit dicto Willelmo Canonicatum et Prebendam quos olim tenuit in dicta Ecclesia Magister Rogerus de Cherletone, et dicto Johanni Canonicatum et Prebendam quos olim in eadem Ecclesia tenuit Magister J. de Brutone, ex causa Permutationis antedictæ; presentibus Magistro David Alyam, Notario Publico, Domino Willelmo Wolveye, Fratre J. SLAPTON, R.

Sir John Goughe exchanged Benefices with

Sir Philip Goughe, R. of Port-Eynon (Glamorganshire), and the latter was inst. in June. The Register gives only the Letter of John, Bp. of St. David's, directed to the Bp. of Exeter, commissioning him to admit and institute the said John Gough to Port-Eynon. It is inserted between 16 and 18 June, and I find no record of what was actually done in the matter ; but as the Commission is dated 29 April and was entered here, it is probable that both Institutions took place in June. The Bishop of St. David's reserved to himself the "recepicio Obediencie" and the Induction of John Gough. Patron of Port-Eynon, Brother John de Biltone, "Magister [Preceptorie de] Slebeche [Pembrokeshire]."

The words there marked as a quotation,—"per lapsum temporis" are not in the MS. ; and Sir Robert was not "collated"—"Dominus commendavit domino Roberto, Vicario Ecclesie Parochialis de Coletone." As, however, Bicton was not in the Bishop's gift, the words "sui Patronatus" imply a lapse, and the "etc.," probably, represents "hac vice per lapsum temporis legitime devolutam." The name "Bukyngtone" stands for both Bicton and High Bickington in the Registers ; and it is sometimes difficult to decide which was intended. In this case, as both Benefices were vacant, there would be nothing in this Entry to shew which was meant. The priest admitted in commendam, however, was V. of the next parish to Bicton ; and the Patron of High Bickington presented thereto a few days later.

Brauncetone possessionem pacificam idem Dominus Robertus erat inductus, ac ipsam Ecclesiam de Ippelepne eodem die resignavit et dimisit ; prout per Literas Institutionis Venerabilis Patrie, Domini Johannis [Gynwelle], Dei gracia Lincolnensis Episcopi, et Induccionis hujusmodi sub sigillo Officialis Domini Archidiaconi Lincolnie, ac quoddam Instrumentum Publicum, in presenti Inquisitione exhibita, satis constare videtur. Excellentissimus Princeps, etc., Edwardus, Dei gracia Rex Anglie, etc., est, hac vice, dicte Ecclesie de Ippelepne (sic) verus Patronus, et de jure presentare debet ad eandem, ratione reservacionis Advocacionum Ecclesiarum et Beneficiorum quorumcumque Ecclesiasticorum alienigenarum de Regno Francie in Anglia existencium, durante guerra inter ipsum et Philippum de Valesio per ipsum Regem facte, et temporalium hujusmodi alienigenarum, in manu sua capte existencium. Dominus noster Rex predictus prefatum Dominum Robertum occasione predicta ultimo presentavit ad ipsam, et est in possessione presentandi ad eandem. Predicta Ecclesia de Ippelepne non est litigiosa, nec pensionaria, quod sciatur. Est, enim, estimacionis sex librarum sterlingorum. Predictus Rogerus, nunc presentatus ad ipsam, liber est et legitimus, ydoneus, et honestus, bene morigeratus, ac etatis viginti quinque annorum et amplius, et in Ordine Accolitus constitutus ; nullum habens alibi Beneficium Ecclesiasticum ; nec aliquid obest Presentanti seu Presentato predictis, quod sciant. Quam, quidem, Inquisitionem, per me ut premittitur captam, sub sigillo Officii mei clausam, ac eodem et eorum per quos capta existit sigillis pendentibus consignatam, vestre Reverende Paternitati transmitto. Datum et actum in dicta Capella de Nywetone, die Martis et Anno Domini supradictis.—Quibus sic per nos receptis, idem Rogerus nos cum instantia humiliter requisivit ut ad apercionem et publicacionem ac examinacionem Inquisitionis predictae procedere, et sibi debitam justiciam facere curaremus, juxta traditam a vestra Paternitate nobis formam. Unde statim subsequenter, eodem die, in Ecclesia Exoniensi, dictam Inquisitionem aperuimus et publicavimus, sibi tunc respondentes quod super ea usque in crastinum, videlicet xxvij diem ejusdem mensis Maii, hora prima vel circiter, volumus deliberare, eidem Presentato eodem diem, horam, et locum, ad audiendum deliberacionem nostram, et ad faciendum et recipiendum in hac parte quod justicia suaderet, assignantes. Quo die, xxvij^{mo} die mensis Maii, et hora prima vel circiter illius diei, adveniente eodem Rogero, Presentato, coram nobis, in dicta Ecclesia Exoniensi sedentibus et super dicta Inquisitione et contentis in ea tractantibus, personaliter comparente, et cum instantia humiliter supplicante et petente se ad dictam Ecclesiam, ad Presentacionem Domini nostri Regis, de qua in ipsius Commissione et Inquisitione fit mencio, per nos admitti et Rectorem Perpetuum Canonice institui in eadem ; cum reperiimus ipsam Inquisitionem pro Presentante et Presentato facere memoratis, ipsum Rogerum, clericum, ad ipsam Ecclesiam de Ippelepne, ad quam per Excellentissimum Principem etc., vobis, Reverendo Patri et Domino, presentatus extiterit, ut premittitur, vice et auctoritate predictis per vestram Reverenciam nobis, ut premittitur, attributis, ad ipsam Domini Regis Presentacionem admisimus et Rectorem Perpetuum Canonice instituimus in eadem ; curam animarum et regimen dicte Ecclesie sibi in Domino committentes ; Canonice Obediencie vobis debite recepcione vestre Reverencie per nos ex habundanti reservata. EXETER CATHEDRAL; Certificatorium Episcopi Menevensis de Collacione facta Magistro Jacobo [de] Moltone de Canonicatu et Prebenda in Ecclesia Exoniensi,—

Venerabili etc., Johanni, etc., Reginaldus, eadem gracia Episcopus Menevensis, tanto Patri debitos reverenciam et honorem.—Literas vestras reverendas, nobis per discretum virum, Magistrum Jacobum de Moltone exhibitas, cum reverencia qua decuit recepimus, subscriptam seriem continentes,—Venerabili, etc., Domino et amico suo karissimo, Domino Reginaldo de Bryene, Electo Menevensi Confirmato, Johannes, etc., salutem, etc.—De vestris consciencie puritate et circumspeccionis industria plenam in Domino fiduciam optinentes, ad conferendum vice et auctoritate nostris Canonicatum et Prebendam quos quondam Petrus de Pateshulle in Ecclesia nostra Exoniensi habuit et tenuit quando vixit, Magistro Jacobo de Moltone, Presencium exhibitori, aut cuicumque alteri ydonee Persone, quam juxta vestre discretionis arbitrium duxeritis eligendam, si, quatenus, et in quantum eos de jure et de facto ad presens vacare et ad nostram dumtaxat Collacionem libere pertinere liquere vobis poterit legitime et constare, ista vice; prefatoque Magistro Jacobo, aut dicte ydonee Persone quam sic elegeritis, de eisdem Canonicatu et Prebenda cum plenitudine juris Canonici providendum; necnon, in eventum quo eidem Magistro Jacobo, aut alteri cuicumque, sic, ut premittitur, Canonice provideritis de eisdem, ipsum tunc cui per vos Provisio hujusmodi facta fuerit in corporalem possessionem eorundem, cum suis juribus et pertinenciis universis, induci faciendum et mandandum, Stallumque sibi in Choro et Locum in Capitulo assignari faciendum, ac Obediencie Canonice juramentum ab eo, nostro nomine, exigendum et recipiendum, ceteraque omnia et singula que in hac parte necessaria fuerint seu quomodolibet oportuna faciendum et expediendum; super quibus omnibus vestram intendimus conscienciam totaliter onerare; vobis, tenore Presencium, committimus vices nostras. Quid, autem, duxeritis faciendum in premisiis nobis, per vestras Literas patentes, harum seriem et totius Processus per vos inde facti et habiti modum et formam serius continentes, aut per Publicum Instrumentum, quam cicius comode poteritis, si libeat, intimetis.—Data apud Clyst, xxv^{to} die mensis Septembris, Anno Domini M^o. CCC^{mo} l^{mo}, et Consecracionis nostre xxij^o.—Quarum Literarum auctoritate ad inquirendum super articulis in hujusmodi Literis contentis processimus in hunc modum.—Inquisivimus, siquidem, diligenter si dicti Canonicatus et Prebenda, quatenus et in quantum tempore presencium Literarum vestrarum de jure et de facto vacarent, et si ad vestram Collacionem dumtaxat libere pertinerent. Verum per duos testes ydoneos, juratos et examinatos, legitime nobis extitit facta fides quod, post decessum Domini Petri de Pateshulle, Johannes Pyparde predictos Canonicatum et Prebendam Auctoritate Apostolica immediate extitit assecutus, et postea viam universe carnis ingressus. Deinde, per Literas vestro sigillo sigillatas, nobis notas, et per partem prefati Magistri Jacobi exhibitas, informationem recepimus quod Magistro Willelmo de Wyttelesseye, a tempore mortis prefati Johannis infra tempus juris, eisdem auctoritate ordinaria contulisti. Set per Instrumentum Publicum nobis ostensum, scriptum de manu Symonis de Wythiel, Auctoritate Apostolica Notarii Publici, nobis

A.D. 1850. Vol. III. fol. 94b. constitit quod Collacionem vestram idem Magister Willelmus septimo die mensis Octobris, Anno Domini supradicto, admittere recusavit, et exhabundanti renunciavit juri si quod habuit ex eadem. Et sic comperimus ad vos Collacionem dictorum Canonatus et Prebende de jure communi libere pertinere; propter quod eosdem prefato Jacobo, auctoritate vestra, contulimus et providimus de eisdem, et ipsum in corporalem possessionem induci, ac Stallum in Choro et Locum in Capitulo eidem fecimus assignari; et, nomine vestro, recepimus ab eo Canonice Obedientie juramentum. In cujus rei testimonium has Literas sigilli nostri fecimus impressione muniri.—Datum apud Ramesham [alias Rampisham, Dorset], xxvii^o die mensis Octobris, Anno Domini supradicto, et Consecrationis nostre primo.

EXETER; ST. NICHOLAS PRIORY; *Commissio ad recipiendum
 Resignacionem Prioratus Sancti Nicholai Exonie*,—

Directed 26 Feb. 1352-3 to Master John de Lecche, Professor of Canon-Law, Canon of Exeter, and Master Benedict de Pastone, "clerico nostro familiari."
 The Prior, Brother Thomas Ovyngs, had betaken himself, by special licence, to Battle Abbey, but had failed to return to his Priory within the time assigned; and great loss and injury had thereby accrued thereto. The Bishop declares that he might have deprived him, if he had so pleased; but, preferring to take a gentler course, he directed an Inquisition to be held as to the cause of the Prior's prolonged absence and any excuses he might be able to offer. His Resignation was to be accepted if he wished to resign, and could give good reasons for doing so. On the 14th of March (ij Idus Marcii), Lecche and Pastone certified the Bishop that Ovyngs had appeared before them on the 12th, in the Bishop of Hereford's London House,—“qui quidem, Prior, licet suam diutinam absenciam a dicto Prioratu ex causis justis, prout decuit, nullatenus excusaverit, dicto tamen Prioratui ad hoc, vi, metu, dolo, aut fraude, nullatenus ductus, ut asseruit, se sponte velle re-nunciare pluries fatebatur, ex hac causa; quod in ipsius regimine Deo placere, anime sue et eidem Prioratui proficere non potuit, ut in vinculo sue Pro-fessionis. Super hoc per nos firmiter adjuratus constanter asseruit vicibus iteratis, petens humiliter et instanter suam Resignacionem per nos, vice vestra, admitti.” Being satisfied with Ovyngs's statements, they accepted, there and then, his formal Resignation. On the 18th of March (xv Kalendas Aprilis), Robert, Abbat of Battle, presented Brother Matthew de Exonia; and on the 14th of April the Bishop issued a Commission, directed to Master John de Sharesulle and Master Stephen Penpel, Canons of Exeter, for his Admission and Institution, which took place on the 17th, and they certified the Bishop accordingly. The new Prior took the Oath of Canonical Obedience, at Chudleigh, on the same day,—in the presence of Masters B. de Pastone, Stephen Penpel, R. Inkepenne, and T. Tuggel, Notary-Publick.

Pastorale, illorum desideriis avidius inclinare tenemur qui, in partem sollicitudinis nostre vocati, salutem attentius procurant Fidelium et regimen animarum. Sane pridem dilectus in Christo filius, Dominus Ricardus de Gomersale, Prepositus Ecclesie nostre Collegiate Sancti Thome, Martiris, Glasneie, in Cornubia, devocione ductus laudabili, nobis cum instantia supplicavit quatinus Vicariam Perpetuam et curatam in Ecclesia Sancti Melori, Prepositure sue per bone memorie Petrum [Quivil], Exoniensem Episcopum, Predecessorem nostrum, appropriata Canonice et unita, et pro sustentacione Perpetui Vicarii per nos et Successores nostros, Exonienses Episcopos, ad Presentacionem dicti Prepositi et successorum suorum, Prepositorum ibidem qui pro tempore erunt, instituendi Canonice in eadem, qui ibidem Divinis Officiis et animarum cure in stacione continua intendere valeat studio vigilant, congruam porcionem de fructibus ejusdem Ecclesie, auctoritate Pontificali, ordinare, taxare, et moderare in forma juris debita dignaremur; onera Vicario qui ibidem pro tempore erit, nomine Vicarie sue hujusmodi incumbencia, serius designando. Nos, igitur, interius assidue revolventes quam pie et sinceriter dicti Prepositi intencio in hac parte in Domino sit fundata, ipsius supplicacionem hujusmodi favoribus prosequi duximus opportunis; Vicariam ibidem Perpetuam et ejus porcionem pro sustentacione Perpetui Vicarii ibidem, ut petitur, instituendi, habita deliberacione sufficienti, de consensu et assensu Prepositi supradicti, in modum qui sequitur ordinantes. In primis, videlicet, quod Vicarii dicte Ecclesie qui pro tempore erunt habeant et teneant, et ipsorum quilibet habeat et teneat, ejusdem Vicarie nomine, unum mesuagium juxta Cimiterium dicte Ecclesie situatum, cum uno gardino et uno crofto, et una pecia terre, que omnia simul unita decem acras terre ad minus volumus continere. Habeat, eciam, et percipiat Vicarius quilibet qui pro tempore erit ibidem, nomine Vicarie sue hujusmodi, altilagium integraliter et in solidum, et decimas minores quascumque, tam reales quam personales, tam dicte Ecclesie Parochialis quam, eciam, Capelle Sancti Laudi ab eadem Ecclesia dependentis; una cum decima feni et piscarie, et mortuariis totius Parochie; necnon, omnimodas obvenciones ad altilagium ejusdem Ecclesie quomodolibet pertinentes. Item, decimas garbarum de Kerygou¹ Vicarius hujusmodi, dicte Vicarie sue nomine, habeat inconcusse. Que omnia ad summam decem librarum sterlingorum, juxta ipsorum valorem annum, estimamus. Decimas, vero, majores totius Parochie, exceptis Vicario qui ibidem fuerit assignatis, prefato Preposito, et ejus successoribus qui pro tempore erunt ibidem, auctoritate presentis Ordinacionis nostre, integraliter volumus remanere. Volumus, eciam, et ordinamus quod dictus Prepositus, et successores sui supradicti, omnia onera tam ordinaria quam extraordinaria in solidum subeant et agnoscant, excepto Officio Decanatus Peculiaris Jurisdiccione nostre de Penryn; quod, quidem, Officium Vicarium memoratum qui pro tempore fuerit, quocienset

¹ The most recent account of this settlement will be read with interest,—“I find that Stephen Doble is owner of all the corn and grain tithes of the said Parish, excepting those arising from lands called a part of the Creggoes, and except those arising from the glebe-lands of the said Parish; and that the Vicar for the time being is entitled to all other tithes of the said Parish, and also to the corn and grain tithes arising from lands called part of the Creggoes. And, whereas I find that the tithes, both great and small, arising from the glebe-lands of the said Parish have been duly merged in the said lands, and such a merger has been duly confirmed by the Tithe-Commissioners; upon these grounds the award is that £350 be paid annually, by way of rent-charge, to Stephen Doble, instead of all the corn and grain tithes claimed by him; and that £215 annually, by way of rent-charge, be paid to the Vicar instead of all other tithes, and, also, instead of the corn and grain tithes of the lands called a part of the Creggoes.”

² “Brattone,” simply, in the MS., a name common in these Registers to Bratton-Clovelly and Bratton-Fleming. The latter parish was in the gift of the Flemings, and the Parson was frequently a member of that Family. It is sometimes difficult, not to say impossible, to ascertain which “Brattone” is meant, and the presumption is in favour of the latter when the Incumbent bears their name. Here, however, Bratton-Clo-velly was clearly intended, for it is described as being in the Bishop's gift

—"sui Patronatus . . . et ad Collacionem suam pleno jure spectantem," unless, indeed, it was a case of lapse.

¹ Dr. Oliver states (Eccles. Antiq., ii, 81) that "this most ancient Parish Church . . . has had a regular succession of Vicars from time immemorial." This was the case for a short time ; and I find in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas IV—"Ecclesia Sancti Pancracii, xls., Decima iiijs. ; Vicaria de eadem, xxvjs. viijd." But it is nearer the truth to say that this Benefice has been a Rectorcy from time immemorial. In the earlier Entries of Institution it is, sometimes called "Capella," but the Incumbent is referred to as "Rector." In 1473 I find "Ecclesia sive Libera Capella" ; in 1581, "Rectoria sive Capella" ; in the Valor Ecclesiasticus (1536—Bp. Vesey's Return), "Rectoria Sancti Pancrasii." The Prior of Lodres (as Proctor of the Abbat and Convent of Montburg) was Patron of the Rectory till 1473 when the Patronage passed to the Crown. Evidently, at first, the Bishop found it necessary to insist on a Vicar being instituted to serve the Church : this was often done in similar cases.

² He was Master of the Rolls for about 25 years, and died in 1370.

³ This is the last reference to the vacancy, and it would seem that Nicholas de Newetone (who succeeded William de Cusancia) was admitted soon after. According to Le Neve (i, 398), he was "presented by the King, 28th April, 1362 (Rot. Pat. 36 Edw. III, p. 1, m. 14)." William de Cusancia exchanged this Archdeaconry with Nicholas de Newetone, who was inst. thereto by the Bp. of St. David's, 26 Nov., 1357. There was, evidently, a new Presentation by the Crown at the later date.

⁴ I suppose a member of the Family of Densell, or perhaps Trewen from whom Filleigh passed to the Densells. The Family of Percehay enjoyed extensive possessions in the Parishes of Talaton and Burlescombe, and elsewhere in Devonshire. Sir Henry Percehay was appointed a junior Baron of the Exchequer in 1376.

EXETER CATHEDRAL; Archdeaconry of Cornwall,—

As we have seen (page 1487, note 3),

William de Cusancia resigned this Archdeaconry, and Nicholas de Newetone succeeded (by way of exchange), and was inst. thereto by the Bp. of St. David's, 26 Nov., 1357. There appears to have been some difficulty ; for he was presented thereto by the King in 1362. In, or before, Jan. 1367-8.

Alexander de Nevyle held the Archdeaconry, as the following Papal Bull (preserved in the P.R.O.) conclusively shews,—

"Urbanus Episcopus, Servus servorum Dei, dilecto filio, Willelmo de Wykham, Archidiacono Lincolnie, carissimi in Christo filii nostri, Edwardi, Regis Anglie illustris, Secretario, salutem et Apostolicam benedictionem.—Ex literarum sciencia et nobilitate generis, super quibus dilectus filius, Alexander de Nevyle, Archidiaconus Cornubie in Ecclesia Exoniensi, apud nos fidedignorum commendatur testimonio, ac venustate et mansuetudine morum quos in eo conspeximus ad dileccionem ejus allekti, eumque habentes singulariter acceptum et gratum ; ipsum carissimis in Christo filiis nostris, Edwardo Regi et Philippe Regine Anglie illustribus, affectuosius commendamus. Ideoque discrecionem tuam rogamus attente quatinus, penes dictos Regem et Reginam, eidem in omni honore et commodo suis assistas favoribus et auxiliis oportunis.—Data apud Montem Pessulanam, Magolorensis Diocesis, xij Kalendas Februarii, Pontificatus nostri Anno quinto (21 Jan., 1366-7). [F. J. B.].

Our Register contains no record of Nevyle's appointment, which was, probably, by Provision, and at about the above-mentioned date ; and Le Neve and Oliver do not mention him as Archdeacon. Neither is there any record of his Induction or of Newetone's resignation. The mystery, however, is cleared up in the Register of Bp. Grandisson's successor, Thomas de Brantingham, who found both Newetone and Nevyle in office, as rival Archdeacons ! The King had intervened, Sede vacante ; and he

A.D. 1366-7. Vol. III. solved the difficulty by setting both of them aside,¹ and sending a Mandate to the Bishop to admit Thomas Orgrave, which was done forthwith. The Entries, which were overlooked by both Le Neve and Oliver, will appear, I hope, in my Edition of Brantingham's Register.

CHULMLEIGH, the Prebendal Church of; Institutio Prebende de Chulmele, Puella nuncupate,—

¹ I have not been able to discover what became of Newetone. For Nevyle, however, promotion was immediately provided ; he was appointed to the Archdeaconry of Durham and to a Prebend in York Cathedral, and, three years later, to the Archbishoprick of York, by a Bull of Provision, dated 3 April, 1374. The Chapter of York had, actually, elected him just before, and the Royal Assent had been given 1 Jan., 1373-4. On the 30th of April, 1388, he was translated by Papal Bull to the Archbishoprick of St. Andrew's ; but the Translation never took effect, and he died an exile in Brabant at the end of May, 1392.—Le Neve, vol. iii, page 107.

NOTE

AS TO THE EARLY RECTORS OF COMBE-RALEIGH AND COMBEPYNE.

Dr. Oliver, in his Ecclesiastical Antiquities, vol. ii, page 88, gives the following List of the Rectors of COMBEPYNE, down to the end of Bishop Grandisson's Episcopate,—

- "Robert de Cestre, admitted by Bishop Bronescombe, 21 December, 1278, 'ad Ecclesiam de Cumbe,' on the Presentation of Sir Thomas de Pyn, Knt.
- "Martin de Sutton, whose Institution is not entered in the Episcopal Registers; but on whose resignation
- "Henry de Medecroft, de Wyke Risingdon, was admitted 20 April, 1334, to this Rectory of 'Comb Coffyn,' Pat. Walter de Sutton, See fol. 28, Vol. III of Grandisson's Register. On whose death—
- "N.B. Occasionally Comb Raleigh is called Comb Coffyn. See fol. 3, Turberville's Register.
- "William Toustreyn succeeded 28 September, 1348.
- "George de Umfravill followed 13 March, 1348-9. Pat. Gilbert de Umfravil.
- "John Thresh, whose Institution I cannot discover.
- "He was Rector of Sutton Montague, in the Diocese of Bath and Wells, at the same time. From folio 126, Vol. III of Grandisson's Register, I collect that he must have thought it convenient to resign Combpyne, when
- "William Hullefelde succeeded him 21 July, 1361, on the presentation of Sir William de Umfraville, Knt.
- "Walter Wyne followed on 3 December, the same year, 1361. Pat. Sir William de Umfraville, Knt." And then he passes to
- "William Langerygg, — on whose death
- "John Knowston, admitted 9 January, 1411-12. Pat. Edmund Pyn."

This List is most unsatisfactory. The names of several Rectors, whose Institutions are duly registered, are omitted; and some Rectors of Combe-Raleigh have been entered as Rectors of Combepyne. There are difficulties, no doubt, arising from the various names attributed to Combe-Raleigh. "This place," says Pole (Collections, page 131), "hath often altered his name, first named Cumb singly, after Cumb Baunton, and Comb Mathew, of the Dwellers"; to which I may add "Combe-St. Nicholas," "Comb Coffyn," "Combe juxta Honitone," and "Bisshopyscombe."¹ It will be observed,

¹ This name occurs once only, as far as I know, in our Episcopal Registers. Sir Martin de Sottone, Rector of "Bisshopyscombe," obtained Licence of non-residence for a year, 11 June, 1329 (see page 507). He was then Rector, not (as Oliver supposed) of Combepyne, but of Combe-Raleigh. Being puzzled by the name, I consulted the Rev. Oswald Reichel of Lympstone, who has been working for some time on the Domesday Hundreds, not by way of mere conjecture but scientifically, and who is a reliable authority on the subject. He writes, "I have before me two names, which may throw light on your question. The first is a 'Combe' of some 500 to 600 acres, to which Gerwille was annexed. Gerwille, held by Oliver under Tetbald Fitz Berner, is, clearly, Gorwell, in Hemyock, because the amount of Oliver's exempt land in that Hundred exactly tallies. 'Cumbe' I, at first, put down as the adjacent Medcombe; and I am not sure, now, that it is not. Still, two difficulties present themselves in that case. (1) Medcombe, on the map, appears too small. (2) Why was not Oliver's exempt land put down larger? It, then, occurred to me that it might be Combe-Raleigh. But against this (if I have got the other places in Hemyock Hundred correctly) must be set the fact that Hemyock Hundred will be too small by just the amount of the assessment of this Combe. Then, there is 'Scobecome,' called in one place 'Cobecume.' This is stated to have been appurtenant to Hembury, but to have been held by Ludo, together with Luppitt and Greenway (in the Parish of Luppitt), the lands

- A.D. 1370. moreover, that, according to Dr. Oliver, Combe Raleigh was "occasionally" called "Comb Coffyn"; in which case that name must have been, at one time, common to both Parishes; for of Combepyne Pole says (p. 126) that it was "anciently called Combe Coffin, of Elias de Coffin, possessor thereof, and after him S^r Thomas Pine; from him it came unto Umfravill." And it appears as "Combe Coffyn" in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas IV.

RECTORS OF COMBE-RALEIGH,—

[Robert de Cestre, clerk, was inst. 21 Dec., 1278; Patron, Sir Thomas de Pyn, Knt. (Register Bronescombe, fol. 90^b). There is a difficulty here. Oliver makes him R. of Combepyne, because of the Patron's name, and I followed him in my Edition of the Register (p. 126). But the Church of that Parish is dedicated to St. Mary; and I find in Bishop Stapeldon's Register (fol. 199^b) a copy of a Royal Writ, received by the Bishop, 10 Aug. 1313,—"de illis fructibus Ecclesie de Cumbe Sancti Nicholai, que est Roberti de Cestre, clerici." Mistakes were, occasionally, made in these Writs; but they were always carefully noted in his Returns by Bishop Stapeldon, and in this case he made no correction.]

Sir Martin de Suttone.² His institution is not recorded; but he occurs as as Rector of "Combe" in 1332 (see page 645). On his Resignation

Sir Henry de Medecroft, de Wike Risingdone, priest, was inst.³ 20 April, 1334; Patron, Walter de Suttone (Register Grandisson, iii, fol. 28). On his death

Sir William Toustreyn, priest, was inst.⁴ 28 Sept. 1348; Patron, Sir John de Raleghe, de Beaudeporte (Ibid., fol. 68). Two Entries below we find that this Rector had just resigned Culmstock—"ad Ecclesiam de Combebauntone curatam promotus." He was succeeded by Sir Nicholas Mulewarde, chaplain; who was inst.⁵ 23 Feb., 1348-9; Patron, Sir John de Raleghe, de Beaudeport (Ibid., fol. 73).

Sir Thomas Stone, priest, was inst.⁶ 20 Jan. 1361; Patron, Thomas de Seynt Aubyn⁷ (Ibid., fol. 135^b.) There can be no doubt that these five Incumbents of Walter de Dowai. After closely examining the map it seemed to me that Combe-Raleigh occupied the place where Scobecombe ought to be. Now, as Scobecome, Cobecome, Escobecome were doubtless pronounced Shobecombe, Chobecome, Eschobecombe, it occurred to me that, possibly, the first part of the name might be a corruption of 'Bishop,' and 'Bishopscombe' a survival of Scobecombe, or an attempt to give it meaning; or Scobecombe itself a corruption of Bishopscombe." This is, I think, not merely an ingenious argument; the alternative name of Bishopscombe for Combe-Raleigh has to be accounted for somehow, and on the basis of ascertained local facts; and I am inclined to think that Mr. Reichel has solved the problem.

¹ To "Cumbe Sancti Nicholai"; the Church is dedicated to St. Nicholas, and the Parish is called "Combe Sancti Nicholai" in the Taxation of Pope Nicholas IV.

² "in Kinge Edw. 2 tyme Walter de Suttone [held this land"—Combe-Raleigh]. Martin was, of course, a kinsman (Pole's Collections, p. 132).

³ To "Combe Coffyn." And Robert [de Cestre] occurs as Parson of "Combe Coffyn," 4 April, 1297 (Rot. Pat. Edw. II., m. 11^d). Of course, he may have held both Benefices.

⁵ To "Combe Bauntone."

⁶ To "Combe Baumtone."

⁷ "S^r John Ralegh, K^t, had issue Alis, wief of S^r Thomas Sant Awbyn" (Pole, p. 132).

1510 THE REGISTER OF BISHOP GRANDISSON.

A.D. 1870. Vol. III. were Rectors of Combe-Raleigh, though Oliver makes the first three Rectors of Combepyne ; the fourth and fifth he passes over. This Incumbent seems to have survived Bishop Grandisson.

RECTORS OF COMBEPYNE, —

If we exclude Robert de Cestre, whose case (as I have shewn above) is, perhaps, doubtful, the first Rector of Combepyne whose name has come down to us was Sir George de Umframville, who was inst. 13 March, 1348-9 : Patron, Sir Gilbert de Umframville.¹ (Register Grandisson, fol. 74).

Sir Robert Bruere,² priest, was collated by lapse, 15 March, 1350-1 (Ibid., fol. 95).

Sir William Coke succeeded. His Institution was not registered;³ but he exchanged this Rectory, 22 Sept., 1355, with

Sir John Thomas, dictus Lerestre, de Threske ; Patron, Sir William de Umfraville, Knt. (Ibid., fol. 105b).⁴ On the 15th of July, 1361, "John Threske," who had been R. of Sutton-Montis [Suttone Mountagu, MS.], Dioc. of B. & W., for a month, presented himself to the Bishop at Chudleigh, and resigned Combepyne, "prout teneor per Constitutionem Domini Pape Johannis XXII^{di}, que incipit Execrabilis." And on the 21st of the same month,

Sir William Hullefelde, priest, was inst. ; Patron, Sir William de Umfreville, Knt. (Ibid., fol. 126b). His successor, Sir Walter Wyne, priest, was inst. 3 Dec., 1361 ; Patron, the same (Ibid., fol. 132b).

Oliver now passes to "William Langerygg," mentioning only his death and the Institution of his successor, John Knowston, by Bp. Stafford in 1411 ; and omitting four Rectors who were inst. in the interval. On the Resignation of Wyne,

John Grey, priest, was inst. 30 Aug., 1373 ; Patron, William Deomfreville, Knt. (Register Brantingham, fol. 29b). He exchanged Benefices, almost immediately, with

Sir John Langley, V. of Axminster, who was inst. 3 Sept. following ; Patron, the same (Ibid.). His successor was

Sir Thomas Lacche, the date of whose Institution is not recorded ; but, under 1381, in a List of forty-three Institutions by Master William Trenellys, Vicar-General, I find this curt Entry,—"Rector Ecclesie de Combepyn" (Ibid., fol. 68).

On the death of Lacche,

Sir William Launce, priest, was inst., 28 Sept., 1387, on the Presentation of Sir Peter Courtenay, Knt. (Ibid. fol. 107).

We, now, reach

Sir William Langerigge, with whom Launce exchanged for the Rectory of Charmouth (Dioc. of Salisbury), 19 April, 1392 ; Patron, Alice, relict of William Umfraville. (Ibid., fol. 132b).

³ On folio 111 a blank space was left for an omitted Entry, between the 28th of May and the 12th of June, 1353, which, in all probability, indicates the approximate date of Coke's Institution.

THE WILL OF BISHOP GRANDISSON.¹

[Translation]

A.D. 1309. IN THE NAME of our Lord Jesus Christ, Son of the Virgin Mary, fol. 103b. with the Holy Ghost in the glory of God the Father Almighty. Amen.

I, JOHN DE GRANDISSON, of the Church of Exeter an unprofitable and unworthy Minister, being, by the grace of God, sound in mind and body do make my Will after this manner. I commend my spirit to my Creator, the Creator of all; but as to my body, which is corruptible and hath weighed down² my soul, I will that it be buried without the West Door of the Church of Exeter, as quickly as can possibly be arranged in seemly fashion; without inviting my near kinsfolk or great Nobles, but only any neighbouring Bishop or Bishops. And I will that four wax tapers be set about my body, each of twenty pounds in weight, one at the head, one at the feet, and one on the right hand and on the left hand one. As for the other tapers, each of which is to be a pound in weight, let a pair be set on each Altar throughout the Church; and let one of them there remain, and the others be distributed amongst the Parish-Churches in the City. I also forbid, under pain of the Divine displeasure, all drinking of spiced wine in the Choir, by night, around my body; but, if such things must needs be done, let it be in the Chapter-House, or in some other place suitable for such a purpose; or, instead thereof, let a hundred shillings be distributed in common amongst all Ministers of the Choir who are present and recite the Psalter. I will, also, and bequeath, that, on the said day of my burial, a hundred of the poorer people be provided with cloaks and hoods, if so many can be procured, made of thick cloth, white or grey; and that simple priests who attend on the said day of my interment, as well as all Religious, whether men or women, receive, each of actions, Vol. I., part I). It seems desirable that it should find a place at the end of the Bishop's Register; and I have been urged by some of my friends not merely to reprint (as I hope to do in the Appendix) the Latin Original, but to give a literal translation of the Document.

them, four pence. Also, if any Bishop, or Bishops, shall come to my burial, let each of them receive for his expenses, as much as shall seem good to my Executors; together with a Pontifical ring, or a plain mitre embroidered with gold thread, or some other fitting jewel, unless he has received one from me in my lifetime. But the Canons of the Church of Exeter who attend on the said day are to have, each of them, forty pence; the Vicars who are present, two shillings each; the Secondaries and the Annivellars, twelve pence each; the Secondary Clerks, twelve pence each; the boys of the Choir, six pence each; the Custors, for the ringing, provided that the peals be short and not unduly prolonged, twelve pence each; the Brothers of the Hospital of St. John at Exeter, being priests, two shillings each; the infirm there, twelve pence each; the prisoners at Exeter, forty pence, to buy bread; the infirm of the House of the Blessed Mary Magdalene at Exeter, two shillings, to be divided amongst them; the Priests of St. Gabriel of Clyst, two shillings each. Also, I bequeath two shillings to every Rector within the City of Exeter, and to every Holy Water bearer six pence. I will, also, that, from the day of my burial until the thirtieth day following, the Exequies be said daily, and Mass celebrated in some convenient place. And I will that, with the exception of the Solemn Mass on the day of my burial and one Mass of Requiem on each of the other days, all the Masses that shall be said for me be of the Blessed Mary, together with the prayer for the dead. And throughout those thirty days, every Canon who, on any day, shall have been present at the Mass and the Vigils, is to have for each day six pence; every Vicar four pence; every Secondary three pence; and every boy two pence. And if any of the Canons sing the Mass on any day during the Trental, he is to have, in addition, six pence; if a Vicar, three pence. Also, I desire that my familiars be clad, not in black garments, but in their own robes of the suit of the current year; and the priests and clerks of my Chapel in surplices and white capes, as they have been accustomed. And it is not my wish that there should be a general distribution of bread to the poor on the actual day of my burial, but on some other day, either before or after; and that, as far as shall be possible, not in money but in bread.

Also, I give and bequeath to the Church of Exeter my best white Vestments, namely, chasuble, tunicle, and dalmatick, with the cope, all embroidered with the rosary in gold and my arms, and with demi-angels; as well as four of my best copes, of one suit, of white silk, diapered with beavers and other beasts worked in gold. Also, I bequeath to the said Church a cross gilt,¹ having precious stones on either side; the which is divided into two parts, and a piece of our Lord's Cross enclosed therein. Also, I bequeath to the said Church two images of the Apostles Peter and Paul, of silver gilt,¹ and a golden thurible, and two other thuribles of a suit, engraved and gilt, and the silver bason belonging to my Chapel, fitted with chains, for hanging the Archdeacon of Exeter's taper before the High Altar.² Also, I bequeath to the said Church two Antiphonaries, two Graduals, and two Psalters, the larger and better of those belonging to my Chapel, and the Book of the Gospel of St. John, in antient writing, covered with silver gilt. I bequeath, also, to the said Church Vestments for use on the Feasts of the Epiphany, of Pentecost, and of the Apostles Peter and Paul, namely chasuble, tunicle, and dalmatick, with the cope, all of red and gold cloth called *de nacto*³; also, a chasuble, tunicle, and dalmatick, with a cope, all of violet velvet, to be used at my Exequies and at my Obit, and at those of other persons of consequence. Also, I bequeath to the said Church my third-best mitre, with the pastoral staff which I bought in Paris, as well as a ring and gloves and other necessary things pertaining to the office of a Bishop, to be used whenever my Successors, or any other Bishops, shall chance, casually, to celebrate therein. But as to the precious and exquisitely wrought vessel or jewel with supporting angels, for the Eucharist, of the value of two hundred florins, I will that it remain unto the Church of Exeter, on condition that that which is now used therein on the Feast of Corpus Christi and on other solemn days be deposited and remain at Ottery.

Also, I bequeath to the Warden, Minister, Precentor, and Sacristan of the Collegiate Church of St. Mary of Ottery, to each of them forty shillings. Also, I bequeath to each of the Vicars in the said Church forty pence.

Also, I bequeath to Sir William Lunday, Precentor of the Church of the Holy Cross at Crediton, forty shillings; and to the Dean of the said Place one mark. Also, I bequeath to each of the Vicars in the said Church forty shillings, that he may pray for my soul.

³ Apparently a woollen cloth, of various colours, sometimes, having gold threads inwoven. In the Inventory (A.D. 1363) of the Sainte Chapelle, at Paris, it is referred to as follows,—

"Item, una infula, una dalmatica, et una tunica, de Nacto albo, parvi valoris. Item, due cape de Nacto viridi. Item, due cappe de Nacto rubeo. Item due alie cappe de Nacto albo."

—See Ducange, s.v. Nactum

A.D. 1260. Also, I bequeath to the Collegiate Church of St. Thomas the Martyr, at Glasney, for the new work there, twenty marks. Also, I bequeath to each Canon there, being in residence, half a mark ; and to each Vicar of the said Church forty pence, that he may pray for my soul.

Also, I bequeath to our Lord the Supreme Pontiff a cope exceeding precious, of violet velvet embroidered with images, as well as my beautiful orphrey, and a Book of the Sermons of the Blessed Bernard. Also, I bequeath to the Treasury of our Lord the Pope, forasmuch as I was once a Nuncio of the Apostolick See, two hundred florins of Florence, or the equivalent thereof in current money.

Also, I bequeath to our Lord the King a beautiful cloth, embroidered in Roman work representing the Passion of our Crucified Lord, with the robbers hanging on either side. Also, I bequeath to my Lord, the Prince of Aquitaine and Wales, and to his brother, my Lord the Duke of Lancaster, and to the said Duke's wife and kinswoman Blanche ; to each of them some vessel or jewel, at the discretion of my Executors, to be kept in memory of me ; also, to the Lady Isabella, eldest daughter of our Lord the King, my best Psalter.¹

Also, I bequeath to the Venerable Father in Christ, the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being, the great dorser in my hall, representing the Coronation of the Blessed Mary, with the Apostles sitting on thrones and holding each of them an Article of the Creed, together with a Pontifical ring, to be used when celebrating, and fifty marks sterling ; to the end that he may assist my Executors in carrying out the provisions of my last Will, and may not harrass them ; and that neither he himself, nor his official, or others soever his Ministers, in his name, may demand or exact anything else from my said Executors on any pretence. If they do otherwise, let them forfeit the said legacies ; and in such case I bequeath them to the Treasury of our Lord the Pope, to be taken charge of by the Nuncio of the Apostolick See in England ; to the intent that, on behalf of our Lord the Pope, he may help and protect my Executors. Also, I bequeath to the said Clerk or Nuncio of our Lord the Pope, in order that he may help and deal favourably with my Executors, and be himself one of them, fifty florins of Florence or the equivalent thereof.

Also, I bequeath to my Successors, on the under-written conditions, and on no other terms,—first, that precious mitre which I bought of the Executors of my Predecessor Walter [de Stapeldon] for two hundred marks sterling, and afterwards caused to be thoroughly repaired and improved, in Paris, at a cost of a hundred and twenty marks. Also, I bequeath to my said Successors my best Pastoral Staff, gilt and enamelled; and my second-best cope of those not already bequeathed, to wit the red one, with golden images; together with two rings, one for use when celebrating, and the other for ordinary use with the diverse coverings of the Altar, to wit the white, the red, and the violet powdered with roses; also my gloves and sandals, and all other things necessary to a Bishop, not already bequeathed. Also, I bequeath to the same my Pontifical Books, the greater and the smaller, which I myself compiled; and three Missals, namely one of great value, noted, and containing the Sequences, in which is written In Principio, and this is to remain to my Successor; another, new and in good condition, of the same letter, but without notation; and the third a portable one, whichever he may see fit to select. Also, I bequeath to the same the Book of the Meditations and Prayers of Blessed Anselm and Blessed Augustine, in one great volume. Also, my dorser of the martyrdom of the Apostles Peter and Paul. Also, a silver vessel for Holy Water, with a sprinkler of silver, and a golden chalice with gilt cruets. Also, two other ordinary chalices of silver-gilt, for the use of their chaplains, and my round chrismatory, which belonged to William Durand, author of the Speculum Juris. Also, two pairs of painted altar-tablets, the best of those not otherwise bequeathed. Also, four of my smaller silver candlesticks, with two of my best thuribles not already bequeathed, and a great ship for the incense, and a large bell, all of silver. Also, a gilt Cross, with gems and images of Mary and John, which I bought in Paris. Also, the Book of the Gospels as they are read throughout the year, with covers of silver, having images in relief of the Crucified, of Mary, and of John on one side, and on the other the Coronation in niello-work. Also, I bequeath to my said Successors three portable Graduals, and one of larger size, for their own use. Also, a Legend complete, in one volume, belonging to my chamber. Also, my best Bible. Also, two Books of Homilies, for reading in their presence. Also, the larger Antiphonary and the Psalter, which lie before me in my Chapel, together with two other Psalters for the Clerks. Also, I bequeath to the same a white chasuble, with tunicle and dalmatick, diapered with beavers and gold beasts mixed, together with three copes of the same suit. Also,

I bequeath to the same a chasuble, with tunicle and dalmatick and cope, all of violet colour with golden roses. Also a suit of red vestments, and another suit of yellow, with tunicles and dalmatics and three copes of each suit, as well as all the other Pontifical tunicles and dalmaticks which I am accustomed to wear. Also, three albes, with their apparels, worked with arms, as well as two fair albes and two others for their own use. Also, four silver basons for the hall, and one wide silver bason for alms. Also, I bequeath to the same four silver chargers, twenty four of my best silver dishes, together with as many salt-cellars, two silver pots, twelve silver goblets, plain, and one of my best silver cups and a beaker. Also, a cup of silver-gilt, of a hundred shillings weight, now at Ottery, with my arms and certain images engraved thereon, and with an inscription on the foot—that they bear in mind Seint Mary Otery. Also, a golden spoon and another of gilt, for their own use, together with a set of four-and-twenty silver spoons. Also, I bequeath to my Successor a hundred bullocks and a thousand sheep, if it turn out that I have so many, and a hundred pounds sterling. And I will that he leave to his Successors for ever the mitre and all other things afore-mentioned pertaining to the Service of God, together with the dorser and the cup now at Ottery; also, a hundred bullocks; providing that, when the See is vacant, they be in the custody of the Chapter of Exeter, to be transferred to the Bishop-elect, by indenture, after his Confirmation. And let not my Successors consign to oblivion how, with much travail and personal expense, I went to the Roman Court, and obtained for them the Appropriation of the Church of Radeway, in their Manor of Bishop's Teignton, and likewise the consent and Charter of the King; and how I erected convenient and sumptuous buildings there within the Sanctuary, that they might have where to lay their head if their temporalities should be seized into the hand of the King; the Bull of the Apostolick Commission concerning which, together with the Letter of Appropriation by Adam [de Orleton], formerly Bishop of Worcester,¹ and the King's Charter, they will be able to find in my coffers. Also, my said Successor is to have all the tables, waggons, and carts, and all utensils of wood, and other things of that kind belonging to the dead stock in all my Manors; not one of which I received from my Predecessors: on which account it is my will that it be understood that all the aforesaid things are bequeathed to my Successor, or Successors, on condition that my immediate Successor demand nothing further from my estate on account of losses and dilapidations; if otherwise, neither he himself nor my other Successors are to have any portion of the aforesaid legacies, but my Executors are to meet their claims from other sources.

Also, I bequeath to the Venerable Father in Christ, the Lord Lewis [de Cher'etone], by the grace of God Bishop of Hereford, a pontifical ring, with sandals and gloves; also a large Book of Concordances.

Also, I bequeath to each of my Brethren, my fellow-Bishops of the Province of Canterbury, a simple mitre, unless he has had one from me in my life-time.

Also, I forbid that my Ecclesiastical or Theological Books, or my Ecclesiastical Vestments, should be exposed for sale, unless perchance, my other goods not proving sufficient, urgent necessity for dispersing them thus should arise; but all the Books belonging to my Chapel are to be disposed of as directed above; and the rest, not specially bequeathed, are to be distributed amongst certain Collegiate Churches,—in the first place to Ottery, and then to Crediton and the Royal Free Chapel of Bosham. But the Theological Books of moderate value are to be distributed amongst poor Scholars reading Theology, and to Stapeldon Hall, in Oxford; with this proviso, however,—that the Writings of Nicholas de Lira and of Nicholas de Tryveth on the Psalter, together with other Books of a better class, the complete works of the authors, not now included in the Library of the Church of Exeter, be deposited there amongst the Archives. And the Friars-Preachers of Exeter are to have all the Writings of the Saint, Brother Thomas of Aquino, who was of their Order.

Also, I bequeath my basin, which belonged to St. Edmund the Confessor, to the Collegiate Church dedicated in his honour at Salisbury.

Also, I bequeath to the Conventual Church of Westminster, to be kept in memory of me, a wide frontal with demi-images of Roman work, together with a cloth for the Altar bearing the arms of England and of France.

Also, I bequeath to the Collegiate Church of St. Mary at Ottery an image of the Blessed Mary of silver-gilt, and a Cross containing reliicks, which the Abbat of Glastonbury gave me.

Also, I bequeath to the Collegiate Church of the Holy Cross at Crediton a cloth for the Altar, with a representation of a Majesty in the middle, and of the Angel before the Virgin, one on either side ; also, a cloth with the emblems of the Passion, belonging to the same set, to be hung above it.

Also, I bequeath to the House of the Nuns of Aconbury six marks.

Also, I bequeath to Sir William de Montacute, Earl of Salisbury, a vessel, or some jewel, at the discretion of my Executors, in memory of me.

Also, I bequeath to his brother, Sir John de Montacute, one of my larger pots for wine, of silver-gilt, and two silver basins bearing the arms of Montacute, together with some other cup and another pot, both of silver-gilt. Also, I bequeath to the same my round basin, of great weight, used for shaving, and a silver plate for spices. Also, I bequeath to the same, to descend to his heirs, a ruby ring which belonged to the Lord my Father, and an orb of silver-gilt, with cover, belonging to my Chapel, for the Body of Christ suspended above the Altar.

Also, I bequeath to Sir Edward de Arundelle, and Sibilla his wife, twenty pounds, and a silver pot, with a cup gilt.

Also, I bequeath to Master Philip de Beauchamp my beautiful little Bible, which I received from Master Robert Herward, together with the Breviary and Psalter belonging to my chamber ; also, a small and beautiful Missal, a great Book of Decrees and Decretals, and a ring with sapphires, beautiful and thick set in the form of a cross ; and a Vestment, to wit chasuble, tunicle, and dalmatic, and a cope, together with the albe, stole, maniple, and amice.

Also, I bequeath to Master William de Courtenay any Book of Theology or Canon-Law that my Executors shall select.

Also, I bequeath to Brother Roger de Westbury ten marks ; to William de Braybroke twenty pounds ; to John de Clyfforde twenty marks only, because I gave him a token of my regard in his lifetime (sic), from another source.

Also, I bequeath to Randolph Blaunkmonster ten marks sterling ; to John the tailor and Geoffrey the barber—five marks to each of them, provided they continue in my service till the time of my death.

Let the priests, also, the commensales of my suite, who have not been promoted by me, as well as all other my continuous familiars, whose names are not mentioned above, be provided for in proportion to the duration of their service, according to the discretion and judgement of my Executors. Let the promoted priests who have been in attendance on me for three years continuously and up to the time of my death, have, each of them, some vessel or jewel, a book, or an ordinary set of vestments, at the discretion of my Executors.

Also, I bequeath to the Priors of Plympton, Bodmin, Launceston, and St. German's, to each of them six marks, for my Exequies and to celebrate my Obit.

Also, I bequeath to the Abbeyes of Forde, Buckfast, Dunkeswell, Torre, and Buckland, and to the Priory of Frithelstock, according to the number of priests in each House, to every priest two shillings, that they may pray for my soul.

Also, I bequeath to the Priory of St. Nicholas, Exeter, my large drinking-cup¹, an Indian nut with silver foot and cover, to remain there in memory of me for ever, and a hundred shillings to enable them to purchase a bell.

Also, I bequeath to the Houses of the Nuns of Polsloe, Canonsleigh, and Cornworthy, to each House five marks.

Also, I bequeath to the Friars-Preachers of Exeter a hundred shillings, and to the Friars-Minors of Exeter five marks. Also, to the Friars-Preachers of Truro and the Minorites of Bodmin, to each House forty shillings. Also, to the Carmelite Friars of Sutton forty shillings, together with a simple Vestment, unless they shall have had one in my life-time.

Also, I bequeath to the Parish-Church of Chudleigh the two largest bells in the belfry of my Chapel at Chudleigh.

Also, to each of the Hospitals for lepers and other sick folk within the Bishoprick of Exeter, according to the number of those who dwell in them, to every sick person twelve pence.

Also, I bequeath to the Parish-Church of Ashperton, in the Diocese of Hereford, where I was born, unless it shall have received the gift in my life-time, a suitable Vestment for a priest; to wit, a chasuble, with albe apparelled, stole, and maniple. Also, I bequeath to the Prebendal Church of Haydor, near Grantham, which was my Prebend in the Church of Lincoln, a Vestment, with tunicle and dalmatic, unless it shall have received the gift in my life-time. But it is my will that, of the Vestments and other Ecclesiastical Ornaments bequeathed as above, those belonging to my Chapel be so dealt with in the first instance, as far as they suffice for the purpose; and that, if need be, the rest be supplied from new purchases in London; so that, by the grace of God, not one of the above-named Church-legacies be omitted, but that all be duly provided, if it can be conveniently managed, out of my goods.

A.D. 1369. As to my ordinary effects, my wearing-apparel and bed-furniture, except such things as belong to my chamberlains by custom, I will that they be divided amongst poor priests, whether Rectors or Vicars, being in want, and the Vicars-Choral of the Collegiate Church of Crediton, and honest widows or recluses, and Hospitals, according to the discretion and judgement of my Executors. But all my ordinary orphreys, together with the fringes and other things belonging to Ecclesiastical Vestments which have not been bequeathed, I assign and bequeath for disposal by Master Nicholas de Braybroke and Thomas Tuggell. But the residue of all my goods, if there be any, of things not bequeathed, I bequeath for the erection of a comely residence for the common use of the Vicars-Choral of the Church of Exeter, and for other works of piety.

For the execution of this my Testament or Last Will I supplicate the Venerable Fathers in Christ, my Lords and most dear Brother-Bishops, the Lords Lewis and William, by the grace of God Bishops of Hereford and Worcester¹, to consent to act as the co-adjutors and overseers and counsellors of my Executors. And further, I ordain, make, and constitute as my Executors, Sir John de Montacute, my nephew, also my grandnephew Master Philip de Bellocampo, if he be in England, and also the Clerk of our Lord the Pope, Nuncio² for the time being of the Apostolick See in England ; also, Master Stephen de Pempel, Dean of the Church of Wells, and, in addition, Masters John de Shareshulle, Precentor, John Wyliethe, Chancellor, Robert de Wykforde, John de Holande, and Nicholas de Braybroke, Canons of the Church of Exeter, Sir Andrew de Moore, Warden of the Collegiate Church of St. Mary of Ottery ; also, William de Braybroke, Sir John de Mounceaux, Sir Thomas Sage, and Sir Thomas Tuggel : so that if they are not all of them willing or able to undertake the execution of this my Testament, Administration may be accepted and carried out by four, or at least by three, efficient and suitable men who may put in an appearance. And I bequeath to each of my aforesaid Executors undertaking the burden of this Testament, in return for his trouble and in addition to his expenses, a silver cup with a beaker, or a ring of good value, or some jewel useful and acceptable to each one of them, together with a hundred shillings sterling ; the other legacies provided for above for the said Executors, or for any of them, to remain, nevertheless, in full force. And I adjure my aforesaid Executors, and by the compassion of the Mother of Mercy and the sprinkling of the Blood of Jesus Christ, her Son, our Lord, beseech them, both to accept Administration of this Testament, not excusing themselves voluntarily, and also faithfully, speedily, and diligently to execute the same, taking care that the expenses are moderate and free from all extravagance, that they may receive the gift of everlasting life from the Rewarder of all good works. And it is my will, and I hereby request, that a thin plate of lead, to be deposited with my body, be inscribed thus,— “Here lieth John de Grandisson, the pitiable Bishop of Exeter, most miserable servant of the Mother of Mercy; whose compassionate Son, through her prayers, has shewn him mercy, in order that, ceasing to be miserable, he might be made blessed, and that to all others who are in misery might be vouchsafed the hope of bewailing their sins.”

In testimony of which things, all and singular, this my Testament is sealed with the impression of my ring.

Given in my Manor of Chudleigh, in the Diocese of Exeter, on the eighth day of the month of September, in the year of our Lord 1368, and the forty-first of my Consecration.

The Subscription of the Lord Bishop of Exeter, by his own hand,—

I, JOHN DE GRANDISSON aforesaid, do sign my aforesaid Testament on this most high Feast of the ever Blessed Virgin Mary, who brought a message of joy to the whole world; of whom was born the Sun of Justice, Christ our Lord, Who taking away the curse bestowed on us a blessing, and, overthrowing death, hath given unto us everlasting life.

—The Probate of the Will of the Bishop of Exeter; a copy of which is written on the sixth folio preceding,—

We, William, etc., make known to all men that on the 8th of the Kalends of August [25 July], A.D. 1369, in the Chapel of our Manor of Lambeth, the Will of John de Grandisson, of happy memory, late Bishop of Exeter, deceased, annexed to these Presents, was proved before us, and by us acknowledged and approved, and lawfully pronounced as such Will; and we, William, Archbishop of Canterbury above-mentioned, and specially appointed Overseer of the aforesaid Will by the said deceased, do will, and by these Presents grant expressly, that the discreet man, Master Nicholas Braybroke, Canon of the Cathedral Church of Exeter, Thomas Tuggell, and William Braybroke, Executors nominated in the said Will, do sell, for the expenses of the interment of the body of the said deceased, such goods, the property of the said deceased, as cannot be conveniently reserved; and that the price received for the same be profitably used for the funeral expenses of the said deceased, at the discretion and pleasure of the said Masters Nicholas, Thomas, and William; the residue of the price of such goods so sold, if there be any, over and above the expenses of the funeral of the said deceased, to be wholly reserved until the acceptance of Administration by the said Executors on this behalf. In testimony whereof, our seal, etc.—Given in the place, and on the day of the year of Our Lord above-mentioned.

By the tenour of these Presents, we, William, etc., make known to all men that, on the second of the Nones of December [4 Dec.], A.D. 1369, there appeared before us, personally, in our chamber in our Manor of Lambeth, the venerable and discreet man, Sir John de Montacute, Knight, and Master Nicholas Braybroke, Canon of the Cathedral Church of Exeter, Executors of the Will of the Lord John de Grandisson, of happy memory, late Bishop of Exeter, deceased, and while he lived our Suffragan and of our Church of Canterbury; nominated in his Will, annexed to these Presents; to whom we have granted Administration of all the goods pertaining to his said Will, wheresoever found within our Province of Canterbury; they having, in the first place, taken the customary oath, in due form of law, on the Holy Gospels of God, to make a faithful Inventory of all the goods of the said deceased, and to administer all the goods of the said deceased faithfully, and also to render a faithful account thereof to us, or to our Successors, whenever they shall be reasonably required to do so; reserving, moreover, to ourselves power to grant Administration of the said goods to the other Executors nominated in the said Will, when they shall come to us prepared to accept the same in due form of law. In testimony whereof, etc.—Given in the place, and on the day of the year of our Lord above-mentioned, and the second year of our Translation.

—Acquittance of the Executors of the Lord Bishop of Exeter, deceased,—

By the tenour of these Presents, we, William, etc., make known to all men that, the account or reckoning of the Executors of the Lord John de Grandisson, of happy memory, late Bishop of Exeter, deceased, and while he lived our Suffragan and of our Church of Canterbury, of and concerning their Administration of the goods of the said deceased pertaining to his Will, having been audited by us, we find that the said Executors have well and faithfully administered such goods, according to the last Will of the deceased aforesaid, and have converted them to the uses prescribed by the said deceased. Wherefore we, as far as pertains to our Office, do release the aforesaid Executors from all further rendering of account or reckoning concerning the goods so administered, saving the rights of all, and we discharge them from examination by us, by these Presents, sealed with our seal.—Given at Otford, on the 14th of the Kalends of May [18 April], in the year of our Lord 1370, and the second of our Translation.

Ottery-St. Mary—Feb. 4.

³³ The dates from this point are taken, with few exceptions, from the Register of Institutions. It will be seen how continuous they are. The "Black Death" was desolating the land; and, as Parish after Parish fell vacant, newly appointed Clerks came to the Bishop at Chudleigh for Admission, almost day by day; on some days one, on others in groups; and very many of the Entries begin with the words, "Item, eisdem die et loco." In such cases I have given, within brackets, the number of Institutions on each day. The Register henceforth provides but scanty materials for an Itinerary; only the Bishop's Acts at Chudleigh (for many years his head-quarters), and at some few places, in the immediate neighbourhood, are now recorded, all separate quaterni, as well as his Ordination-Lists, having long since perished.

Dicit quod continet in se veritatem, eo quod ipse qui loquitur est sexagenarius, et vidit tres Vicarios apud Stoke, et quemlibet pro tempore excolere terram apud Wadtone (sic) de qua supra fit mencio (que se extendit bene ad duos ferlingos terre) et percipere libere omnes fructus provenientes de dicta terra, pro Cantaria in dicta Capella facienda; et cetera jura Ecclesiastica in eadem ministranda.

Item, intendit probare Procurator antedictus quod predecessores ipsius Willelmi habuerunt, optinuerunt, et perceperunt in dicta Capella, per Vicarium Ecclesie de Stokegabriellis (sic), vel Capellanos eorundem, vel saltem per Capellanum, ante fundacionem Vicarie de Stoke ibidem celebrantes, singulis septimanis anni, Divinorum celebrationem; videlicet, feria secunda, feria quarta, feria sexta, ac quolibet Die Dominico, et quolibet Festo feriando, secundum consuetudinem Exoniensis Diocesis usitatam; necnon, omnibus Vigiliis, utpote Vigilia Sancti Joannis Baptiste, Vigilia Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, Vigilia Assumptionis Beate Marie, Vigilia Omnium Sanctorum, Natalis Domini, Officium diei debitum, et ante Pascha tribus noctibus Servicia Matutinalia que nominantur Tenebre, et in Vigilia Pasche cum Benediccione Fontis, cum tota septimana Pasche, et eciam Pentecostes Servicium et dierum sequencium debitum, sunt Servicia Divina in Capella antedicta pro dicta terra celebranda.

Ad istum articulum dicit sic,—quod singulis quartis et sextis feriis Vicarius de Stoke qui pro tempore fuerit, vel quicumque ejus locum tenens, celebrabit Missam in Capella antedicta ad instanciam Dominorum de Wadtone (sic) et tenencium de Wadtone; et singulis Diebus Dominicis benedicet panem et aquam ibidem et ministrabit eisdem; singulis diebus omnium Festorum Pasche et Natalis Domini celebrabitur una Missa in dicta Capella per Vicarium de Stoke, vel per eorum (sic) locum tenentem; Servicia Matutinalia que nominantur Tenebre fient ibidem per eosdem; Sacramenta (sic) Baptismatis conferetur et Matrimonia solempnizabuntur ibidem per eosdem, et omnia cetera jura Ecclesiastica, excepta Sepultura. Et ista vidit et audivit fieri per quadraginta annos et amplius ibidem, ita quod de ejus contrario nescit quicquid deponere. De ceteris in dicto articulo contentis ignorat.

Item, intendit probare Procurator antedictus quod idem Willelmus, Dominus suus, toto tempore suo, et omnes villani Parochie commorantes in villa de Wadtone (sic), ac eciam extranei declinantes ad mansionem dicti Willelmi, habuerunt, perceperunt, et audiverunt sic Divina celebrari per Vicarios de Stoke, seu per Capellanos eorundem, seu per aliquos Capellanos ibidem constitutos in Divinis ministrandis et exequendis ratione donacionis terre supradicte.

Ad istum articulum dicit quod dictus Willelmus, et omnes villani de Wadtone (sic), habuerunt et perceperunt et audiverunt Divina celebrari per Vicarium de Stokegabrielle et Capellanos eorundem, prout in proximo articulo deposuit.

Item, intendit probare quod super premissis publica vox est et fama, et fuit ante presens negocium institutum, in partibus de Stoke, Wadtone, et Peyngtone, et aliis locis vicinis, que nulla tergiversacione poterunt celari.

Ad istum articulum dicit quod continet in se veritatem, prout super premissis superius predeposuit.

Nicholaus de Restercombe, secundus testis, quadragenarius et amplius, requisitus super premissis articulis omnibus et singulis, sibi seriosius lectis et expositis, in omnibus concordat cum Johanne Elias, conteste suo pre-examinato; hoc excepto, quod non est tante etatis prout dictus Johannes. DOCUMENTS ILLUSTRATIVE OF BISHOP GRANDISSON'S REGISTER.

I.—Concerning the murder of Bishop Stapeldon and the proceedings consequent thereupon.

The following record is extracted from MS. No. 1106 in Lambeth Palace Library.¹ It contains an interesting account of Bishop Stapeldon's murder and of the punishment meted out to his assassins. The writer states, distinctly, that the mutilated body of the victim, after being exposed to shameful indignities, was at last, by the intervention of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, conveyed to the Cathedral City for interment.

¹ The greater part of the Volume is a copy of the Flores Historiarum of Matthew Paris, from the Creation, and continued to A.D. 1341. On fol. 93 (1307) has been written, by a much later hand,—desinit Mat' Westmonaster' in Libris impressis; and on one of the fly-leaves, in a 16th Century hand,—“This booke, though stiled Flores Historiarum, is not the same in many partes with Matthew of Westminster's Flores Historiarum, and seems rather to have bin done by some of the Canons of St. Paul's in London (vide an. 1315 & 1336).” There is no entry for the year 1340, and only one for the following year,—“Anno Domini M°. CCC° xij°, Die Dominica in fine mensis Aprilis, videlicet in Vigilia Sancti Erconwaldi [the 29th], Domina Matildis de Mounthagu benedicta fuit in Abbatissam de Berkinge ab Episcopo Radulpho Londoniensi, in Ecclesia Sancti Pauli, ad Summum Altare, cum magna sollemnitate; presentibus Domino Episcopo Elyensi, fratre suo, ac Priorissa de Haliwalle, sorore dicte Abbatissæ.” The latter portion of the Volume seems to have been written by someone connected with St. Paul's, and living in London; and there is a note to this effect by Sir James Ware, which probably led to its being called “Annales Paulini” by Henry Wharton, who thought that Murimuth might have been the author. He was more probably some Official of the Exchequer; for, under 1319, he mentions that on the 17th of September the clerks of the Exchequer left London for York, with twenty-one carts to carry the Rolls and Domesday-Book, and under 1322 that on the 5th of April they carried to York, in twenty-four carts, the Rolls of the Exchequer and other necessaries; also, that William de Ayreminne, chief Clerk of the Exchequer, having been captured by the Scots, his brother Richard gave 2000 marks for his ransom. And it is worthy of notice, here, that under 1332 is mentioned Bishop Grandisson's refusal to allow the Archbishop to visit his Diocese. There is no evidence that the Book ever belonged to St. Paul's, and there is certainly nothing in it to justify its being described as the “Annals” of that Church; the Bishops, Deans, and Canons, and the chief events connected with its history are not even alluded to in its pages, with the solitary exception of an account of the blessing of the bells on fol. 96^b, with a statement of the dimensions of the Church and a rough sketch of it from the west in the margin. But it is evident that, by this time, the MS. had ceased to be kept as a regular Chronicle, and these disconnected additions may have been made by anybody. It will be shown, below, that the Volume was in the possession of Bishop Grandisson, and was treated by him as his own property. Richard Widmore made a transcript of the MS., and of some other contemporary Chronicles, which is in the British Museum, and is, fol. 102. Et eodem die, videlicet xv die Octobris [1326], qui erat dies Mercurii, primo apprehensum Johannem le Marchal, quendam Civem Londoniensem, qui erat familiaris et secretarius Domini Hugonis Despenser filii, et revelator consilii Civitatis, a domo sua, circa horam [nonam],¹ in medio foro de Westchepe, decollaverunt. Deinde adeuntes domum Episcopi Exoniensis,² cum armis et igne insultum fecerunt, quousque introitus eis patuit; et, depredantes ejusdem thesaurum, et omnia que invenerunt secum asportaverunt. Interim venit Episcopus Exoniensis de quodam manerio suo³; et cum voluisset transisse, per medium Civitatis, ad Turrim Londoniarum, intrans per portam de Neugate, et ad Ecclesiam Sancti Michaelis ad bladum,⁴ audiens hujusmodi tumultum et clamorem populi, timuit, et se divertit fugiendo ad Ecclesiam Sancti Pauli. At illi insequentes, et alii obvientes ei, ut furibundi, apprehenderunt eum ad ostium Ecclesie boriale; percusserunt in capite, et de equo traxerunt; et sic per medium Cimiterium eum crudeliter trahentes in foro de Westchepe, ibi eum miserabiliter despoliantes decollaverunt, cum suis duobus armigeris, J. de Padingtone et W. Walle; et jacuerunt cadavera nuda per totum diem in medio foro, horribile spectaculum cunctis intuentibus. Capud, vero, Episcopi missum fuit Domine Regine apud Bristoliam, eodem die. Corpus, vero, Episcopi, post Vesperas decantatas in Ecclesia Sancti Pauli, Minores Canonici et Vicarii ejusdem Ecclesie, cum Cruce, honorifice quesierunt, propter statum sue dignitatis, et ad Ecclesiam Sancti Pauli deportaverunt; et tota nocte illa now, known as MS. Lansdowne, No. 791. Probably, it was sold after Bishop Grandisson's death; or he may have given it to the Church of Ottery-St. Mary. It is most interesting, at any rate, to know that he was its contemporaneous (and, it can scarcely be doubted, its first) possessor. After his time we lose sight of it for nearly two hundred years; but its subsequent history, down to our own day, is fairly complete. At the end is written,—“N. Brigami liber est; perlege, claude, vale.” According to Wood's Athenæ Oxonienses Brigham died in 1559. At the beginning we find the name of the next possessor,—“1566. M: W. Darelli liber.” Darell was a Prebendary of Canterbury at the time, and we learn from Cooper that he was of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge, and died in 1580. Subsequently, it came into the hands of Sir James Ware, who died in 1666; and when, twenty years later, Ware's MSS. were sold, it was bought, in Dublin, by Henry Hyde, second Earl of Clarendon and Lord Lieutenant of Ireland 1685—1687. He sold them to James Brydges, afterwards (1714) created Duke of Chandos; at the auction of whose books they were bought by Richard Widmore, who notes these particulars and describes himself as “the present owner.” The book was, at one time, in the custody of Dr. Thomas Tenison, Vicar of St. Martin's-in-the-Fields, who deposited it in St. Martin's Library, where it was seen by Henry Wharton, who took notes from it, and calls it MS. No. 1 in Tenison's Library. Mr. Widmore gave 19s. for it at the Chandos sale (in 1746); it was No. 2283 in the Catalogue, and was described as “Flores Historiarum, written on vellum.” On the 17th of January, 1763, it was purchased, for five guineas, by Archbishop Secker of the Rev. Richard Widmore, and the Archbishop bequeathed it, with his other books, to Lambeth Palace Library, its present home. I am indebted to Mr. Baigent for these interesting particulars, for the careful copy of the extracts, and for the facsimiles.

It appears to be "Nota quod mandatur forum internum, post excommunicacionis sollempnitatem." There is another note, by the same hand, in the margin of the next Entry ; and this presents even greater difficulties. Only two words are clear,—"Respice" is a reference, no doubt, to the earlier note ; and the word "forum" occurs again ; the rest has been damaged and is much faded ; it may be "Respice apud forum internum." Under these circumstances, I have given a facsimile in each case ; for the notes are of much interest, as proving that this MS. was in Bishop Grandisson's possession.—The "panade" was a kind of two-edged knife.—Hallivell.

in predictum Episcopum, in Civitate Londoniarum inventum, crudeliter irruentes, ipsum in eadem Civitate, in strata publica ejusdem que Chepe vulgariter nuncupatur, circa horam nonam diei, dolo malo crudeliter occiderunt, capud a corpore inhumaniter separantes, Anno Domini Millesimo CCC^{mo} xxvj^{to}, mense Octobris; et, ad domos predicti Magistri Roberti, tam ad eas que in Civitate predicta, in vico qui vocatur Ioylane, quam ad eas que in ipsius Civitatis suburbio, in loco qui vocatur *Fynesbury*¹, erant situate, accedentes, cum ipsum Magistrum Robertum non possent ibidem² invenire, bona ipsius ibidem³ inventa hostiliter invaserunt, occuparunt, asportarunt, et devastarunt, anno et mense predictis. In eisdem anno et mense, tam tempore invasionis predictæ bonorum predictorum quam ante invasionem predictam, et post, fuerunt sepius et publice graviter comminati quod predictum Magistrum Robertum de Baldoke interficerent turpi morte; et [in] signum quod, si ipsi predictum Magistrum Robertum possent apprehendere, eundem traderent dire morti, fecerunt sepius, de die et nocte, ribaldos publice trahi in Civitate predicta, per vicos et plateas ejusdem, anno et mense predictis, ad similitudinem eorum qui ad caudas equorum trahuntur, ad hoc per Judicem Secularem condempnati cum fuerint super crimine lese Majestatis, vel alio gravi crimine, convicti et judicialiter condempnati; in ipsa traccione clamantes et vociferantes a Baldoke ! a Baldoke ! Dico, eciam, in hiis scriptis et propono quod, post omnia supradicta, Magister Adam de Orleton, (qui tunc pro Herefordensi Episcopo se gessit et postea translatus extitit ad Ecclesiam Wygornensem, et jam ad Ecclesiam Wyntoniensem, ut dicitur, est translatus³; cui innotuit de omnibus et singulis supradictis, que nec ipsum latere poterant nec latebant, cum fuissent et essent in Civitate Londoniarum notoria, et per totam Angliam publica et famosa), volens predictum Magistrum Robertum, quem tunc habuit, et antea habuerat, odio capitali, et quem suum inimicum reputavit et reputaverat antea capitalem, tradere in manum et sinum suorum persecutorum et inimicorum predictorum, ut eundem de facto, sine judiciali examine, morti traderent violente; in ipsum Magistrum Robertum, quem tunc scivit et prius sciverat fuisse et esse clericum et in possessione clericatus, ac Canonicum predictæ Ecclesiæ Londoniensis et Archidiaconum Middelsexie in eadem, mandavit et fecit, ausu sacrilego, manus inici temere violentas, ipsumque invitum capi, mense Novembris, Anno Domini supradicto, in Civitate Herefordensi; et ipsum, sic captum, mandavit et fecit adduci, invitum et renitentem, ad quoddam Manerium vocatum Rosemunde, Londoniensis Diocesis, juxta et prope Civitatem Londoniarum situatum, mense Januarii, Anno Domini supradicto. Et subsequenter, mense Februarii ejusdem anni, eundem Magistrum Robertum de Baldoke, invitum et renitentem, mandavit et fecit adduci ad predictam Civitatem Londoniarum et in sinum et potestatem persecutorum et inimicorum suorum predictorum, eisdemque persecutoribus et inimicis ipsum Magistrum Robertum, tunc ibidem, publice exhibuit et exposuit, exhiberive et exponi fecit, ab eisdem libere capiendum et occidendum. Iidemque dicti Magistri Roberti inimici et persecutores ipsum Magistrum Robertum, per predictum Magistrum Adam et de mandato ipsius ad Civitatem predictam adductum, ac ipsum⁴ exhibitum et expositum, ut ab eisdem caperetur et morti per violenciam traderetur, ceperunt in Civitate Londoniarum, anno et mense Februarii supradictis; et in carcere, vinculis, ac tormentis gravibus posuerunt, et sic positum continue hujusmodi vinculis et tormentis adeo graviter et [in]humaniter affixerunt quod ipsum Magistrum Robertum, Anno Domini M^o. CCC^{mo} xxvij^o, mense Junii, in Civitate predicta Londoniarum, per hujusmodi vincula et tormenta, nulla auctoritate Judicis aut Cause cognitione premissa, ex odii fomite occiderunt. Item, dico et propono ego, predictus Johannes Prickehare, literatus, Wyntoniensis Diocesis, quod predictus Magister Adam de Orletone, tunc pro Herefordensi Episcopo se gerens, quondam Domino Edwardo, tunc Regi Anglie, patri Domini Regis Anglie qui nunc est, ex debito fidelitatis prestitit juramentum; quodque idem Magister Adam, contra predictum juramentum suum licitum temere veniens, ad subversionem status dicti Domini Regis Anglie, patris Regis Anglie qui nunc est, et depositionem et totalem amocionem ipsius a Regno suo innitens ex felle malicie et conspirans falso et maliciose, pertinaciter asseruit, predicavit, et docuit publice Clero et populo ad audiendum Verbum Dei congregatis in multitudine copiosa, presentibus Militibus et aliis predicti Regis Edwardi, tunc Regis Anglie, vassallis, in Villa Oxonie,¹ Lyncolniensis Diocesis (ubi tunc ante et post vixit, et adhuc viget, studium generale), mense Octobris, Anno Domini M^o. CCC^{mo} xxvj^o, et in Villa de Walyngeforde, Saresbiriensis Diocesis, mense Decembris anni ejusdem, quod idem Dominus Edwardus, qui tunc, ut premittitur, Rex Anglie extitit coronatus legitime et inunctus, et cui predictus Magister Adam, tunc pro Herefordensi Episcopo se gerens, astrictus extitit ex debito, ut prefertur, fidelitatis vinculo juramenti, fuit tyrannus et sodomita; et quod licitum extitit omnibus, tam Clericis quam Laicis Regni Anglie, auctoritate propria rebellare et insurgere contra ipsum, et eundem tanquam tyrannum opprimere, et a regimine Regni Anglie totaliter amovere; et per hujusmodi suas falsas et dolosas predicationes et doctrinam corda vassallorum et subditorum ipsius Regis ab eodem Rege divertebat et contra ipsum provocabat; et in tantum quod quidam ipsius Regis subditorum, fidem [p]seudo predicatoris et doctrinam suam predictam secuti, in predictum Regem suum injecerunt [manus] temere violentas, et ipsum in carcerem detruserunt et detrusum tenuerunt, in offensam Dei et Regie Majestatis. Item, dico et propono ego, Johannes predictus Prickehare, literatus, Wyntoniensis Diocesis, quod predictus Magister Adam, pro Herefordensi Episcopo se gerens, in predicta publica predicatione sua quam fecit apud Walyngforde, pertinaciter predicavit et asseruit publice, tunc ibidem, falso tamen et dolose, quod, si Domina Isabella, Regina Anglie, tunc uxor legitima Regis predicti, ad ipsum Regem personaliter accederet, idem Rex ipsam Reginam interficeret; et quod in una caligarum portavit cultellum ad hoc specialiter destinatum; quodque, si aliud paratum non haberet unde predictam Reginam interficere posset, ipsam ad mortem dentibus strangularet. Et, per hujusmodi falsas et dolosas predicationes et asserciones, ipsi² Domine Regine tantum timorem incussit quod ad predictum Regem, maritum suum, accedere non audebat; cujus occasione bonum³ matrimonium, tam quoad sobolum procreationem quam in fide et Sacramento, extitit impeditum; et alia plurima dampna et pericula sunt postmodum in Regno Anglie subsecuta. Item, dico et propono in hiis scriptis quod in Civitatibus et Diocesibus Londoniensi, Herefordensi, et Wyntoniensi, ac aliis Civitatibus et Diocesibus Anglie, super premissis omnibus et singulis laboravit et adhuc laborat publica vox et fama, quodque notoria per totam Angliam communiter reputantur. Item, dico et propono quod predicta Translacio de predicto Magistro Ada, facta ad predictam Ecclesiam Wyntoniensem, facta fuit post omnia supradicta per Sanctissimum in Christo Patrem et Dominum, Dominum Johannem, Divina Providencia Papam XXII^{um}, premissorum ignarum; que si scivisset hujusmodi Translacionem nullo modo fecisset. - No. 234. AD detegendam falsitatem materie propositae contra me in quadam Appellatione frivola seu verius libello famoso, continente, primo, quod mandavi et feci, ausu sacrilego, manus inici temere violentas in Magistrum Robertum de Baldoke, ipsumque invitum capi, mense Novembris, Anno Domini M^o. CCC^{mo} xxvj^{to}, in Civitate Herefordensi, etc.; dico et propono, primo, quod Dominus Robertus de Baldoke, dicto mense Novembris, tanquam hostis publicus Regis et Regni et reus criminis lese majestatis, cum quondam Domino Hugone le Despensier, per quosdam Nobiles Regni captus, ductus fuit Herefordiam, et ibidem, coram Judice Seculari, una cum dicto Hugone, per Pares dicti Regni, secundum legem ejusdem, de facto convictus, michi, tunc Episcopo Herefordensi, juxta libertates Ecclesiasticas ipsum tanquam personam Ecclesiasticam ad Forum Ecclesie repetenti, fuit, secundum Regni consuetudinem, liberatus et Ecclesiastico carceri mancipatus, et ibidem detentus usque ad Consilium Provinciale, mense Januarii, Anno Domini supradicto [1328-9], Londoniis celebratum. Ad quod, de Precepto Domini Regis et Regine sue matris (excitante et procurante potissime Venerabili Patre, Domino Johanne [de Stratforde], tunc Wyntoniensi Episcopo et Anglie Thesaurario, nunc, vero, Cantuariensi Electo, cum aliis pluribus Terre Optimatibus) prefatum Robertum adduci feci, et bona fide, sine dolo malo, in Hospicio meo Episcopali recepi, et cum diligencia debita custodivi, donec presentari comode posset eidem Consilio, ut, per ejus sententiam et diffinitionem, pro suis sceleribus, que adeo erant publica et notoria quod nulla poterant tergiversacione celari, reciperet quod inique gessit. Et licet non esset verisimile quod Domino Regi, Prelatis, Comitibus, et aliis Terre Optimatibus, Londoniis tunc congregatis et presentibus pro justicia in Parlamento ibidem convocato omnibus exhibenda,—in quorum sacro comitatu nichil a quoquam timeri potuit vel debuit de jure,—vim vel metum quispiam pateretur; tamen, per quorundam armatorum potenciam, invitis custodibus per me sibi deputatis, de dicto Hospicio meo fuit violenter abductus et dicte Civitatis carceri mancipatus, et per cives Londonienses usque ad mortem inibi custoditus; ne dictus Robertus, quem hostem Regni publicum reputabant, quorundam amicorum suorum et familiarium in Civitate Londoniarum presencium, ejus liberacionem, ut asserebant, prece, et precio, muneribus datis et promissis tractancium, evaderet quovismodo.—Ad secundum quod falso obicitur, et in dicto libello continetur, quod falso et maliciose pertinaciter asserui, predicavi, et docui in Villa Oxonie, mense Octobris, etc., quod bone memorie Edwardus erat tyrannus, etc., et quod per hujusmodi predicacionem et doctrinam corda vassallorum et subditorum ipsius Regis contra ipsum provocabam in tantum quod quidam ipsius Regis subditorum in predictum Regem suum manus iniecerunt temere violentas, et ipsum in carcerem detruserunt et detrusum tenuerunt; dico et propono quod de Mandato Domini mei Regis qui nunc est, et Domine Regine matris sue, predicto mense Octobris, presente eodem Domino Rege, Comite Lancastrie, cum aliis multis Regni Optimatibus, in dicta Villa Oxonie, proposui et publicavi causam adventus dicti Domini Regis et Domine Isabelle matris sue ad Regnum Anglie de partibus transmarinis, contentam in eorum Literis patentibus sigillorum suorum munimine roboratis. Quarum tenor talis est,—

Et nous, et plusieurs autres qui sont venus overque nous en nostre compaignie, qui longement avons este esloignes de la bone volaunce nostre dit Seigneur le Roi par la fause suggestion et mavois procurement des avantdites Hughe et Robert et leur aberdeuns, sommes venus en ceste Terre par relever l'estat de Saint Eglise et de Roialme et le peuple de la Terre del ditz meschife et grevoies oppressions, garder et maintenir, a nostre poair, le honur et le profit de Saint Eglise et de nostre dit Seigneur le Roi et de tut le Roialme. Par quoy nous vous mandons et prions que, par commun profite de vous tous et de tut le Roialme sicume est desuedit, vous tous et chacun de vous endroit de soy nous soiez aydants bien et loialment totes les fuiches que vous verrez leu et temps, et par totes les voies que vous sayerete ou porrete, a ceo que les choses desuedites puissent hastivement veoir a effecte et a bon fyn. Kar soiet certoyne que nous et tous iceux qui sont en nostre compaignie ne espuerons a faire chose que ne serra par le honur et le profit de Saint Eglise et de tut le Roialme ; alours vous la verrete par temps, si Dieux plent.—Done a Walynforde, le xv jour deoctobre, Lan du Regne nostre trescher Seigneur le Roi vintiesme.

Ad Introducendum, ante publicationem et propositionem predictam, accepit quod scribitur, Genesis 3^o, Inimicitias ponam inter te et mulierem, et semen tuum et semen illius: ipse contretur apud tuum. Et dictam auctoritatem de primo tiranno, scilicet diabolo, et aliis malis angelis, qui dicuntur semen propter similitudinem nature et malicie expositam, applicavi predicto Hugoni, qui tyrannice dominari presumebat Regi et Regno, ut in dictis Literis continetur; ad cujus caput contendum venit predicta mulier, Domina videlicet Regina, mater cum semine suo, videlicet Domino Rege qui nunc est, filio suo; quo mediante potestas dicti Hugonis, cooperante Domino, est contrita; nec possunt premissa verba Patri Domini mei Regis aliquantulum applicari iudicio cujusquam sane sapientie. Illud, autem, quod de innominabili vicio falso proponitur me dixisse, nusquam fuit a me dictum vel propositum, Deo teste; et super hoc, etiam, invoco testimonium omnium tunc presentium, nullo excepto. Ea, autem, que, de comuni consilio et assensu omnium Prelatorum, Comitum, et Baronum, et totius Communitatis dicti Regni, concordata et ordinata fuerint contra dictum Regem, ad amocionem suam a regimine, contenta sunt in Instrumentis Publicis, Reverendo Patri, Domino Johanne [de Stratforde], Dei gratia nunc Electo Cantuariensi, tunc Wyntonienſi Episcopo et Anglie Theſaurario, presentia, conceptis et dictatis, et manu Magistri Willielmi de Mee, Clerici sui Secretarii et Publici Notarii, conscriptis et in publicam formam reductis. Quam, quidem, Concordiam ad meam excusacionem duxi Presentibus inserendam; que talis est,—

Accorde est que Sire Edward, fuits einene du Roi, eyt le gouvernement du Roialme et soit Roi corone, par les causes que sensuyent; primerement par ceo que la persone le Roi n'est pas suffisant a gouverner. Kar en soy temps ad il este mene et gouverne par autres, qui lui ont mavoisement conseil, a deshonur de lui et destruction de Seynt Eglise et de tute son peuple, sans ceo qil le vusist veoir ne conuatre, le quel il feu bon ou mavois, ou remede mettre ou faire le vusist quant il feust requis par les Graunts et Sages de son Roialme ou souffrir que amonde feust faite. Item, que unques en son temps il ne sen' voloit donner a bon conseil ne le crere, ne a bon gouvernement de son Roialme, mes se ad done tous jours ad overaynes et occupations nient convenables, entreleuant lespoilt des besoynes de son Roialme. Item, par defaute de bon gouvernement ad il perdu le Roialme de Seote, et altres Terres et Seignuriez en Garscoyne (sic) et Hirlande, les queux soun piere lui lessa en pees et amiste du Roi de Fraunce et des multz des altres Grauntz. Item, par sa fierte et cruelete et mavois counsail ad il destrut Seynt Eglise et les persones de Seint Eglise tenuz en prisone les uns et les altres en destresse et doute, et auxint plusurs Grauntz et Nobles de sa Terre mis a hountouse mort, emprisonnes, exiles, et desherites. Item, la ou il est tenu par soun serrement a faire droit a touz, il ne lad pas volu faire, pur soun propre profit et covetise de lui et de ses mavois consailiers, qi unt este pres de lui ne ad garde les altres pontz del sermentz qil fist a son couronnement, sicume il feust tenuz. Item, il guerpy soun Roialme et le lessa sanz governour, et ala hors de son Roialme ove les notoirez enemys de son Roialme ; et fist, taunt come en lui feust, qe son Roialme et son people fuist perduz, et qe piers est pur la frelete de lui et defaute de sa persone il est trovez incorrigible, sanz esperance de amendement ; les quels choses sunt si notories et conuz a toutz qils ne poent estre dedites.

Illud, autem, quod falso obicitur in dicto libello, quod ad predicacionem meam quidam ipsius Regis subditi in ipsum manus inicerunt temere violentas, et ipsum in carcerem detruserunt et detrusum tenuerunt, notorie falsissimum est et maliciose propositum ; quoniam publicum et notorium est quod dictus Dominus Rex, capto dicto Hugone le Despensier, qui ipsum dictum Regem quasi captivum tenebat, sponte venit ad dictum Comitem Lancastrie, consanguineum [suum], qui eum honorifice associavit usque ad Castrum suum de Kyneworthe (sic) ; ubi in comitiva dicti Domini Comitis, in recessu meo de Anglia versus Curiam Romanam pro Domini mei Regis qui nunc est et Regni sui negociis, dictus Dominus Rex, pater suus, sanus et incolumis noscitur remansisse.

Ad tercium quod falso obicitur, et in dicto libello continetur, quod per falsas et dolosas predicaciones et asserciones meas Domine Regine, matri Domini nostri Regis, apud Walynforde, tantum timorem incussi quod ad predictum Regem, suum maritum, accedere non audebat ; cujus occasione bonum matrimonium, tam quoad sobolis procreacionem quam in fide et Sacramento, extitit impeditum, etc. ; dico et propono quod, cum dicta Domina Isabella Regina, cum Domino Rege qui nunc est, filio suo, apud Walynforde moram faciens, oblocuciones aliquas audivisset de eo quod ad maritum suum personaliter non accessit, deliberato consilio cum Reverendis Patribus, bone memorie Waltero [Reynolds], tunc Cantuariensi Archiepiscopo, ac Johanne [de Stratforde], tunc Wyntoniensi, nunc vero Cantuariensi Electo, Willelmo [de Ayremynne], Northwicensi [Episcopis], ac Nobilibus Viris, Comitibus Lancastrie [et] Cantie, et aliis Nobilibus de consilio suo, inter quos ego, tunc Herefordensis, presens interfui ; intimatum fuit michi quod, ad conservacionem fame sue, quasdam certas causas, ex quibus dicti Regis seviciam, quam sepius fuit experta, potuit et debuit merito formidare, publice proponerem, et ipsam contra oblocuciones hujusmodi excusarem ; quod, juxta informacionem super hoc michi factam, in presencia Domini Cantuariensis et Nobilium predictorum feci, nichil addens de proprio vel minuens de injuncto. Postmodum, insuper, me extra Regnum Anglie agente, propter oblocuciones predictas, prefata Domina Regina fecit apud Staunforde congregari dictos Prelatos et Nobiles, et alios multos Prelatos, Comites, et Barones et Nobiles dicti Regni, in multitudine copiosa ; ubi, post diligentem tractatum super hoc habitum, deliberatum fuit unanimiter, et dicte Domine Regine consultum, quod nullo modo accederet ad dictum Dominum Regem, maritum suum ; cujus tanta fuit crudelitas et sevicia ut Domine Regine trepidanti non posset sufficiens securitas provideri. Et ideo expresse tunc dicebant Majores Regni quod nullo modo permetterent eam ad dictum Regem accedere, licet ad id, si hoc tute facere posset, se paratam et voluntariam obtulisset. Hec omnia adeo sunt publica et notoria in Regno Anglie quod nulli inficiacioni locus existit. Ex quibus apparet manifeste falsitas et malicia adinveniencium et configencium ea que [in] tercio loco continentur in dicta Appellatione seu libello famoso. Preterea prefata Domina Regina, longe ante dictam predicacionem, dum adhuc esset in partibus Francie, justum timorem habuit de sevicia Regis, mariti sui, prout patet per Literas suas super hoc directas bone memorie quondam Reverendo Patri, Waltero, Dei gracia Cantuariensi Archiepiscopo, continencie infrascripte; nec cessavit causa dicti timoris per mortem dicti Hugonis le Despensir, quem Rex immoderato et inordinato amore dilexit; et propter hoc magis fuit ejus sevicia accensa ad vindicandum ipsius mortem. Tenor dicte Litere talis est,—

Reverent Piere en Dieu. Nous avoms diligement veuez voz Letres; par les quels vous nous requierez qe nous retornons a la compaignie de nostre trescher et tresredoubte Seignur et mari, et nous signefietz qe Hughe le Despensir nest pas nostre malvoilant ainz vouldroit nostre bien, sicome vous distes; de quoi nous molt merveillons. Kar vous ne autres de sain entendement ne devez croire qe nous lessiens la compaignie de nostre dit Seignur sanz trop graunt cause et resonable, et de ceo ne feust pur le peril de nostre corps eschuer, et pur la doubte de dit Hughe, qad le gouvernement de dit nostre Sire et de tut son Roialme; et qe nous vodroit deshoner a son power, sicome nous en sumes bien certaine, et bien lavoms esprove, coment qe nous laions desimile longement pur le peril eschuer. Et certes nous desirons sour [toute]¹ rien apres Dieu et la sauvete de nostre alme, estre en la compaignie de nostre dit Seignur, et vivre et moreir a ycele. Si vous prioms, tanque nous poons, qe vous nous aiez pur excuse de ceo qe nous ne poons faire qe vous nous requerretz en ceo cas. Car en nule manere nous ne purrons returnier en la compaignie de nostre dit Seignour saunz nous mettre en peril de morte; dount nous sumes en plus graunt meschief qe escrire ne poons, etc.—Done a Paris, le meskerdi proschein apres la Chaundelure [Feast of the Purification B.V.M.].

Ad hec, ex tenore Appellationis predicte et propositionis in eadem manifeste patet proponentem et appellantem esse perjurum. Dicit, enim, et proponit, in dicta Appellatione seu carmine et libello famoso, juratus, quod in Civitatibus et Diocesibus Londoniensi, Herefordensi, et Wyntoniensi, ac aliis Civitatibus et Diocesibus Anglie, super omnibus et singulis premissis, per ipsum propositis, laboravit et adhuc laborat publica vox et fama; quodque notoria per totam Angliam communiter reputantur. Et postmodum, circa finem dicte Appellationis, idem appellans, juratus, asserit quod de dictis et propositis per eum supradictis, ante secundum diem mensis Aprilis, et ante horam primam ejus diei, nichil sibi innotuit; qua, tamen, die, hora tertia, dictam Appellationem interposuit, ut patet in Instrumento super dicta Appellatione confecto.

IV.—Concerning the Bells, the Organs, and the Clock of the Cathedral Church of Exeter.

—Pro Roberto, filio Walteri de Ropforde, campanistario,—

Rex omnibus ad quos, etc., salutem.—Inspeximus quoddam scriptum quod Petrus, quondam Exoniensis Episcopus, de assensu Capituli sui Exoniensis, fecit Rogero de Ropforde, campanistario, et Agneti uxori ejus, et Waltero filio eorundem Rogeri et Agnetis, in hec verba :—Sciunt presentes et futuri quod nos, Petrus [Quivil], miseracione Divina Exoniensis Episcopus, unanimi assensu et consensu Capituli nostri Exoniensis, dedimus et concessimus, et hac presenti Carta nostra confirmavimus Rogero de Ropforde, campanistario, Agneti uxori ejusdem, et Waltero filio eorundem, ac heredibus de eisdem procreatis et procreandis, totum illud tenementum quod fuit Nicholai de Peyntone, nativi nostri, in villa de Peyngtone, cum omnibus suis pertinenciis, ut in domibus, gardinis, terris, pratis, pascuis, et omnibus aliis ad dictum tenementum pertinentibus. Habendum et tenendum predictis Rogero, Agneti, Waltero, ac suis heredibus de eisdem procreatis et procreandis, de nobis et Successoribus nostris, libere, quiete, et in pace ; reddendo inde annuatim nobis et Successoribus nostris unum denarium, in Vigilia Pasche, pro omni servicio seculari. Predicti, vero, Rogerus, Agnes, et Walterus, ac eorum heredes, campanas Ecclesie nostre Exoniensis, sumpibus Capituli nostri Exoniensis, facient, seu fieri facient ; organa et orilogium, quociens opus fuerit, reparabunt, seu facient reparari ; quibus interim, dum circa premissa occupati fuerint, per ipsum Capitulum nostrum omnia necessaria, tam in esculentis quam in poculentis, volumus ministrari. Nos, vero, predicti Petrus et Capitulum nostrum Exoniense, totum predictum tenementum, cum omnibus suis pertinenciis, predictis Rogero, Agneti, Waltero, ac suis heredibus de eisdem procreatis et procreandis, pro predictis redditu et serviciis faciendis warantizabimus, acquietabimus, et defendemus. In cujus rei testimonium, nos et predictum Capitulum nostrum Exoniense sigilla nostra Presentibus apposuimus.—Datum in Capitulo nostro Exoniensi, ij Idus Julii [14 July], Anno Domini Millesimo ducentesimo octogesimo quarto.—Nos, autem, donacionem, concessionem, et confirmationem predictas ratas habentes et gratas, eas, pro nobis et heredibus nostris, quantum in nobis est, Roberto, filio et heredi predicti Walteri, et heredibus de corpore suo exeuntibus, concedimus et confirmamus, sicut scriptum predictum rationabiliter testatur. In cujus, etc. Teste Rege, apud Westmonasterium, vj die Januarii [1317-18].—Per Consilium.—Rot. Pat. 11 Edw. II., p. 1, m. 5. [F. J. B.].

[This document is of considerable interest, giving, as it does, a much earlier date (1284) than has hitherto been assigned for the old Cathedral clock, the more recent representative of which still occupies the original position against the north wall of the north tower-transept. It gives, also, the names of the members of the Firm which was employed in casting bells for the Cathedral, and was intrusted with the repairs and care of the Organs and the Clock in Bishop Quivil's time. It belongs, indeed, to Bishop Stapeldou's Episcopate; but it may well be included in this Appendix. When Bishop Grandisson founded his College at Ottery, and reconstructed and enlarged the Parish Church there, he made it what has been truly called a "miniature" copy of his Cathedral Church, converting the transepts into "twin towers," in one of which (the south tower, not the north as at Exeter) he placed his clock, in evident imitation of the old arrangement.]

V.—THE WILL OF BISHOP GRANDISSON.¹

[From the Register of Archbishop Wytleseye, folios 103^b—105.]

fol. 103^b. IN NOMINE DOMINI NOSTRI JHESU CHRISTI, Filii Virginis Marie, cum Sancto Spiritu in Gloria Dei Patris, Omnipotentis, Amen.—Ego Johannes de Grandissono, Exoniensis Ecclesie Minister inutilis et indignus, sanus per Dei gratiam mente et corpore, condo testamentum meum in hunc modum.

Canonici, eciam, Ecclesie Exoniensis eadem die interessentes habeant quilibet xl denarios; Vicarii presentes quilibet ij solidos; Secundarii, vero, et Annivellarii quilibet xij denarios; Clerici secundarii, quilibet xij denarios; Pueri choriste, quilibet vj denarios; Custores ad pulsandum, ita quod breves pulsaciones fiant et non longe, quilibet xij denarios; Fratres Hospitalis Sancti Johannis Exoniensis, presbiteri, quilibet ij solidos; Infirmi ibidem quilibet xij denarios; Incarcerati Exonie pro pane emendo xl denarios; Infirmi Beate Marie Magdalene Exonie, inter se ij solidos; Presbiteri Sancti Gabrielis de Clist, quilibet ij solidos. Item, lego cuilibet Rectori Civitatis Exonie ij solidos, et Aquebajulis, cuilibet vj denarios. Volo, eciam, quod a die sepulture mee usque ad xxx diem sequentem, fiant omni die Exequie cum Missa in aliquo loco competenter. Et volo quod omnes Misse que dicentur pro me, excepta Magna Missa in die sepulture mee et qualibet alia die una tantum de Requiem, sint de Beata Maria, cum oracione pro defunctis. Et per illos xxx dies quilibet Canonicus, qui aliquo die Misse et Vigiliis interfuerit, habeat pro singulis diebus singulos sex denarios; Quilibet Vicarius quatuor denarios; Secundarii, quilibet iij denarios; et quilibet Puer ij denarios. Et si aliquis Canonicus Missam cantet quacumque die infra Trigintale, habeat ultra sex denarios; si Vicarius, iij denarios. Nolo, eciam, quod familiares mei induantur vestibus nigris, set robis suis de secta ejusdem anni; et sacerdotes ac clerici Capelle mee superpelliciis ac albis capuciis sicut consueverunt. Nec volo quod ipso die sepulture mee fiat generalis distribucio pauperibus, set aliquo die alio precedente vel sequente, et hoc, quantum fieri poterit, non in pecunia set in pane. Item, do et lego Ecclesie Exoniensi pulchriora Vestimenta mea alba,—videlicet Casulam, Tunicam, et Dalmaticam, cum Capa,—debraudata fol. 104. cum aureo rosareo et armis meis, ac dimidiis Angelis; una cum iiij^{or} capis unius secte melioribus de panno albo serico diasprato cum castoribus et bestiis aureis. Item, lego eidem Ecclesie Crucem deauratam, cum lapidibus preciosis ex utraque parte, que in duas partes dividitur, et intus pars Crucis Dominice continetur. Item, lego eidem Ecclesie duas Ymagineas Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, argenteas deauratas, et Thurribulum aureum, et dua alia Thurribula unius secte, sculta et deaurata, Pelvim argenteam Capelle mee, cum cathenis ad pendendum cereum Archidiaconi² ante Majus Altare. Item, lego eidem Ecclesie Duo Antiphonaria, Duo Gradalia, et Duo Psalteria majora et meliora de Capella mea, et Textum Evangelii Sancti Johannis de antiqua litera coopertum argenteo deaurato. Lego, eciam, eidem Ecclesie Vestimenta pro diebus Epiphanie, Pentecostes, et Apostolorum Petri et Pauli, videlicet, Casulam, Tunicam, et Dalmaticam cum una Capa, de pannis rubeis et aureis qui vocantur de nakta.³ Item, Casulam, Tunicam, et Dalmaticam cum Capa, de velveto violacio, in exequiis meis, et in obitu meo et aliorum insignium, utenda. Item, lego eidem Ecclesie terciam meliorem Mitram meam cum Baculo Pastoralis quem emi Parisius, una cum Anulo et Citrotheois et aliis Episcopalibus utendis necessariis, in eventum quo⁴ Successores meos vel alios Episcopos

of £1,200 upon it, according to the present relative value of money, reckoning it at least as fifteen times as much now as in fourteenth century. It was perhaps worth more.

Item, Domine Isabelle, Domini nostri Regis primogenite, pulchrius psalterium meum.³

¹ Mr. Baigent has sent me an interesting extract from the Will of the Black Prince, in which there is a reference to gifts from the Bishop made in his life-time,—“Item, nous donnons et devisons al autier de nostre Dame en la Chappelle susdite [the Lady-Chapel at Canterbury], nostre blank vestiment tout entier, diappree dune vine dazure, et auxi le frontel que levesque dexcetre nous donna, qe est de lassumpcion de nostre Dame, en mylien severer dor et dautre ymage-rie, et un tabernacle de lassumpcion de nostre Dame, qe le dit evesque nous donna auxi.”

² The Lady Blanche and her husband, John of Gaunt, were both in the fourth generation descended from Henry III. She was the younger of the two daughters of Henry, first Duke of Lancaster, who died in 1361 of the second Pestilence (the elder being Matilda, who married William of Bavaria, son of Lewis the Emperor, and died sine prole). Henry's father (Henry de torto collo), second Earl of Lancaster, died in 1345. His father,

Edmund Crouchback, son of Henry III, first Earl of Lancaster, died in 1296. It was in the household of this Edmund that the Bishop's father, William de Grandisson, first came into England; and the Lady Blanche was now his heiress and representative. After her marriage with John of Gaunt, Earl of Richmond, her husband was created, in her right, Duke of Lancaster.

³ The Lady Isabella had married, at Windsor, in 1365, Ingelram de Coucy, the only son of Ingelram, sixth of the name, Sieur de Coucy, by Katharine of Austria, elder of the daughters and coheirs of Duke Leopold, the third son of Albert, King of the Romans, and grandson of the Emperor Rudolph of Hapsburg, with whom also Bishop Grandisson claimed relationship. He was created Knight of the Garter and Earl of Bedford in 1366, and died in 1387. His wife predeceased him. They left no male issue. The “beautiful Psalter” is now in the British Museum, Add. MSS. 21,926.

Item, lego Venerabili in Christo Patri, Domino Cantuariensi Archiepiscopo qui pro tempore fuerit, magnum aule dorsorium meum, de Coronacione Beate Marie, cum Apostolis sedentibus in thronis, et inter se symbolum tenentibus; una cum anulo pontificali ad celebrandum, et quinquaginta marcas sterlingorum. Ita quod Executores meos in execucione ultime Voluntatis mee adjuvet et non vexet, et quod nec ipse nec Officialis suus aut alii ministri sui quicumque ejus nomine aliquid aliud petant ab eisdem Executoribus meis vel exigant quovismodo. Quod si secus fecerint, careant hujusmodi legatis; et illa tunc lego Camerarie Domini nostri Pape, per Sedis Apostolice in Anglia Nuncium recipienda. Ita quod ipse, vice Domini nostri Pape, Executores meos adjuvet et defendat. Item, lego eidem Clerico sive Nuncio Domini nostri Pape, ut Executores meos adjuvet et foveat, et sit unus Executorum meorum, quinquaginta Florenos de Florencia, vel valorem.

Item, lego Successoribus meis, sub condicionibus infrascriptis et non aliter,—
In primis, illam preciosam Mitram, quam emi ab Executoribus Predecessoris mei Walteri pro ducentis marcis sterlingorum, et postea cum centum ^{xx}^{li} marcis Parisius totaliter reparari et meliorari feci. Item, lego eisdem Successoribus meis Baculum meum Pastoralem meliorem, deauratum et deamellatum, et secundam meliorem Capam non legatam, rubeam videlicet et cum ymaginibus aureis; una cum duobus Anulis, uno ad celebrandum et alio ad utendum, cum Apparatibus altaris diversis, albo scilicet, rubeo, et violaceo, de rosis pulverisatis, ac Cirothecis et Sandalis, aliisque necessariis omnibus Episcopalibus non legatis. Item, lego eisdem libros meos Episcopales majorem et minorem, quos egomet compilavi, et tria Missalia; unum, videlicet, preciosum notatum, cum Sequenciis, in quo scribitur in principio¹—quod remaneat Successori; aliud novum et bonum ejusdem litere sine nota; et tertium portatile, quod duxerit eligendum. Item, lego eisdem librum Meditationum et Oracionum Beati Anselmi et Beati Augustini in magno volumine. Item, dorsorium meum de Martyrio Apostolorum Petri et Pauli. Item, vas Aque Benedicte argenteum, cum Aspersorio de argento, et Calicem aureum cum Phiolis deauratis. Item, duos alios calices usuales argenteos deauratos, pro Capellanis suis, et Crismatorium meum rotundum quod fuit Guillelmi Durandi, Speculatoris. Item, duo paria tabularum pictarum² meliarum (sic) non legatarum. Item, ^{iiij}^{or} candelabra argentea minora, cum duobus thurribulis melioribus non legatis, et navi majori pro thure ac campanilia (sic) majori argenteis. Item, Crucem deauratam cum gemmis et ymaginibus Marie et Johannis, quam emi Parisius. Item, Textum Evangeliorum, prout leguntur per annum, coopertum argenteo (sic) cum ymaginibus protractis Crucifixi, Marie, et Johannis ex parte una, et cum Nigra de Neel Coronacione ex parte alia. Item, lego eisdem Successoribus meis tria Gradalia portativa, et unum majus pro seip-sis. Item, Legendam integram in uno volumine de Camera mea. Item, Bibliam meam meliorem. Item, duos libros Omeliarum ad legendum coram

¹ See the translation, page 1515. The meaning may be that the Bishop had written a memorandum at the beginning of the Book, that it was to remain to his Successor. I was guided by the method of printing the words adopted in the printed copies.

² It is quite possible that these may now be in the British Museum. If so, they would be the ivory triptych and the diptych (of which latter, however, only one half is there, the other half being in the Louvre). These bear the arms of Bishop Grandisson, and are described in the Proceedings Soc. Antiq., 2nd Series, vol. i, p. 377, and in Emile Molinier's Histoire Générale des Arts appliqués à l'Industrie du Ve à la fin du XVIII^e siècle, vol. i, p. 199. They may have been coloured like other ivory carvings of that period, though no traces of colour remain; and "pictarum" does not, of necessity, mean this.

¹ St. Edmund Rich, the Confessor, was Archbishop of Canterbury; 1234—1240. He went into exile at Pontigny, where he died. St. Edmund had been Canon and Treasurer of Salisbury, 1219. He was canonized in 1248. St. Edmund's Church was made Collegiate for a Provost and twelve secular canons by Walter de la Wyle, Bishop of Salisbury, sometime before 1270.

³ The Bishop's youngest Sister, Maud, was Prioress of the Augustinian Convent of the Holy Cross and St. John at Aconbury in Herefordshire.

⁴ The eldest son of William de Montacute, first Earl of Salisbury, and Katharine de Grandisson (the Bishop's second sister); born 25 June, 1323; died 3 June, 1397. He succeeded his father, as second Earl of Salisbury, in 1343. [His brother, Sir John, the legatée next mentioned, married Margaret, daughter of Lord Monthermer.] Their son John was the 3rd Earl; and Sibilla, one of their daughters, was married to Edmund, second son of Edmund, Earl of Arundel. These were the Sir Edmund and Sibilla de Arundelle mentioned below. Sir John died 4 March, 1389-90, and he left by will, "two pots with Lord John de Grandisson's arms on them" to his two sons, John and Thomas; the elder of whom succeeded his uncle William as third Earl of Salisbury in 1398.

¹ Fourth son of Hugh, second Earl of Devon, and Margaret de Bohun; born in 1342. He was Prebendary of Exeter, York, and Wells, and Chancellor of Oxford. In 1370 Bp. of Hereford; in 1375 Bp. of London; in 1381 Archbishop of Canterbury; he died 31 July, 1396.

² The exact meaning of this phrase is shewn by an extract (kindly sent me by Mr. Baigent) from the Will, dated 10 Aug., 1387, of Thomas de Lyntone, R. of Clyve, near Rochester. He bequeathed to the Church of St. Creed, in Cornwall, of which he was formerly Rector, "unum vestimentum simplex, videlicet solum pro sacerdote, absque Capa." This "vestimentum," of course, included amice, albe, stole, maniple, and chasuble,—the priest's only.

⁴ With some, at least, of the Religious Houses omitted in the Will (and notably Tavistock Abbey), the Bishop had had much trouble throughout his Episcopate. It should be observed, also, that Sir Thomas de Grandisson, the son of Sir Otho, the Bishop's next brother, is also omitted from all mention in the Will; but this may be due to the fact that he was the Bishop's heir-at-law.

De rebus et vestibus usualibus corporis mei ac lectisterniis, exceptis illis que debentur Camerariis ex consuetudine, volo quod inter pauperes Presbiteros sive Rectores sive Vicarios indigentes, ac Vicarios chori ecclesie Collegiate Crydtonie, et honestas viduas vel reclusas, ac Hospitalia dividantur, juxta dispositionem et conscienciam Executorum meorum. Omnia autem, Aurifrasia mea simplicia,¹ cum frangiis et aliis ad Vestimenta ecclesiastica pertinentibus non legatis, pono et lego in dispositione Magistri Nicholai de Braybroke et Thome Tuggell. Residuum, vero, omnium bonorum meorum, si quid sit, non legatorum, lego ad faciendam honestam cohabitationem pro Vicariis chori Ecclesie Exoniensis, et ad alia opera pietatis.

His Will (a copy of which is preserved in the same Register) is dated on the day of his death, and was proved in London on the 29th of July. Mr. Baigent has sent me the following extract,—“Item, lego Ecclesie Beate Marie de Otery, Exoniensis Diocesis, viridia vestimenta mea, michi per Dominum Johannem de Grandissono, Dei gracia Episcopum Exoniensem, missa, vel decem libras, ut orent pro anima dicti Domini Exoniensis.” Apparently Bishop Cherlton had heard a false rumour of the Bishop of Exeter’s death, or knew that he was on his deathbed. Mr. Baigent has, also, sent me an extract from the Will of John de Harewelle,

Bishop of Bath and Wells (proved 20 Aug., 1386,—Register of Archbishop Courtenay, fol. 218^b), which may well find a place here. Amongst the legacies to the Dean of Chapter of Wells occurs the following,—“Volumus, eciam, quod habeant capam rubeam quem habui titulo empcionis de Executoribus bone memorie Johannis de Grandissono, nuper Episcopi Exoniensis. * * * * Item, lego Domino Roberto Slo, clerico meo, unum Missale notatum, quod habui de Executoribus Testamenti bone memorie Johannis de Grandissono, quondam Episcopi Exoniensis, et librum meum Innocencium.”

THE following Letter of Acknowledgement and Obligation by Bishop Grandisson is taken from the Register of his Successor, Bishop Brantingham, vol. ii, fol. 5^b. It will be observed that it contains a long extract from Bishop Stapeldon's lost Will.

—De ducentis bobus per Episcopum Exoniensem dimittendis; videlicet C ex antiqua consuetudine, et C ex legato Walteri de Stapeldone, quondam Episcopi Exoniensis,—

Universis ad quorum noticiam presentes Litere pervenerint Johannes, permissione Divina Exoniensis Episcopus, salutem in Domino sempiternam.—Cum nuper bone memorie Dominus Walterus, Exoniensis Episcopus, Predecessor noster, centum boves de antiqua consuetudine Episcopatu remanentes dimisisset, ac etiam alios centum boves suo Successori et Episcopatu simili modo remanentes, sub formis et modis in ipsius Testamento expressis, legasset per verba que sequuntur,—Item, preter boves antea Successori meo debitos, do, lego, et assigno proximo Successori meo, Episcopo Exoniensi, et omnibus Successoribus meis, Episcopis Exonie succedentibus, centum boves competentes; ita, videlicet, quod triginta de predictis bobus de Maneriis Episcopi in Comitatu Cornubie, quadraginta de Maneriis Episcopi in Comitatu Devonie, et triginta residui in Maneriis

Episcopii extra Comitatus Cornubie et Devonie, prout ex consuetudine injungitur, ad aratrum assumantur; et predictos centum boves lego sub formis et condicionibus infrascriptis; videlicet, quod proximus Successor meus, Episcopus Exoniensis, et omnes Successores sui, singuli post singulos, qui hujusmodi legatum receperint, in Capellis suis Obitum meum die quo in Ecclesia Exoniensi celebratur, cum Placebo et Dirige et solempni Memoria, pro animabus omnium Predecessorum et Successorum meorum, Episcoporum Exonie, faciant solempniter celebrari; et etiam pro animabus mea et ipsorum, coram se in Aula, alioquin infra portam forinsecam, ubi tunc fuerint ipso die, centum pauperes pascant, absque fraude et favore eligendos; quorum quilibet percipiet esculenta et poculenta ad valorem unius denarii, vel ad minus unum denarium in pecunia numerata: et qui hoc legatum, vel hanc elemosinam, tam michi quam Predecessoribus ac Successoribus meis comminus auxerit, augeat in bono Dominus dies suos, et post hanc vitam temporalem tribuat sibi perpetuam et requiem sempiternam. Hoc adjecto, quod quilibet Successorum meorum, in receptione dictorum boum, per Literas suas patentes, que in Thesauraria Ecclesie Exoniensis remaneant, fateatur se dictos centum boves ex predictis causis recepisse, et se ad faciendum dictum servitium et predictam elemosinam, et ad dimittendum tot et tales boves in forma predicta Successori suo obligatum esse; et forma predicti legati in hujusmodi Literis obligatoriis de verbo in verbum inseratur. Et, si quis Successorum meorum predicta facere recusaverit in receptione predicti legati, volo quod dicti boves sibi non liberentur, set quod, infra mensem tunc sequentem, per Executores tunc proximi Predecessoris, et in ipsorum defectu per Decanum et Capitulum Exonie, vendantur, et pecunia inde proveniens per eosdem Executores, seu per Decanum et Capitulum, pro animabus mea, Predecessorum et Successorum meorum, in pios usus distribuatur.—Quos, quidem, boves fatemur de ipsius Executoribus, Magistro Ricardo Coletone, Domino Ricardo de Brayleghe, et Domino Thoma de Stapildone recepisse, ac nos tenore Presencium obligatos esse ad ipsius Patris Obitum, secundum ipsius ultimam dispositionem predictam tenendum; ac etiam centum boves Successori nostro dimittendos, preter centum boves ut premittitur debitos ab antiquo. Et, quia in Ecclesia Exoniensi predicta jam est ordinatum quod die Sancti Wulfranni [15 Oct.], quo ab hac luce fuerat idem Predecessor noster subtractus, Obitus ipsius celebretur, eodem die modo predicto tenere promittimus et celebrare faciemus, ad ipsius Ultime Voluntatis complecionem. Et ne, quod absit, premissorum pereat memoria, has Literas nostras, pro futuris Successoribus nostris simili modo obligandis, penes Capitulum nostrum Exoniense dimittimus, sigillo nostro signatas.—Data apud Chuddeleghe, die Martis in Vigilia Festi Apostolorum Petri et Pauli [28 June], Anno Domini Millesimo CCC^{mo} vicesimo octavo.

VI.—Concerning Bishop Grandisson's Copy of the Letters of St. Anselm.

This fine Volume is preserved in the British Museum among the Cottonian MSS. (Claudius, A, XI). It contains 163 vellum folios, which measure 10 in. by 6 in. The Letters are numbered in the margin (apparently by the Bishop himself) in Arabic figures. They run from 1 to 416 inclusive. The writing is good and well preserved, and is arranged in double columns throughout.

Folios 2—7 are occupied by a Table of the Letters.

Fol. 158 (at the top of the second column),—"Contra Eboracensem pro Cantuariensi"; and in the margin, against Letter 402,—"Cantuariensi—Eboracensi."
Fol. 158^b (margin),—"Contra Eboracensem—Summo Pontifici."
Folios 159^b, 160, and 160^b (margins),—"Contra Eboracensem."
Fol. 161 (at the top of the first column),—"Terribilis monicio contra Eboracensem." On this folio is the last of the Letters; and below it is written, apparently in a 15th Century hand,—"Liber Collegii de Maidstone." So the Volume must have belonged to the Library there; the gift, probably, of Archbishop Courtenay, to whom the King granted Licence to found the College on the 2nd of August, 1396.
On the upper margin of fol. 162^b Bishop Grandisson wrote—"Beatus Anselmus Cantuariensis sic scripsit Pape Urbano secundo, qui duo Concilia, Claremontense et Thuronense, celebravit." And at the end of the Volume,—"Utinam nullus modo Episcopus posset sic scribere Urbano V." [F.J.B.]

FRAGMENT OF THE CARTULARY OF BUCKFAST ABBEY.

[AMONGST a mass of waste parchment and paper, bought by Mr. James Pearse, of Exeter, from various sources, was a fragment of a parchment book, which once formed part of the Cartulary of Buckfast Abbey ; but Mr. Pearse is unable to say from whom it was bought.

It consists of twenty-three leaves, paged from iiij to vj, from ix to xxiiij, and from cxlij to cxliij, all inclusive. Each leaf is marked at the top in red ink,—Tercia Pars. The leaves are written on both sides, and comprise parts of two Charters, full copies of sixty-three Charters (of which three are duplicates), and copies of four Perambulations. These Perambulations relate to the Forest of Dartmoor, to Brent-moor, Buckfast-moor, and South Holne-moor. Along with this MS. was found a Commission from King Henry VIII to Sir Thomas Denys, Sir Philip Champernown, and others, dated 12 July, 1531. They were to inquire into the bounds of the Forest and the Moors ; and, as a portion of the finding of the jury, as well as the the Charters and Perambulations, all relate to lands in Buckfastleigh and Holne, and the neighbourhood, and throw light on the bounds of the Moors in question, it would appear that the present fragment was detached from the Cartulary with that object in view. And it is to be feared that the subsequent history of the fragment, and the fate of the remaining portion, cannot now be discovered.

No mention is made of the Cartulary in Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, in Dr. Oliver's Monasticon of the Diocese of Exeter, or in Mr. J. Brooking-Rowe's Cistercian Houses of Devon ; and the present fragment is, as far as is known, the only portion extant. It dates from the reign of Henry III (and possibly earlier) down to 7 Edward II ; and it gives much information as to the early history of the Abbey and the extent of its possessions. The names of some of the Abbats not recorded elsewhere, and, also, of some of the Priors of Plympton, may now be added to existing lists ; and it records, also, the names of many early landowners and benefactors of the Abbey.

The above short Preface was written by Mr. Winslow Jones, of Exmouth, who had acquired the MS. from Mr. Pearse, and was preparing it for publication at the time of his lamented death, which occurred on the 30th of July, 1895. He had made but little progress with the work, however, and had copied only the Commission of 1531. I had promised to assist him ; and I print it, now, with the kind permission of his Executors, in memoriam. I make no apology for including it in the present Volume. It is unique, and of considerable interest and value ; and it comprehends, though (being, alas, only a fragment) it does not cover, the whole medieval period.

I may add that it consists of four folios of quaternus iiij, the whole of quaterni v and vj, and three leaves of another quaternus, which has lost its number. The numbering of the folios given in the margin belongs to the Tercia Pars, of which the first two folios have perished. At the foot of each folio, throughout, is a second numbering in a later hand, which was, evidently, made when the Cartulary was perfect. From this we learn that folio iiij was then 61, shewing that 58 folios have been lost at the beginning, comprising Prima Pars and Secunda Pars].

ffyrst, we agree that the three Mores called Sotheholnmore, Buckfast more, and brent more, be parcelle of the abbotes maners called Sotheholne, Buckfastleghe, and Brent.

* * * * *

. . . and bestes yn the same pasturyng there to be and goe yn quiete maner, withowte any furder vexacion or trobelle, accordyng to the sayde abbote ys title and interest of and yn the same, or els unto the tyme that furder direccion or determinacion be had thereyn. And the sayde abbote and his sayde convente dayle hathe done, and soe schalle contynue there dayle prayers to God for your prosperious continuans long to endure.

Attached to the Commission is a copy, written on paper, of an undated grant by Robert (son of William) Kyllebury to Stephen Ode, junior, his heirs and assigns, of three messuages, with the curtilages adjacent, and two closes of land formerly held by William ffynamore, Hugh Mynchet, and Martin Carru. The witnesses were Joel de Buckyntone, William Boyvile, Henry de Budetone, William de Oulecombe, Robert de Betehill, and others. A Stephen Ode, brother of John Ode, is named in the fragment of the first Charter. The writing is of the date of Henry VIII; it is a very rough affair, and the copyist, being, apparently, unable to read the original, left several considerable blanks.

Anno Coronacionis H[enrici], Regis Anglie, filii Regis Johannis, 1^o primo [1257], facta est hec Conuencio inter fratrem W., Abbatem de Bucfestria,¹ et Conuentum eiusdem loci, ex una parte, et Dominam Johannam, quondam uxorem Domini Radulphi de Valle Torta, ex altera; videlicet quod predicta Domina Johanna, in viduitate sua, concessit et tradidit predictis Abbati et Conuentui totam terram quam habuit nomine dotis sue in manerio de Holne, et eciam totam terram quam habuit, nomine custodia, occasione heredis Roberti Bozun, cum hominibus, redditibus, escaetis, cum pasturis et Wastis et omnibus aliis ad predictas terras pertinentibus. Tenendum et habendum predictis Abbati et Conuentui omnibus diebus quibus uixerit predicta Johanna, cum omnibus exitibus et comodis de predictis terris prouenientibus. Reddendo inde annuatim predicto Johanne quoad uixerit 22^{li} solidos sterlingorum, ad quatuor anni terminos; uidelicet, Ad Natale Domini, Ad Pascha, ad festum Natiuitatis beati Johannis Baptiste, et ad festum sancti Michaelis, equis porcionibus, pro omnibus seruiciis et demandis ad predictam terram pertinentibus. Predicta, vero, Johanna tenetur Warantizare predictis Abbati et Conuentui predictas terras, cum pertinenciis, quamdiu uixerit, contra uniuersos homines. Si, uero, contigerit quod aliquid accrescat predicto Johanne in predicto manerio de terris vel redditibus, predicti Abbas et Conuentus illud quod accreuerit predicto Johanne habebunt et tenebunt, et de ualore annui redditus de illo incremento prouenientis dicte Johanne respondebunt eodem modo. Si quid decreuerit aliquo modo de terris et redditibus predictis Abbati et Conuentui jam traditis, tanto minus de annuo redditu predicto Domine persoluent. Pro hac, autem, concessione eis facta dederunt premanibus dicti Abbas et Conuentus predicto Johanne 22^{li} solidos sterlingorum. In cuius rei testimonium huic Cirographo, in duas partes deciso, predictus Abbas et predicta Johanna sigilla sua alternatim apposuerunt. Hiis testibus,—Domino Henrico de Alneto, Willelmo de Alneto, Michaelis de Spichewyke, Allexandro de Hokkeston, et aliis.—Data apud Hinneswork,² anno predicto, in festo sancti Michaelis;—ab hac conuencione excipitur . . .³ Bodetone, et seruicium suum.

ija. iijd., In octabis Sancti Michaelis ija. iijd., et In octabis Natalis Domini ij solidos iij denarios. Et, si, de anno in annum, ad predictos terminos vel infra, tota vita dicte Alienore, dictus redditus non fuerit plenarie solutus, Concedunt idem Abbas et Conuentus quod nuncius predictorum Johannis et Alienore, singulis diebus quibus moram fecerit occasione predicti redditus non soluti post Octabas predictas, habeat de Bonis suis vj denarios pro laboribus suis et expensis, quousque predictum redditum persoluant. Et ad hoc faciendum subiciunt se, et homines suos in dictis duabus partibus terre de sut Holne manentes, districcioni vicecomitis Deuonie, ad ipsoz distringendos per capcionem et detencionem aueriorum suorum, donec predictis Johanni et Alienore de redditu predicto et pena prescripta plenarie fuerit satisfactum; et quod idem vicecomes, qui dictam districcione[m] fecerit, distringat ad opus suum, modo predicto, pro laboribus suis, unam dimidiam Marcam argenti, sine contradiccione predictorum Abbatis et Conuentus. In cuius rei testimonium huic scripto, in modum cirographi confecto, partes alternatim sigilla sua apposuerunt. Hiis testibus, —Domino Willelmo Probo, Domino Warino de Sutauille, Radulpho de Linham, Ricardo de Inwardleghe, Johanne de Kelly, Rogero Burnel, et Aliis.

xv^a Anno Domini M^o. CC Octogesimo, In festo Sancti Andree, Apostoli [30 Nov.], ita conuenit inter Dominum Abbatem de Buckfastria et eiusdem loci Conuentum, ex una parte, et Michaellem Cole, ex altera; videlicet, quod dicti Religiosi tradiderunt et concesserunt dicto Michaeli Custodiam tocius terre et tementorum que fuerunt Stephani le Mugge, filii et heredis Osberti Mugge, de quibus fuit in seisinā die quo obiit, pro decem marcis argenti, quas idem Michael dedit eisdem Religiosis premanibus. Concesserunt, insuper, dicti Religiosi dicto Michaeli quod possit Mariotam, filiam et heredem dicti Stephani, cuiuscumque uoluerit ex filiis suis maritare, et non alibi absque consensu dictorum Religiosorum. Concesserunt, eciam, dicti Religiosi dicto Michaeli quod, si Osbertus Mugge, [pater] predicti Stephani, qui medietatem terre que ad dictum Stephanum pertinere debet de iure tenet, infra terminum etatis dicte Mariote, filie et heredis dicti Stephani, obierit, tota dicta terra, cum pertinenciis, ad custodiam dicti Michaelis deueniet, omni eo modo et condicione Tenenda quibus aliam tenet, et de iure tenere debet. Et, quoniam idem Osbertus quoddam pratum dictis Religiosis ad firmam tradidit, et, antequam dictus Stephanus de residuo dicte terre feofatus fuerit, ipais super hoc scriptum conuencionis ad certum terminum fecit, de quo quinque anni Restabant uenturi post Datam huius scripti, fol. 19b. ita sane quod quinquies de eodem prato emolumentum recipient, concesserunt quod, dicto termino quinque annorum elapso, medietas dicti prati ad dictum Michaellem nomine custodie deueniat. Dicti, vero, Religiosi dictas terras et tementa, omni eo modo quo predictum est, usque ad legitimam etatem dicte Mariote, dummodo vixerit ipsa, contra omnes homines et feminas Warantizare tenentur. In cuius rei testimonium hiis scriptis alternatim partes sigilla sua apposuerunt. Pro hac. autem, donacione et concessione mea dedit michi dictus Osbertus Corbyn viginti solidos sterlingorum in recognitionem. Unde ego et heredes mei predicto Osberto Corbyn, et heredibus suis, predictas terras, cum omnibus suis pertinentiis, contra omnes homines et feminas Warantizare tenemur imperpetuum. Quod, ut ratum et inconcussum imperpetuum permaneat, presenti carta et sigilli mei impressione confirmaui. Hiis testibus, — Rogero de Morville, Rogero de Erith, Eustachio clerico, Osberto Mugge, Stephano Mugge, Michæle Mugge, Joele de Bodetone, Ricardo Tyulla, Gervasio clerico, et aliis.

[I have thought it well to give this Fragment, so valuable as an unique record and so strangely saved from destruction, exactly as it stands, with all its quaint spelling and eccentricities in the use of capital letters. I have, indeed, extended the contracted forms and supplied the punctuation necessary to the comfort of the reader, and, in some instances, to the clear understanding of the text. But in all other respects it is a printed facsimile of the original. It may, perhaps, be as well to mention that where the letter "v" is used at the beginning of a word, and not the almost invariable "u," it has not been done per incuriam; the MS. has been closely followed throughout. The Index to the Fragment will be found at the end of the Volume.]

I have arranged the Index in divisions, for greater convenience of reference :—

- I. THE INDEX TO THE INSTITUTIONS ; that is, to the contents of Volume III of the Register. And this Index is subdivided into
 - (1) An Index to the Benefices in Devonshire included in the present Diocese of Exeter (which comprises the Archdeacons of Exeter, Totnes, and Barnstaple).
 - (2) An Index to the Benefices in Cornwall, the present Diocese of Truro. That Diocese is almost exactly conterminous with the antient Archdeaconry of Cornwall, which always included, and still includes, certain Parishes in Devonshire ; viz., North Petherwyn, Werrington, and St. Giles-in-the-Heath ; to which were added, at the time of the separation of the Diocese of Truro, the Devonshire Parishes of Broadwoodwidge and Virgin-stow, taken from the Archdeaconry of Totnes.
 - (3) An Index to the names of the Beneficed Clergy in Devonshire, with references to the Benefice, or Benefices, held by each of them.
 - (4) A similar Index for Cornwall.
 - (5) An Index to the names of the Patrons of the Churches of Devonshire.
 - (6) A similar Index for Cornwall.
- II. THE GENERAL INDEX, not including the references contained in Index I.
- III. AN INDEX TO THE FRAGMENT OF THE CARTULARY OF BUCKFAST ABBEY.

The Institutions were, for the most part, entered with great care and regularity ; and few, apparently, were omitted. Some of them, however, do not appear in their proper Register, but in the " Registrum Commune," viz., in cases when, Inquisition as to vacancy, the right of Presentation, etc., having been held, within the Rural Deanery, by the Bishop's Commissaries, they were empowered to institute, there and then, if they were satisfied on all points. The references to these Institutions are given within brackets. In the cases of omitted Entries the dates of the Institutions are, probably, irrecoverable ; but the names of the Incumbents instituted occur incidentally in, perhaps, every case ; and to these, which have been carefully collected from all parts of the Register, the references are given, in their proper places, also within brackets. It will be observed that a few such references are given between duly recorded Institutions, in cases of prolonged Incumbency, when, the name of the last Incumbent being omitted, it seemed helpful to shew that there had been no unrecorded change in the interval. Some footnotes have been added,—an unusual feature, it may be, in an Index. But they will be found of service to the Student, for the explanation of difficulties and the correction of mistakes.

It should be remembered that there were many Institutions, Sede vacante, after the deaths of Bishop Stapeldon and Bishop Berkeley, which were recorded in the Register of Adam Murimuthe (the Archbishop's Commissary), preserved at Lambeth. The Entries will be found in Part I. pp. 18—23, where they are arranged in alphabetical order.

¹ No Institution to Atherington is recorded. But it is mentioned here, incidentally, that Henry de Duelond, clerk, had been presented by the King, and that he asserted that he was Rector, and obtained Letters-Dimissory for all Orders, on condition that he could prove his title to be sufficient (2 Aug., 1355). We are told nothing more about him in this Register. But I find that Roger Boys was instituted by Bishop Brantingham, 22 Dec., 1375 ; the Benefice being void "per mortem Magistri Henrici Duelonde."—See Bishop Brantingham's Register, vol. ii, fol. 39.

² In the House of Sir Richard Cogan, Knt.

³ Patrons, the D. and C. of Exeter.

⁴ Institution of John Ulfe in March, 1349-50.

³ See Bishop Stapeldon's Register, page 197, and for "Chittlehampton" there, read "Okehampton." Mr. Wainwright has kindly directed my attention to this unaccountable slip. The Chapel at Brightley in Chittlehampton, referred to by Lysons, had no "Can-taria" as in the other case.

⁴ See Bishop Brantingham's Register, vol. ii, fol. 20.

⁶ I have entered these, both of them, under Cheriton-Fitzpaine, but (I think) erroneously. The MS. has only "Chiritone" for both Parishes; but a comparison of these Entries with "[461]" shews, almost with certainty, that they belong to Cheriton-Bishop.

¹ I find, however, in Bishop Brantingham's Register, vol. ii, fol. 9, that John Southdone was inst., 1 Nov., 1370, as successor to Sir John Aleyn, who was, probably, inst. during the last eight months of Bishop Grandisson's Episcopate, when the Register fails us.

² The Dedication of this Church has been long unknown. As far as I can see it is not recorded in the Episcopal Registers : Dr. Oliver gave up the search in despair, and Ecton simply omits it. Mr. Baigent, however, has, fortunately, found it in the Register of Robert de Braybroke, Bishop of London,—“Thomas Tredowar [see Bishop Stafford's Register, page 172], Rector Ecclesie Parochialis Sancti Petroci de Faryngdoue, Exoniensis

 Bishop was William, Bishop of Tournay, and the Ordination was celebrated in the Conventual Church of the Holy Trinity, within Aldgate, London, on Ember Saturday, 19 Feb., 1400-1.

⁴ There is here, unfortunately, nothing to shew whether Huish or North Huish is intended. Both Parishes are called, simply, Huish in the Registers; and there is always a difficulty in identification unless the Patron is named. On reconsideration,
 I think it must be North Huish, here;
 in which case the Entry in Bp.
Stapeldon's Register, p. 223, must be altered accordingly.

 "Wylemer"; on p. 509 "Wynemer."

¹ It will be seen that my footnote on this page is wrong, the result of the ambiguity of the MS. in giving the Rector's name. The dates shew that, if "Frellarde," Rector of Lifton, was a separate Incumbent, he must have succeeded Stouforde. But there is no record of any Institution between the latter and Robert de Helpestone, who was instituted 17 May, 1329;

and it is stated that the Church had been vacant since 24 April. The dates are so close together (9 March—24 April) that there is, really, no room for an intervening Rector: we must read "William Frellarde de Stouforde."

² This Benefice was annexed to the Archdeaconry of Barnstaple.

Brantingham's Register, vol. ii, fol.
23b). He was, doubtless, instituted within the last eight months of Bishop Grandisson's Episcopate, for which the Register fails us.

² I think we must read Devon for Cornwall here. There is some difficulty as to which of the Whitstones was intended.

⁴ Antiently called "Blistone." There is a gap here between William, who occurs as R. in 1308, and Ralph Chyvaler, who was inst. in 1329. The Benefice became vacant in 1314, but no Institutions are recorded in Bishop Stapeldon's Register. There were two. Henry de Exonia resigned in that year, and Robert de Carleton was presented by the King, 20 Feb., 1314-5.—Rot. Pat. 8 Edw. II, p. 2, m. 30. [F. J. L.]

¹ In the district known as "Roseland": it was called, at the time, "Ecclesia de Eglosros."

² The Church was dedicated to St. Uny, and it is frequently called "Ecclesia Sancti Eunini."

³ Generally called, in the Registers, "Poutone" (the name of the Manor), and sometimes "Nansent."

⁵ Called at this time "Ecclesia Sancti Clementis de Moreske"—the name of the Manor.—I have to acknowledge and correct an error in my Edition of Bishop Stafford's Register, to which my attention has been kindly directed by Mr. Thurstan Peter, of Redruth. That was my first Book; and I fear that I had not, then, fully realised the fact that "Lamoreke" was the antient name of Mevagissey. I must have taken it for a form of "la Moreske," i.e., St. Clement's, near Truro. I must, therefore, ask my friends to note on their copies that William Bealde, Thomas Nahillyn, and John Lamledyr were all Vicars of Mevagissey. The name of Walter Fraunces alone will, then, remain as Vicar of St. Clement's. Corresponding corrections should be noted on p. 17 (Bealde); p. 262 (Nahillyn); and p. 232 (Lamledyr).

⁶ Called, at this time, "Ecclesia de Lanow"—the name of the Manor.

⁷ The last mention of Ralph de Govely, who was inst. by Bp. Stapeldon.

⁹ Both St. Mellion and St. Mullion were called, at this time, "Sancti Melani," and need to be carefully distinguished.

¹⁰ It was called, at this time, "Ecclesia de Nansfonteyn."

EXETER, THE BISHOP OF (by Collation).—These Institutions are, of course, so very numerous that references to them would be, practically, useless—

a mere wilderness of figures! There will be no difficulty in finding them, if required, by simply examining page after page. I have however given the references to his Collations by lapse, which constitute a melancholy record of the deepest interest, as evidence of the desolation caused by the two great Pestilences, and for some time after each of them; the private Patrons being dead, or unable to find Clerks to accept their Benefices.

 Suffragan Bishops.—It appears that I am mistaken in giving this title to Bishops who had Dioceses of their own, merely because they worked, from time to time, in the Diocese of Exeter. I followed Bishop Stubbs, who, in his Episcopal Succession, Appendix V, gives a list of sixty-three Irish Bishops "who had permanent duty as Suffragans in England." It will be seen that Bishop Grandisson simply commissioned such Bishops to perform certain specified Episcopal acts in his stead. See page 888.
